A Scone Between the Shows.

Quite a sensation was caused at the circus, Wednesday night, by the attack of one soiled dove upon another. They were both quite handsome and well dressed. They were blonde and brunette, and the blonde was the aggressor. She stepped up before the brunette just after the morning show, while the audience were readjusting for the concert, drew back her jewelled hand and the report of the opened palm as it smote the rosy opened palm as it smote the rosy cheek of the brunette with all the force which a jealous woman could exert, rang through the canvas like a thousand kisses in one. A CHILD MURDERED

FOR ONE DOLLAR AND A HALF

Found in a Field Within Three Hundred Yards of the Rusiest Place in Town, With Its Skull Split to the Brain-An Arrest on Suspicion.

Yesterday about noon two little boys, Johnny Zimmerman and Coot Ross came running and crying to Mrs. Zimmerman, the mother of the first named. merman, the mother of the first named. With great excitement and childish grief they said that while shooting birds with their gum slings in a field just beyond the Air-Line depot, near which they live, they had seen a little negro boy lying dead across a path with his skull split open. They had not gone quite up to the body but had run hurriedly home to tell the tale. riedly home to tell the tale.

It was true. The news spread quick-ly and a crowd gathered rapidly. A reporter of THE OBSERVER reached the spot about 12:30.

WEEPING AROUND THE BODY.

The child lay as his murderers had left him. His legs were stretched across a path just entering a thin strip of young pines. A ghastly wound just above the right ear had broken the skull from temple to temple, and another sharper wound across the brow had pierced nearly to the brain. The had pierced nearly to the brain. The small brown fists of the poor little fellow were closed tightly, but the arms lay easily about the head as if he slept. On one side lay the rusty and dull, but heavy blade of a hay cutter. On the back of it was a splotch of blood and on the edge another telling the story of the wounds. On the other side of the body lay the body, black received. the body lay the boy's black wool hat covered with drying spots of blood. One of the pockets of the child's pants was turned wrong side out and hung to the ground. The mother was there and her cries were pitiful to the last degree. She wrung her hands and bowed her body, and repeated continually in the wildest grief: "They done killed dat poor little boy for $1.50—they done killed my child for $1.50, when they mighter took it 'thout killin' 'im." The women around her with the ouick and women around her with the quick and demonstrative sympathy of their race, caught up the mother's wail and answered in a heart rending chorus of mourning. The father came up while the women cried. He had been told while at work up town that his boy had been killed and came without question. The dark skin does not tell the story of the heart like the white. The retreating blood leaves little sign of fear or grief in the blank black face; but when Ed. Pemberton, the father, leoked at his dead child resterday he was almost pale. But he is evidently a strong man and a slight nervous wringing of the hands was all the sign he gave of his great agony, as he lifted the leaves which had been thrown over the boy's head to keep the flies from The ministure ship referred to in | the wound. He wanted the body taken

A BOY WAS ARRESTED

Who came to Charlotte from Rock Hill, S. C., Wednesday to see the circus. He had been observed by several peo-ple around the Air-Line depot that morning where, also, the dead boy, Walter Pemberton, had been seen playing after he collected, as directed by his mother, a washing bill of $1.50 from an employe at the engine house.

The boy arrested said his name was John Erwin but he was called John Bogus in Rock Hill. When apprehended he was on an engine in the Air-Line yard. He was taken to the scene of the murder and confronted with the corpse. He was quiet and said when asked what he thought of it: "I think the man as done it ought to be hung. I know you all think as I done it but I

An attempt was made to identify the tracks of the prisoner with tracks through some plowed ground near by, which were thought to be those of the murderer; but the imperfect tracks could not be accurately measured, nor is it at allcertain that they were made by the murderers.

The Results of Circus Day.

The mayor's court was, as was to be expected the morning after circus day, remarkably well attended yesterday morning.

Ben Byrne, colored, was fined $2.50 and costs for a plain drunk and down.

Ben Hall, white, ornamented his drunk with disorderly conduct and obscene language before ladies. In default of $10 and costs he was ordered to work with the chain gang for twenty-five days.

Isam Fullenwider, colored, was fined $2.50 for a d. and d.

Henry Weddington and Lee Thompson, each were were fined $5 and costs

Here is the extent of the case against him, as gathered by a reporter against him, as gathered by a reporter of THE OBSERVER and the coroner's

THE WITNESSES.

Nathan Hurd, colored, an employe of the Air-Line Railway, told the reporter that he had seen the boy Pemberton, yesterday morning before noon, playing around the platform in company with another boy somewhat larger and blacker. He saw the small boy whom he knew, with a greenback bill in his hand and the larger boy snatch at it as if in play. He had not given particular attention to the boys and could not identify Erwin as the larger boy he had seen. He didn't notice them afterwards. Nathan Hurd, colored, an employe of

MR. W. P. DAVIS, An employe of the Air-Line Railway testified that in the forenoon yesterday at what hour he would not say, Walter Pemberton, the deceased, had come to where he (witness) was at work at the pump house of the Air-Line road. He also saw a boy, whom he identified as the prisoner, approaching about 100 yards behind Pemberton. When the latter had been driven off, this boy came up and asked for work which be-ing declined he also left, returning toward the Atlantic, Tennessee & Ohio depot, from which he had come, but he made a deviation towards the field where the murder was committed, in which direction Pemberton had also gone. Erwin was still about 100 yards from Pemberton. Several witnesses testified to having seen the cutting knife blade with other scrap iron on the Air-Line depot plat-

The coroner's jury have not yet ren-dered their verdict. The taking of evi-dence is to be continued to-day at 2 dence is to be continued to-day at 2 o'clock in the mayor's office.

Around this pathetic and horrible tragedy there seems to be the very greatest mystery, hot with standing the case against Erwin. How did the blade get out in to the field; why was the murder done outside of the pines in full view of done outside of the pines in full view of the courage the party that can build and that are now building our road. Mr. Best has gone into the courts, and let him have his remedy at law, but do not let us throw any impediment in the way of an early completion of the West-

THE THOMPSON HOMICIDE.

Additional Particulars in Regard to the Arrest of the Scoundrels Who Perpetrated the Crime.

We are able to lay additional particu-lars in regard to the murder of Miss Caroline Thompson, of Alexander county, before our readers this morning, of which so much has been said in these columns. The first elue to the murder was a letter from a postmaster in Alleghanv to the postmaster at Taylorsville inquiring if there was any peculiarity about the money stolen and if there was any reward offered for the arrest of the perpetrators. A special messenger was immediatelely sent there. He found that two suspicious looking men had spent some old silver money there, one piece a very old and rare French coin. The older person had written his initials, E. F. C. on a box containing a pis-tol which he contracted for and said he would send the money for it and his comdanion had, a little boy, son of the postmaster remembered, called him "Lij," saying to him, "Lij, play the boy a tune." (They carried a fiddle.) They told the postmaster that Perlier's creek, Wilkes Wilkes county, was their postoffice.

The messenger returned to Wilkesboro and learned that Perlier's creek was the postoffice near where Elija Church lived—that at about that time it was reported that Church had taken a trip to Virginia and (a few days later, through the efforts of citizens of Wilkes) that E. H. Dockery had accompanied him on that trip. Warrants were issued for them to the sheriff of find their tracks. In a short time Dockery was arrest-ed, tried and committed, and in addition to the proof against him on the examination before the magistrate he came out ten days ago and made a full statement, in which he said that he and Church alone were present and robbed the house; that Church killed Miss Thompson; that on the same evening he and Church called at John Adams's six miles from Wilksboro, when Church said to Adams:

"By G—d we raised it."

Adams replied: "It's a fine thing." Church then handed Adams one bag of the silver money. Adams inquired what became of the woman, the reply to which he did not hear.

They then pursued their way to their own neighborhood, changed their clothes and secreted them in a pile of chestnut rails, and Dockery hid his boots under a large chestnut log, one hundred yards distant.

He described the clothes worn by each and the clothes were sent for and found hid as described, and compared to the description given of Dockery and his companion on the evening of the robbery, as seen by witnesses, on the first investigation. The boots also were particularly described by two of those witnesses.

On Wednesday, the 7th inst., Adams was brought to Taylorsville and bound be done until the coroner consented. in $1,500 to answer for receiving stolen "What's he doing way out here," he said, "somebody must have fooled him out here to kill him. He would never have come by himself."

A scene so well calculated to excite sympathy is seldom witnessed and that of the crowd took an active turn.

In $1,500 to answer for receiving stolen goods. On Saturday morning, Church was turned over to the Sheriff of Alexander, as already stated, by his brother-in-law, Thos. Winton, and a neighbor, Henry Eller, both of Wilkes county. On the evidence of Dockery, corroborated by the clothing found, the money and many other circumstances he may and many other circumstances, he was committed to jail to await his trial at the next term of Alexander Superior

> There was a considerable demonstration on Sunday the 11th, looking toward the lynching of Church, which was only prevented by the prompt action of Sher-iff Mays. Many of the good citizens of Alexander, who by sending messages to people, representing the moral effects of their action, induced them to let the law take its course.

There are others yet at large implicated—perhaps one other—the prime mo-ver. Church has been moved to Catawba county jail for greater security. The people of that immediate section are satisfied that they now have some of the men who concocted and committed the robbery and murder, which as be-fore stated, occurred in Alexander county on the 10th of June last.

STILL ANOTHER HANGING.

Ben Brown Sentenced to be Executed on the 25th of November for Burg-

When Ben Brown was arraigned for sentence for the burglary of the house of Mr. Wm. Eller, near the city, for which crime he was convicted Tuesday, Judge Avery, in the course of his im-pressive remarks, before the sentence, told the prisoner that he need not look for pardon, as there was little or no hope for it. His Honor's advice to the prisoner was to make every effort to prepare himself for death. Here Brown rose and thanked the Judge for the advice. He was, he said, entirely unprepared to die. He hoped to make his peace with his God, and intended to devote every moment to the earnest pursuit of repentance and forgiveness. suit of repentance and forgiveness. He hoped that His Honor could find it within the limits of his duty to extend

Let the Western North Carolina Raily road be Completed, and Let Freight Discriminations, wherever they Exist, be Corrected.

To the Editor of The Observer: Allow me to congratulate you upon your article on the railroad troubles. The views expressed in that article are eminently wise and practical. If there is any discrimination on the part of the the "Great Rock." It was our privilege to visit the place once. The rock covers an area variously estimated at from 40 to 60 acres and is without doubt the largest body of solid rock to be found in the South. In some spots trees have spring up, dwing to the disintegration of the rock, and in many places channels have been washed by the rains of countless ages.
