HOME PENCILINGS.

Summer steps down and out to-

The first dance of the season will take place at the Pleasure Club rooms this evening. Mrs. Rachel C. Alexander, aged 84, a very respectable old lady, died at the poor house Monday. House moving is down to a fine point in Charlotte. They move them now, chimneys and all.

Raffling is the rage. A breech-loader and another bicycle were on the cast of the dice last night.

The day express from the north was about 20 minutes behind time yesterday, the first time in many days it has not been on time, sharp. Ann Hawshaw, the crazy colored woman who escaped from the poor house Saturday, a week ago, returned on the following Wednesday. The venire in the Farrington case will be summoned for Thursday, at noon, and the taking of evidence will probably begin Friday morning. We are indebted to C. M. S., who sends us an account of the killing of Abernethy by Blalock, but we had al- mor'n three years.' ready received the facts through another source. Mr. Geo. E. Pitcher is prosecuting work on the mine he has opened near the Rudisill with vigor and, it is learned with pleasure, success. His shaft is about 80 feet deep now.

Judge Ashe yesterday in Mon-roe, on a hearing on writ of habeas cor-pus admitted S. M. Secrest, the slayer of Washington Helms, an account of which appeared in The Observer several days ago, to bail in the sum of

The engagement of the Templeton troupe at the Charlotte Opera house for the night of the 12th of September has been changed to the night of the 8th when Fay Templeton gives us, 'Betti-na" in the "Mascot." This is the first of the season.

Capt. Kirkland's Condition.

It is learned with much regret that Capt. S. S. Kirkland, who some time ago had his leg broken while prospecting for the survey of the Spartanburg and Rutherford Railroad, is threatened with pyæmia from the wounds caused by the fractured pieces of bone entering the flesh of the leg. Capt. Kirkland is in Lincolnton.

The Cutting Scrape, At the mayor's court yesterday morning Joseph Prim was fined $2.50 and costs for an affray with Chas. Moss. The latter was bound over for his appearance at court in the sum of $25 for using a knife on Prim, although he claims, and it is said Prim now believes, that Moss did not cut him. Prim is, it is learned with pleasure, not at all seriously hurt.

The Methodist Library Association. The third weekly meeting of the Tryon Street Methodist Episcopal church Literary Association took place last night in the basement of that church. Several new members were church. Several new members were admitted and a proposition to fit up a library in the basement of the church was favorably discussed. The regular exercises included the reading of selections from Hiawatha, by Miss Maggie Mayer; an essay by Miss Lizzie Gray, on the poetry of William Cullen Bryant, and one from Mr. Benjamin, on music, All three were well rendered. All three were well rendered.

-Mr. F. H. Busbee, of Raleigh, was in the city yesterday, -Mr. Burgess Nicholls has returned from the North where he has been to lay in a stock of furniture for his establishment in this city.

—Capt. A. D. Cowles, of the Iredell

Blues, is down from Statesville to shake hands with his many friends in

-Messrs. Covington and Adams, of the Monroe bar, arrived in the city yesterday, and will appear to-day in the Robt. Jones homicide case.

The Observer Trade Review.

OBSERVER reporters will to-day call on the business men of the city for facts for the annual trade review which the paper gives its patrons on the 1st of September, the close of the cotton year. General and detailed statements of business will be received with thanks and carefully prepared for publication.

It is thought that this review serves not only to advertise the business of the city, but by the collation not alone of the encouraging incidents of our trade but also of those wherein our failures are apparent, gives a more intelligent. are apparent, gives a more intelligent direction to the efforts of all to maintain a substantial prosperity.

How to Find the Comet.

The new comet, which is known as Schaeberie's comet, or Comet C, may be found in the northwest heavens about 9 p. m., by the aid of an imaginary line drawn through the pointers or lowest stars in the dipper, and prolonged in a southern direction—that is, in a direction opposite to that in which the Polon tion opposite to that in which the Polar Star would be reached. The comet will be found about 10 degrees above the horizon. It will be remembered that, roughly, a degree is about the apparent diameter of the full moon. It is about three degrees west of a line drawn through the pointers and ten degrees above the horizon. The tail can be seen from the unlighted parts of the city, fan-like in shape, and pointing towards a spot not far distant from the North Star.

Redmend's Sentence.

The Greenville News gives a somewhat different statement of the sentence of Redmond than the rumor which reached the city day before yesterday. The News says the sentence of the court was:

"For the 'Gary raid,' three years imprisonment, and a fine of $500, For the 'Barton raid' the same. For each of the eight Revenue cases, six months imprisonment. Redmond's countenance never changed, except that it became a little more 'Is that as you expected, Major?' a

In addition to these Mr. Sanders re-ports that Haverly's Mastodons will visit us some time during the season.
Other first-rate companies, among them a "Hazel Kirke" troupe, will be here, although they have not yet made their dates. Mr. Sanders confidently predicts a more successful season than we have ever had.

The Abernethy-Blaleck Hemicide. The Catawba Mercury gives the following particulars of the Abernethy-Blalock homicide a short account of which appeared in yesterday's OBSER-

It appears that Abernethy and Bla-lock were both under the influence of liquor. Their supply being exhausted, and Abernethy wishing to replenish, tried to hire Blalock's mule to ride after the desired article. Blalock's price for the use of the mule being more than Abernethy wished to pay, a dispute arose between them. Abernethy finally agreed to pay the price, but Blalock, fearing his mule would be ridden too rapidly refused to let him go. den too rapidly, refused to let him go.

A by-stander then suggested that he would ride Blalock's mule and go with Abernethy and would ride slowly, and he (Abernethy) would not leave him.

A. then made slight remarks about B's mule. B. then raplied "D—n you you mule. B. then replied, "D—n you, you have not got the mule yet," A. then replied with an oath, "D—n your old mule, take him, I can get other stock to ride." He then stepped off a few paces from B.—B. then made some reply to A. whereupon he turned towards B. and they advanced fowards and com-A. whereupon he turned towards B. and they advanced towards, and commenced pushing each other. By-standers say that A. struck B. twice, and perhaps three times, and about the time of the second lick, they heard something like the opening of a knife, and then Blalock made several thrusts in the direction of Abernethy, and finally stabbed him in the left breast. A. exclaimed, "I am ruined, he has cut me to the heart. He then ran about me to the heart. He then ran about thirty yards, falling and crying, "O,

Lord, O. Lord."

After the deed was committed, Blalock rode several miles to a relative's house and went to bed, and was there arrested, brought to the campus, tried before Justices of the Peace, S. C. Brown, A. D. Shuford and W. C. Cald-well and committed to jail. The prisoner, seeming to realize for the first time the helnousness of the crime, wept bitterly.

A PLEA FOR A MONUMENT.

Let It be One Which, While It Commemorates the Dead, Gives Rest to the Weary.

To the Editor of The Observer: Ever since the year 1865, when the utter failure of the Southern States to establish their separate nationality and maintain their independence became a recognized and undisputed fact, it has been the desire of the Southern people to raise enduring memorials to the brave men who fell in that vain attempt. To the women of the South this mournful pleasure became a special duty, and they have regarded it a proud privilege to honor the memory of the braves of the Lost Cause. We who lived in those stirring times and can recall the ardent enthusiasm of the early days of the war, when the regiments marched gaily away with bands and banners, and the stern resomaining uncalled for in the postoffice at Charlotte, N. C., for the week ending law and the call for senior reserves and junior reserves, all told their own sad story; who can remember with what Wade Bell, Jane Bonner, J. B. Boiles, unanimous eagerness we all rushed Mrs. Neeley Brown, Josephine Bergan, pell mell, running over each other, up Joe Johnston, to his wife just after the fight at Bennettsville: "My old soldiers did nobly; I am safe and well; thank to mend our ways.

God for me." We who treasure up such And now suppose recollections, need no monumental brass, no anniversaries to keep our he-roes in mind, but we are passing away and would preserve for our children tokens and memorials of those men and those days. Every city, town and villase in the South has its Confederate situation?" cemetery; many of them have a beautiful and appropriate monument to those who sleep beneath its shadow. A Confederate monument has been talkone of the old signers of the declaration, and many are the plans that have been proposed for its design, and the ways and means that have been discussed for its execution. But of all plans that have been thought of, what methat have been thought of, what memorial can be more appropriate, more enduring, more constantly before the people than a large and handsome park. Such a park ought to be near enough to the town to be easily reached by pedge. the town to be easily reached by pedesthe town to be easily reached by pedestrians. It should be made as beautiful and attractive as taste can devise or art execute, with trees, with smooth turf and handsome walks and drives, with a plat of ground for military page. which he can be released from them by swearing to his insolvency. The total term of imprisonment in his sentence is ten years, which by good conduct can be reduced to nine. There will be a strong movement to obtain a pardon, and Redmond is very confident of obtaining it, or a commutation to two or three years imprisonment.

Takes and another for games. It should have a music stand, pavilions for refreshments and pleasant resting places all about; and should also have a garden of ever-blooming flowers, and water in the form of streams, fountains and lakes. Here the wearied laborer and tired shopkeeper might find rest, the factory operatives relief from the stream of the factory operatives relief from the should have a music stand, pavilions for refreshments and pavilion taining it, or a commutation to two or three years imprisonment.

The graceful bycycle riders would here have a good opportunity of indulging in their delightful exercise without danger of "taking a header," and the children have an ample play-ground for their sports. The stream of water spanned here and there by picturesque bridges, here and there by picturesque bridges, and the lake would afford our young people a new and beautiful exercise in rowing, while in winter they would be alive with ringing steel and merry voices of innumerable skaters. Each particularly attractive spot, the lake, the bridges, the little boys might hear the name of well-known hero. As for

> A piece of ground, possessing the necessary conditions of accessibility, variety and available water, can be found at the west end of Trade street, on the north side. The entrance to the park, which ought to be highly ornate, bearing an inscription to the memory of the Confederate dead of Mecklenburg coun-ty, would be in sight of the Union Depot that is to be built at the Trade street station of the Richmond & Dan-uille Railroad, and also in full view of the windows and galleries of the new hotel that will eventually be erected on the knoll beyond the depot. A plan of such a park has been carefully drawn, and was, I think, presented to the ladies at the last meeting of their monumen-tal association. It is the work of Mrs. James Irwin, who all her life has been a student and an interpreter of the

Besides this, large general park, it would be wise for our city fathers to to buy vacant squares here and there and beautify them and make them agreeable resorts for their respective neighborhoods. There is one just ready for their hands, in the first ward, where the academy now stands. I believe the town owns nearly the whole square already. Why not, in this way utilize the neglected fair grounds; that is if all hope is abandanced of ever using those hope is abandoned of ever using those grounds again for their original purpose. As to the money for these desirable improvements, the economists of this city are surely wise enough to devise some means by which the vast sums that are annually spent in improper, injurious and wicked indulgencies may be diverted into channels of legitimate enjoyment and unquestionable may be diverted into channels of legitle mate enjoyment and unquestionable advantage. Large hearted, public spirited capitalists would find such an outlay self-rewarding in many ways besides the enhanced value of property, while the henefit to the residents of beautiful church property? For a long while it lay open. Political speeches were made in its solemn shade, fairs and frolics held under the very windows. At last a fence was built and walks laid out, walks that were muddy and sloppy in winter, and shoe-mouth deep in dust in summer, and are becoming just now what they ought to have been ten years ago, good, firm walks. Latterly they have built a manse on the highest, prettiest part of the grounds and now seem content. The grass, socalled, is the coarsest, commonest kind of stuff, drying off in winter and brown in summer, and only green in the spring when even a weed is a thing off heauty. Along the fences, neglected sprouts make a ragged hedge, and the debris of a storm in May lay on the ground till August. The money spent in killing those glorious old oaks, would go far towards making the grass like velvet, towards making the grass like velvet, planting trees and evergreens wherever needed, edging the walks with flowers and making a hedge of blooming roses or evergreens all along the fence.

Perhaps the most immediate and imperative necessity in Charlotte is good pavements and good streets, the same merging into good country roads as they leave the town. I am aware I am in deep water when I touch a subject that has baffled the wisdom of aldermen, county commissioners, grangers, legislators and all the wiseacres of both town and country. It is true, wonders have been done, with this clay hill, whereon wagons mired right in the public streets, and the mud of Mecklenburg was a potent argument in making Gen. Sherman give us the go-by, but much remains to be accomplished before the promenaders and the bicyclers, the baby carriages and pony phaetons the baby carriages and pony phaetons can conveniently reach the city parks and pleasure grounds. Sometimes when many and heavy tasks loom up before us, we waste time trying to decide what to do first. May I suggest to the powers that be, that they can greatly accommodate a large number of the citizens of Charlotte, if they will make a good stone crossing on Church street, between the court house corner and the southern gate of the First Presbyterian church yard, not the stepping stone abomination, if you please, which is on-ly a little more endurable than bottomless mud, but a suitable crossing for a walk that is used so constantly. And pardon me if I also suggest that some improvement might be made in that most remarkable, nondescript pavements in front of Elias & Cohen's and other business houses in that vicinity, and if the street commissioners will take a promenade down Tryon street they will find in front of Goode's Na-Emma Gibson, William Hunter, E.ebecca Henderson, Susan Hemphill,
