Why the Fishes Die. Seth Green, talking of the extensive death of fish of late, says: "It is owing to nothing else than their tendency to move in great schools. There are sometimes more than a million of them moving right along together. As is the case with a large herd of buffalo, they sweep everything before them in their own line. The consequence is that the weaker ones fall away to the rear of the school, and of course there is hardly any food left there for tehm. Their only alternative, if they must stick together, is that those behind shall starve to death. I know that is the cause of the whole sale death of the alewives, because, in addition to the facts named, they are always very lean when found dead in pure water under such circumstances. But it's too bad; they make splendid But it's too bad; they make splendid food for salmon trout and other deep water fish, They themselves are of the herring or shad tribe, and besides being good food for larger fibres, they are very fair, when properly cooked, for table

A number of Englishmen of considerable means, who had been induced by Mr. Fall to come to North Carolina to prospect for settlements for themselves and others, spent two or three days in Raleigh, saw all the places of public interest, and expressed themselves as pleased with what they saw. They were provided with prospectors' tickets, and want to Ashaville to make that prospect for settlements for themselves and others, spent two or three days in Raleigh, saw all the places of public interest, and expressed themselves as pleased with what they saw. and went to Asheville to make that place headquarters for visiting the western section of the State.

Several gentlemen from the New England and Middle States have called at this office on the way to the Piedmont section and Western North Carolina to get all the information possible in regard to sheep raising in those sections. They have been supplied with what they wished as far as it was in our power to give it, and will view the mountain slopes and valleys carefully, and if pleased, will purchase lands with an eye to making sheep raising and wool manufacturing there profitable industries.

A good many prospectors come into the State who do not come to Raleigh on account of its being so far removed from the through lines of travel. We hear of the visits of these parties through letters from them and through our correspondents in various parts of the State.

attention.

Gold mines have been purchased by Northern and English capitalists in Rowan, Randolph, Cabarrus, Montgomery, Davidson, Nash, Stanly, Guilford, and Mecklenburg, who are re-opening them, working them with improved machinery, and with fair prospects. Gold mining in North Carolina has always been carried on by the crudest methods, and the application of new means for saving waste, economizing labor and thoroughly exposing the ore, cannot fail in a short while to make the gold deposits profitable to the workers.

A Bonanza of the Sea. New York Herald.

New York Herald.

It is one of the curious compensations of nature that while the northern lands, covered perpetually with an armor of ice and snow, are barren in life and vegetation, the frozen seas that surround them should hold treasures compared with which the waters that wash the tropics sink into utter insignificance. For hundreds of years we have heard of the pearl fisheries of the distant Indian seas, but, as our correspondence in another column this morning shows, they are of little value when set side by side with the seal bonanzas of the north. According to our correspondent's figures the fleet of steamers plying to and fro amid the Newfoundland icebergs find in that misty, sunless region a mine of wealth richer than anything in silver Nevada or golden California. During the sixty days of the present year bracketed between the middle of March and the middle of May the value of seals captured and killed in a relatively small area of the Newfoundland fisheries reached the extraordinary figures of nearly nine hundred thousand dollars. The number of these singular animals taken in that brief period was nearly half a fisheries, allowing only a certain num-ber of seals to be killed annually. In Newfoundland no restrictions whatever are imposed, and that its seal fisheries have not long ago been exhausted proves the wonderful fecundity of those animals.

that the Democratic party can be made available, with proper action on the part of the prohibitionists prior to the meeting of the next Democratic State convention—Attorney General Johnson, of Kansas, has given an opinion that the conscientious use of wine at the communion service is not ferbidden under the new prohibitory liquor law of that State, but that its sale for such purpose by either a licensed or an unlicensed druggist would be a clear violation of the law, and would make him liable to the same extent as if he sold liquor to be drank as a beverage.

For thirty years it has been a favorite with the people and a leader with the trade. The name "Coccaine" has become a valuable property. Burnett & Co. have established their sole right to its use in several suits at law, thus protecting the public and themselves from imposition.
