In the mint all the counting is and feel that they can put the coinage done by weight and measure. Piles of and feel that they can put the coinage question off to some future day. The matter, however, has been the subject of discussion in financial and commer-cial circles in Great Britain, and a strong sentiment has been found in favor of bi-metalism."

"With regard to Germany," continued Mr. Howe, "her representatives pointed to the action taken by her in 1873 in adopting the single gold standard, and said they did not see any necessity for impeaching the propriety of that move. Still they are not opposed to silver, and are only waiting for England. If the latter country comes to adopt the double standard they will join with her willingly and gladly."

Mr. Howe stated further that the gold coin held in reserve by the Bank of France was even less than one-third of the entire metallic reserve, as had been stated; also that the prospects of Italy's placing her new loan, on which she proposed to resume specie payments, were good. As to the probability of a general return of the nations to the double or bi-metallic standard, Mr. Howe expressed himself very hopeful. His attention being called to an opinion expressed soon after the last monetary conference, by one of the United States should not wait for other nations to flowed by Lake Okeechobee, and which take the initiative in the matter of a return to the double standard, he said:

Alluding to what it calls a temperance "spasm" in the South, the Baltimore Gazette says: "This development of morals is quite striking in view of the long prevalent slander circulated by Northern emissaries that 'whiskey is the mother's milk of all Southerners.' In Mississippi, Georgia and other Southern States the prohibition movement has assumed such solid and earnest shape that a mint julep will probably soon be classed among the lost

The wedding ring, which has been a symbol of marital union for countless centuries, is going out of fashion in the West, it is said, and for a curious reason. In divorce cases it is impossible to determine to whom the ring belongs, and, to prevent quarrels and differences of this kind, the fashion of doing without any ring at all has been adopted-and with success.

The late Dean Stanley wrote a paper, not long ago, by request, for Scribner's Magazine. The result is a solemn lesson to persons who perpetrate illegible writing. The magazine couldn't use the manuscript, for the reason that none of the editors or proof-readers could decipher it. The paper is to be returned to England, to see if anybody there can read it.

A COLONY FOR FLORIDA.

Settlers Buying Land as Low as $1.25 Per Acre.

A colony of 250 families has been formed in New York to start in September for Florida, and settle upon the land recently purchased by Mr. Hamilton Disston, of Philadelphia. The company announces that no family will be sent there unless it owns $1,000 clear. The first colony will be located in Orange county, near Orlando, the county seat, and in the vicinity of Lake Conway, upon twenty, forty and eightyacre farms, at prices ranging from $1.25 to $5 per acre. A land commissioner has been appointed in New York, agencies have been established in Europe, and arrangements made to immediately settle the four million acres purchased from the State. This land simply needs developing. It is Commissioners, that the United States commissioners, that the United States of land which are periodically overpany. The company to lower the waters of Lake Okeechobee, and to open up inland communication for 330 miles along the Eastern stretch of the Florida peninsula is "the Atlantic and Gulf Coast Canal and Okeechobee Land Company." A large percentage of the stock in the latter enterprise has been already subscribed.

Stanton and Greeley.

Philadelphia Times. Publication of the late Secretary Stanton's extraordinary telegrams to arrest Greeley draws from the Chicago Tribune some reminiscences that serve to show the animus of the affair. According to this statement it was Stanton who contributed the memorable "On to Richmond" articles, which hastened the battle of Bull Run before the military preparations were sufficiently matured. Greeley was denounced all over the country for the articles, though he never saw them until they appeared in the editorial columns. Charles A. Dana was the managing editor and had really received carte blanche from the stockholders, who were dissatisfied with Greeley's peace policy, to conduct the paper. When the reaction came these meddlesome marplots forced Dana's retirement. He was proffered a position in the War Department in 1862, when Stanton was made Secretary, and thence promoted to be Assistant Secretary. Dana was no friend to Greeley, who had weakly yielded to the men that he habitually alluded to as blockheads, and it may be taken for granted that Greeley had no love for Stanton or his assistant. From this mutual antagonism Stanton's mind
