PROHIBITION AT CONCORD.

BATTLE OF ARGUMENT JOINED. Mr. Luther Benson, the Prehibition Champion, Refused a Division of Time With "My Son Oliver," Speaks in the Court House to an Immense Crowd-Enthusiasm of the Prohibitionists.

To the Editor of The Observer.

On Thursday afternoon after Hon. Oliver H. Dockery reached Concord, he was called upon by a committee of gentlemen from the prohibitionists and asked if he would divide time and have a joint discussion at the meeting advertised at Concord for yesterday. He said yes, he would do so reserving for himself the last speech, and would discuss the prohibition subject with any one. Upon being asked to put that in writing he declined, saying he would stand to it. The committee telegraphed to Luther Benson at Charlotte asking him to meet Dockery and he agreed to do so.

Yesterday morning he arrived at Concord and was informed that the arrangements for his speaking was made, Dockery to speak one hour, then Benson one hour and Dockery to reply in a short speech. Half an hour after Luther Benson reached Concord he was informed that Dockery declined to hold to his agreement and would not divide time. The committee again went to see Dockery, but were told that no division would be allowed.

Under these circumstances it was determined to hold a prohibition meeting as soon as Dockery concluded and to hold it at the court house. Dockery being his speech the prohibitionists called on two of the "wet" executive commit-tee and offered them one hundred dollars to allow Benson to speak just sixty minutes at their meeting—but that was refused. A few minutes after Dockery finished, the court house bell rang and the crowd who had listened to Dockery left the grove en masse, wet and dry, white and black and proceeded to the court house where they found fully as large a number of people al-ready assembled to hear Luther Benson. The court house was filled to overflowing-seats and aisles, and when Luther Benson entered he was received with a grand demonstration of applause. There was a large attendance son held his audience spell-bound. He began his address by stating the cir-cumstances under which he was there

He followed the arguments of Dockery step by s of some kind will take place in their wined them so or the city w wiped them so entirely out of existence that one felt ashamed to have thought them a semblance of argument. The effect upon the colored people was great—and as much of the speech was directed to them especially, it told in a marked degree for the cause of prohibition. The meeting was a grand success. Dockery was afraid to meet Benson, but the manner of showinglit and the effort to prevent the colored people from hearing Benson was an impetus at Concord yesterday that will increase and gather new strength and vigor from now until next Thurs-

This exhibition was named the International Cotton Exposition, because nothing more was contemplated than a Fair for illustrating every detail of the cotton industry. Soon after the Exposition company organized the executive managers decided to admit other textiles, and later, yielding to an almost universal demand they concluded to open their doors to all industries. Hence the Exposition is no longer confined to that one staple, nor to the several textile interests, but it comprises every industry, in which civilized men

In addition, a department of public comfort has been organized, which is assured of the general co-operation of the citizens of Atlanta in providing comfortable entertainment for this multitude, so that from twenty to thirty thousand visitors can be cared for daily. An Unwholesome Drink. An exchange says: As usually made, cold tea is an unwholesome drink. The tea is made in the tea-pot, as usual, and then cooled therein, and perhaps allowed to stand in the tea-pot for many hours before being drank; by this pro-cess the tannin of the tea leaves is extracted and the result is a strong decoction of tannin. To make it proper-ly, the tea should be drawn the usual length of time, say five minutes for green tea, eight minutes for Oolong tea and fifteen minutes for English breakfast; then pour it off into a pitcher or other suitable vessel, allow it to become cool; then place it in the ice-chest.

Race After a Thief.

The clerks and merchants came out of their stores with one accord about dusk yesterday evening to see a longlegged policeman chase the young colored imp, Tom Orr, out of town. Tom, who is universally pronounced to be the greatest nuisance the city has ever produced, having become emboldened by his uniform immunities from the legal consequences of successive and numerous offenses of which he has been the perpetrator, pursued of late a systematic course of petty pilfering about the stores and loud-mouthed impudence generally, until he became unbearable. While he was engaged in one of these depredations yesterday evening the policeman mentioned above was called in for the purpose of making his arrest, but Tom, who is as quick as a squirrel and slippery as an eel, dodged under his outstretched arm and sped down Trade street while the policeman gave chase. It is admitted, however, that if he is given a fair start no one can catch him and surprise was consequently forestalled when it was found that the latter had his labor for his pains. ---

Public Speaking.

Please annnounce that the distinguished gentlemen, Hons. F. E. Shober. and Chas. Price, will address the citizens of Mecklenburg, in this city to-day, upon the all-absorbing topic of the day. The last sentence is correct, but the information of THE OBSERVER was obtained from Prof. J. F. Lattimer, of Davidson College, and we know him too well to believe that he would tell us what is not correct. We supposed then and suppose now that he had been in communication with Col. Martin, although that gentleman is absent, and was authorized to speak for him. The News and Observer will find that we are correct.

Fairbanks' Scales in Australia. The Australian correspondent of the "American Mail and Export Journal," in speaking of the exhibits of American manufacturers at the Melbourne International Exhibition, under date of April 20th, writes as follows:

"Under the heading of 'Office-Fittings and Stationery," we find the following high compliment paid to a gold medalist of many an international exhibition. The chairman of the jury, in his report, tells the commissioners that Fairbanks & Co., St. Johnsbury, Vt., and New York, United States, exhibited postal letter balances, with both double and single beam, and possessing that beauty and accuracy of finish for which this description of goods from the United States is so justly famed. A first order of merit is awarded them. This is a fourth First Degree of Merit given to Fairbanks & Co. at the Melbourne International Exhibition, and surely a gold medal will follow. The exhibitors obtained the highest award in London in 1851, New York in 1858, Paris in 1867, Vienna in 1873, Santiago in 1875, Philadelphia in 1876, Sydney in 1877, Paris in 1878, and at the Sydney International Exhibition in 1880, in competition with the manufacturers of the United States and from all nations of the world, a special award above all others was given to Fairbanks' Scales."

News has just been received that a gold medal has been awarded, as predicted, to Fairbanks & Co., the only one awarded any scale manufacturer from the United States.
