ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Several of the larger banking institu-tions of Canada have branches in Chicago and one or two other points in the United States. It has been ascertained that these have been evading the internal revenue tax, and the government will recover from them from one to two hundred thousand dollars.

The umbrella China tree, it is said, outside of Texas, is only found in Eastern Texas. The presence of the tree was occasioned no doubt by captive slaves who scattered on the "slave trail" the seeds of this beautiful tree which they had brought over to plant with secret rites of voudoo worship. It is stated that the special car, with Mrs. Garfield on board, had a most narrow escape from destruction while en route to Washington. The parallel rod on the side of the engine broke while making 250 revolutions a minute. It tore the side ties to pieces for two miles before the train could be stopped.

Had the engine left the track the car would have been splintered to kindling wood, and all on board killed. Three Presidents of the United States have died in office. Harrison and Taylor died natural deaths. Lincoln was assassinated. Three Vice-Presidents have become Presidents by the deaths of the Presidents with whom they were elected. These were John Tyler, elected with Wm. H. Harrison in 1840; Millard Fillmore, elected with Zachary Taylor in 1848; and Andrew Johnson, elected with Abraham Lincoln in 1864.

The Chinese are pouring into Australia at a rapid rate, and the prospect is that 20,000 at least will arrive at Sydney during the year unless a stop is put to the immigration. They are all poor and many of them penniless. The najority of Chinese merchants and resi dents in Sydney are averse to the wholesale importation of Chinese to the colony, such as is now taking place.

When three generations of one family hold in succession for over a century an office of trust the circumstance is worthy of note. Such has been the case in the Lewis family, as is brought to notice by the resignation of John T. Lewis as Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Hospital, which office he has held for forty years without compensation. In accepting his resignation the managers fitly pay a tribute to the faithfulness, probity and judicious care of the four members of the family who have held the position since 1780. In these days of change, self-seeking and too often malfeasance, such an instance is worthy of being held up to the notice of the world.

About Tom Marshall.

Donn Piatt in Washington Capital. I notice going the rounds of the press a most absurd account of how this dead a most absurd account of now this dead orator of Kentucky got up and got off his electric bursts of oratory; we are told that Tom wrote, rewrote, studied, trimmed and at last reduced to writing his oration, and then committing it to memory, and practicing it in the woods, sought an opportunity among his boon companions to let off the fire-works while pretending drupkenness.

companions to let off the fire-works while pretending drunkenness.

I knew Tom Marshall intimately; he was a man of genius, erratic, willful, lazy and indifferent. Had he possessed any particle of the application and design implied in this silly story he would have been recognized as a statesman instead of a brilliant loafer—an oratorical Bohemian, feared by his friends, admired by his enemies and beloved by everybody.

Had he possessed any particle of the application and design implied in this silly story he would have been recognized as a statesman instead of a brilliant loafer—an oratorical Bohemian, feared by his friends, admired by his enemies and beloved by everybody.

To those who knew this remarkable man personally, the thought of his pretending a drunk is to be relegated, as the Chinese Government Commission said of Christianity, to things which amuse. The story is enough to make a mule laugh. Pretend drunkenness! I have seen Tom in a hundred, and they were the most positive, solid himphand through drunks I ever knew.

Tom was quick to learn and slow to study. To a singular quickness of apprehension he added a suggestiveness that was at once original and true. He made these qualities tell in the most striking manner by a powerful memory and the happiest facility and felicity of utterance I ever heard. In conversation upon the stump and on the floor of the House sentences were struck out perfect in their construction. He never hesitated for a word or amended a phrase.

The lie to this silly story the papers in the requirement of the talent, all the virtue, all the talent, all the virtue, all the talent, all the inteligence, all the patriotism in the country is centred in the Republican party. Tom Platt, on one side of the transon, dallying with a daughter of Eve, and Woodin in stocking feet mounted on a step-ladder peeking from the other side, represent both factions of the party. So that upon either side of that pelaving mounted on a step-ladder peeking from the other side, represent both factions of the party. a phrase.

The lie to this silly story the papers are spreading is to be found in the fact that his happiest efforts were drawn out in debate when the preparation charged was utterly impossible. He was, in fact, more of a debater than an order.

was, in fact, more of a debater than an orator.

What a keen wit and delicious sense of humor the man possessed! Strange to say, this quality of humor was not accompanied, as generally is the case, with pathos. I have heard Tom, grand in his utterances, original, striking and witty, but I never heard him pathetic. In this he differed from his friend and rival, Tom Corwin, of Ohio. The last named could pass from laughter to tears, and from tears to the wildest fun, with the ease of a master. fun, with the ease of a master.

Throughout Kentucky there yet lives an admiration of Tom Marshall's bril-liant utterances, and stories are told to-way, was at one time pestmaster at Cumberland, day of his wit and quickness in re- | Maryland. There is one story so flustrative of this quality, where once another got the better of him, that I cannot refrain repeating it, although you are doubtless familiar with the oft-told tale.

Tom was engaged in the trial

Tom was engaged in the trial of a case somewhere in the interior of Kentucky, when a decision of the Judge struck him as so bad that he rose and "There never was such a ruling as that since Pontius Pilate presided on
