Atlanta Constitution: We observe a statement in the Chronicle to the effect that British manufacturers are counterfeiting Augusta cotton goods in foreign markets. This, of course, is not related in August, but it is really the highest tribute that an effete monarchy could pay to Southern skill. This is the most hopeful view of it, but such flattery is liable to become exceedingly monotonous.

Augusta Chronicle: The "pink-eye" is giving considerable trouble in Augusta. The symptoms are uniformly reported to be stiffness and subsequent swelling of the limbs, loss of appetite, eyes becoming weak, nearly closed and running, mouth colored deep red, with feverish condition of head and neck. Some consider it an after trouble of the epidemic, others ascribe it to malaria, and still others to atmospheric influences. The general opinion is that the disease is an easily curable one, the horses recovering in four to nine days.

IRISH REVENUE.

The news from Ireland looks as if England was under the impression that she had a civil war to deal with in Ireland. The arrest of the Irish leaders has stirred Ireland from end to end and caused the greatest excitement, followed by call on the government for troops to protect its agents from threatened violence by angry mobs.

Regiments of troops have been ordered, equipped for active service, police force largely increased, and the quarters of the Land Leaguers placed under surveillance of police. Extra precautions have been taken to strengthen the approaches to Dublin Castle, while guards protect Mr. Foster, the representative of the government, who dares not venture out unguarded. In addition to all this, the latest dispatch received states that the government had proclaimed the Land League an unlawful body, and would indicate that the issue is made and the league is to be suppressed, which means, of course, unconditionally disbanded.

In the meantime the Land Leaguers who are disposed to resent the arrest of their leaders and the attempted suppression of the league, resolve to pay no more rent, thus arraying themselves both against the government and the landlords, whose cause the government is espousing.

In this country monster meetings of Irishmen have been held denouncing the conduct of the ministry in the arbitrary arrests and subsequent proceedings, and urging the people not to yield. No telling what a day may bring forth there now. If civil war be averted, it will be because the people feel that they are not prepared to cope in battle with a strong government, with a strong army and navy at its command. It will be lack of ability and not of disposition that will prevent a trial of strength which the British government seems disposed to force.

Augusta Chronicle: The building of the Knoxville railroad will open a country rich in agricultural products, such as corn and tobacco, but richer in coal, iron and timber. Black walnut, ash and pine grow there in great abundance, and the black walnut alone will make those acres more valuable than the richest blue grass farms. The Knoxville branch will be but the forerunner of other roads, as the wealth of the country is becoming known to the world.
