The Charlotte Observer.

TUESDAY, JULY 19, 1881.

Heart, died on the 13th August, 1855, in the 36th year of his age. He was an able editor and a good man. Universal suffrage was one of his favorite topics. The county court of Orange, the town government, all the churches in the town, and the academies and benevolent institutions put on the hall to his memory on the 13th of August, 1855.

For many years the Register, the Minerva, and the Star, were the only papers at the seat of government. When quite a youth William Boylan re- moved from Plusham, New Jersey, to his mother's brother, Abraham Hodges, first editor of the Register, then State printer at Halifax. (Abraham Hodges during the revolutionary war conducted the Whig press of Salem, Mass., and was, just before the close of the war, employed by Washington's traveling press, while the army was stationed at Valley Forge. At Mr. Hodges' death he left his press and other property to Mr. Boylan, who followed him to Raleigh, and there, before the close of the war, he was employed by Washington's traveling press, while the army was stationed at Valley Forge. At Mr. Hodges' death he left his press and other property to Mr. Boylan, who followed him to Raleigh, and there, before the close of the war, he was employed by Washington's traveling press, while the army was stationed at Valley Forge.

Mr. White also refers in very kind terms to Mr. Bingham, who still lives in the city of Raleigh, and to his daughter, Mrs. Judge F. P. Brainerd of Statesville. And of our brother Bruner, he says: "The Carolina Watchman still exists and grows from year to year. It is an excellent man and prudent journalist, J. J. Bruner."

It is related that Hon. B. F. Moore once sought the publication of a Whig article in the Free Press. Mr. Howard declined to do so, and Mr. Moore exclaimed, "What do you mean, Mr. Howard, by refusing to publish this article?" "I'll change it," replied Mr. Howard, and the next issue was the Tarborough Press.

Hon. Philo White, LL. D. was born in Whitesboro, New York, June 22d, 1799. After spending a few years in Utica, he removed to North Carolina, and in 1826 settled in Salisbury, and became the editor of the Western Carolinian. In 1830 he was appointed navy agent for the Pacific station. Returning home on the 14th of November, 1834, he established the Western Carolinian in Raleigh, and was elected State printer. At that time the State printer received a salary of $800 per year, which covered everything—paper, printing, and postage. In 1836 he disposed of the Standard to Thomas Loring, and was for seven years purser in the navy. Afterwards he removed to Wisconsin, and held many important offices in that Territory and State. He was one of the founders of Racine City and the author of the system of plank roads. In 1836 Racine College conferred on him the honorary degree of doctor of laws. In 1849 he was consul at Hamburg, Germany, and in 1853 he was United States minister to the Republic of Ecuador. In 1859 he turned to his native place, Whitesboro, and in 1860 settled in Salisbury, and became the editor of the Western Carolinian. In 1860 he was appointed navy agent for the Pacific station. Among the oldest editors in the State is C. N. Evans, Esq., of the Milton Chronicle. Mr. Evans was born in Norfolk county, Virginia, in 1812. He was worked as a journeyman in Columbia, S. C., in Raleigh, with Philo White, in Richmond, Va., in Hillsborough, with Dennis Heath, and elsewhere, and was once on the eve of going to Buenos Aires to work on a paper half English and half Spanish, but was deterred by a fever. His first connection with the press as editor was with the Greensboro Patriot. William Swain, long since deceased, a brilliant writer, was the founder of the Patriot. In 1837 the paper was sold, Mr. Evans became the proprietor. He conducted the paper several years, and sold to Lyndon Swain and M. S. Sherman. The first paper in Milton was published by Mr. Evans in 1818. He was succeeded by Ben. J. Cary, he by John Campbell, Jr., who died in Weldon a few years since. Mr. Kenyon succeeded Mr. Campbell, and the former, having failed in 1831, Nathaniel J. Palmer, Esq., established the Milton Spectator. Mr. Palmer died prematurely, from an accident, many years ago, at his residence, Cherry Hill, near Milton. He was a worthy and useful man. He was a native of Orange, a younger brother of John C. Palmer, Esq., of Raleigh, the latter of whom is a brother-in-law of Philo White.

In 1841 Mr. Evans rented the old Spectator office, and began the publication of the Milton Chronicle. At the close of the war the Chronicle stopped, and Mr. Evans published for two years, a paper in Danville, Va. Next, with his son, Capt. T. C. Evans, he published the Hillsboro Recorder for two years, and then sold to John D. Cameron. Next and last, in 1873 he revived the Chronicle, and now, in his 69th year, he is still conducting the paper he established forty years ago. Mr. Evans, though by no means of a romantic person, has established a reputation for his romantic life. He is a capital editor. Like Xavier Martin, he sets up much of his editorial in his composing stick, without stopping to write it out. "Charley Evans," as he is called by his friends, could not do a dishonest thing if he were to try. It is the wish of the whole press of the State, whether he belongs to this association or not, that his last days may be his best days, and that he may long be spared to his family, his readers and his friends.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the fretting pain of cutting teeth? If so, get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it. There is not a mother on earth who has not used it, and who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescribed remedy of all the best physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere, 25 cents a bottle.
