Rupture

WESLEY PHILLIPS'S CASE. DR. J. A. SHERMAN-Dear sir: I am happy to inform you that I am entirely cured of my large scrotal rupture. It is one year ago to-day that I received your treatment. I have tested the cure by going without the appliance. My business is that of a locomotive engineer. My rupture, as you will recall to your mind, was similar to Mr. Jordan's in your pamphlet of illustrations. will recall to your mind, was similar to Mr. Jordan's, in your pamphlet of illustrations.

I was ruptured in the year 1863, while in the army. I have tried spring and elastic trusses with great discomfort and injury, my rupture always growing worse. Finding I must get some relief or give up my business, I determined to try you as a last resort, and I must say that I found your treatment are complete success. My improvement and cure have, considering my terrible condition, surprised my friends as well as myself. During your treatment I have worked hard in my business, enjoying both safety and comfort, and have not lost improved. I will take pleasure in recommending the afflicted to you whenever I have an opportunity.

You may publish this letter for the benefit of humanity. My address is 211 East 44th street. With best wishes I remain yours respectfully, WESLEY PHILLIPS. New York City, October 25, 1880.

Its Belief and Cure as Certain as Day Follows Since the reduction of Dr. Sherman's terms, thousands are crowding upon him for treatment, gladly throwing away their gripping, irksome, dispiriting, and life-punishing trusses. His treatment for this affliction makes the patient comformation. table and safe in the performance of every kind of exercise or labor. It is a grand thing, and those tem; he imparts his secret to no one; it is applicable to all classes and cases, and under his reduced rate, within the reach of almost everyone.

Patients can receive treatment and leave for home the same day. Dr. SHERMAN'S book on rupture gives convincing proofs from professional gentlemen and others of his successful treatment. It is illustrated with photographic pictures or bad cases before cure, and is sent to those who send 10 cents. Principal office 251 Broadway, N. Y. Branch office, 43 Milk street, Boston. Hungarian Princess Dies in a San Francisco Tenement House-Chron-ic Alceholism the Cause.

The stony of the life of Josephine Ordz is one of the most romantic, and, withal, one of the saddest, that ever occurred outside of the two covers of a book of fiction. Josephine Ordz, in 1848, was young, beautiful and fascinating, a central figure in the brilliant society of Pesth, the Hungarian capital. Her father, Count Ordz, sent her, where she received an education that fitted her to shine with brilliancy in noble society. It was just at the time trian rule that Josephine became to die, enamored with Count Karaly, a Hungarian patriot. Count Ordz was loyal to Austria, and Josephine had to choose between father and lover. She chose the latter, and when Count Karaly was arrested as a rebel she did everything in her power to effect his release Karaly was sentenced to be hanged, but through the efforts of Josephine. who bribed an officer, he made his escape. They fled to France, were married and lived happily together until the husband died, leaving Josephine almost penniless. She was a splendid vocalist, and, changing her name to D'Orme Josephine, made her debut as in 1851. She made a brilliant success, and, in all the large capital cities of Europe where she made her appearance, her success was pronounced phenomenal. The Austrian authorites forgave her for her disloyalty, and Josephine returned to Pesth, the reigning contralto star of all Europe. In 1852 Josephine joined the famous Marilo Grisi opera troupe, which was under an engagement to Max Maretzek for an American tour, and, early in 1852, made her first appearance in New York in the old Academy of Music.

Favored with fame, fortune, a bean-tiful face and figure and a romantic history, she was received with great favor by the American people. Her New York debut was unparalleled in point of enthusiasm. She outshone Grisi; the audience went wild, some throwing rings, chains, watches and other valuables at her feet in their enthusiasm. She travelled all over the country repeating the remarkable success she achieved in New York whevever company with Fallini, the baritone. went to San Francisco, where she ap-Though her stage successes were won-derful, the individual conquests which she made were more so. All the weal-thy bachelors of the city knelt at her thy bachelors of the city knelt at her feet, and laid their riches at her disposal. At the end of a year she left San Francisco for Australia, but was ship-wrecked on a South Sea island inhabited by cannibals. All the other survivors were eaten, but she escaped through her wonderful singing, with which she pleased the chief. After a year's captivity she escaped and returned to San Francisco. Josephine then married George Evans, the musical director of the theatre, but, not living happily together, they were divorced. Josephine, during her career, became addicted to champagne drinking. After her divorce she began to go down hill. She would drink all kinds of liquor and get intoxicated. She was not so exclusive in choosing her company as formerly, and her beauty and voice began to disappear. While on a spree in Sacramento she was thrown out of a carriage and crippled for life. Her money was all gone, and she turned to those who had fallen at her turned to those who had fallen at her feet during the height of success for aid. They spurned her and drove iher from the rooms they once would have given thousands to have her grace. On the verge of despair, she would hobble on har crutches to the stage entrance of the theatre and beg of the actors for money. She next went to live with a disreputable man named Bower in a dirty three-story tenement house on Chestnut street. She would cook his meals, chop his wood and give all her money to him, for which she invariably received thanks by blows. At night in a Jackson-street salcon, one of the least resorts in the city. For this she received the pittance of $1.50 per night—all of which Bower took from her toget drunk upon. On the night following Decoration Day Josephine returned home after midnight from the beer salcon, and hobbled up stairs to the one room in which she and Bower lived. She called for him, but receiving no answer, proceeded to an adjoining apartment to see if he was there. Soon afterward the inmates of the house and cries of "Gold help me!" and then a heavy fall upon the floor by her neighbors. The body was taken to the city morgue, where it lay inghastly nakedness until an autopsy was held. Her death was reported to have been caused by "chronic sleoholism," but there were three tearlible marks upon the head that could have been the means of death. The remains were buried in the Potter's Field, with no stone or tablet to mark the last resting place of poor Josephine Ordz.

Boston Herald. Mr. Eddy, the veteran patent solicitor of Boston, is a regular encyclopedia of incidents referring to inventors. He tells of a man named Hurd, who belonged in Stoneham, who realized $30,000 and gaye to the world one of the most valuable inventions ever produced—all the result of only about half an hour's thought. His invention was the machine now everywhere used for expectations.

A case is reported in the New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal (1852) in which a boy 7 years of age recovered from a wound in the liver, which seems to have been far more serious than the one inflicted upon the Guiteau. A gun was accidentally discharged, which sent a load of large shot into this boy's liver, some of the pellets passing clear through the right lobe. hour's thought. His invention was the machine now everywhere used for extracting molasses from sugar. When the idea occurred to him he sketched it down and gave it to Mr. Eddy and authorized him to take out a patent. Returning home he forgot all about the matter and applied himself to other affairs. Subsequently a gentleman engaged in the sugar business saw the invention in Mr. Eddy's office and at once appreciated its value. The solicitor was instructed to purchase the patent, which he supposed he could do for a moderate sum. The first offer of $1,000 was refused, and not until the figure of $30,000 was reached did Mr. Hurd surrender. The machine is used in all the sugar countries of the world. Mr. Robertson, who was the American Consul at the Hague, and the Aspinwalls of New York, made millions out of the invention.

Charged, which sent a load of large shot into this boy's liver, some of the pellets passing clear through the right lobe. Dr. J. C. Massie, of Houston, Texas, (who reported the case,) was called in on the fourth day after the accident, when the wound was gangreneus. After telling the boy's parents that there was not much chance for his recovery. Dr. Massie cut out more than the half of the right lobe of the liver, which had become gangrenous. Contrary to expectation, the boy made a speedy recovery.

A Comical Outlaw. Denver (C. L.) Inter Ocean,

A good story, with a touch of the pathetic in it, is told regarding the notorious outlaw of New-Mexico, Allison, and a distinguished editor now of this State. The latter went at one time to Trinidad and became the editor of a small daily publication at that place called the Enterprise. About that time Allison had been raiding the saloons of Trinidad. Feeling in an unusually happy mood one morning the editor took up his pen and dashed off the following brilliant paragraph: "We have a curiosity to see this pest Allison—this monster in human form, from whom men run and hide."

On the next day about 9 o'clock the editor sat in his sanctum with his feet cocked back and a ripple of amusement breaking over his handsome visage as he pursued the racy productions of his fertile brain in the columns of the Enterprise. A stranger built on an unusually tall frame sunddenly threw open the door, and striding into the room, announced himself as follows: "My name is Allison—Clay Allison. Is Editor Dill in?"

The man in the chair hesitated a moment and then answered, "No, sir-Dill is still in bed. My mame is Smith. It is of this Allison that the story is told regarding the killing of a gambler named Chubb at Cimarron, New Mexico. Court was in session when the murder was committed, and the Sheriff took Allison immediately before the Judge. When Allison came to the front he suddenly whipped out a big navy revolver, and placing it before him on the table, said, "Judge, don't make no mistake! I want justice done, and propose to hold this court respon-

"Sheriff, disarm the prisoner," said the judge. "Your Honor, I beg to be excused, replied the sheriff. "Summon a posse," ordered the judge. "I will kill the first man that moves," exclaimed Allison. "This court stands adjourned for the present term," was the only further order of the court, and the prisoner and the court moved out of the building from opposite doors.
