GOVERNOR'S DAY. Thursday was Governor's Day at the Atlanta Exposition, and as usual there was considerable oratory indulged in. The speeches were brief, however. Gov. Jarvis' speech attracted much attention and was loudly applauded. We reproduce it as we find it in the columns of the Constitution. He said:

My heart is too full for utterance. I have seen the evidences here to-day that for years I have been struggling to help bring about, that I have been hoping to see-the material prosperity and advancement of the South. Atlanta, distinguished as she has been in Ex-Senator Howe, of Wisconsin, who is talked about for Attorney General, is scene of struggling armies, however in the history of our country, these memories must, in the presence of the grand achievements of the arts and sciences and peace, be buried and for-gotten forever. [Applause.] My friends, so much rejoice that the scars that I so much rejoice that the scars that were made by the tramp of these ar-mies have been healed. I rejoice that everything of bitterness, of strife is gone. It was my good fortune to meet upon the historic ground of Yorktown the people of all this country of ours. They were from New York and Maine and Rhode Island—from the north, the east, the west and the south. We met upon that sacred soil as the people of a upon that sacred soil as the people of a common country, and as we met there the spirit of our ancestors, the spirit of a hundred years ago came over us, and we shook hands with the common flag floating over us and determined that forever hereafter we should vie with each other in our devotion to our coun-try and in developing the material things of the land. [Applause.] I mentioned a moment ago, my friends, that Atlanta was to be memorable in the history of this country for having inau-gurated this great enterprise for exhib-iting the arts and sciences, the com-mercial wealth, the mineral wealth, the agricultural resources, and the energy and prosperity of our people. This oc-casion and this presence, my friends, knows not the muskets, the bayonets, the swords nor the cannon, but instead I see the implements of husbandry and the insignia of peace and prosperity. My friends, the prosperity of the north has taught us lessons that we, of the south, may do well to heed, and will do well to practice. It may be out of taste, and out of place to say anything that looks like a lecture, and yet at the risk of your censure I will say this-there is, as Gov. Hoyt said, a glorious future, a grand and glorious destiny for the people of the south. [Applause.] There is a great future for all the States of the South. We have here beneath our soil, untold millions of wealth. Our soil is susceptible of the highest cultivation,

THE REPORT OF A DESCRIPTION OF THE PART OF A DESCRIPTION OF

Secretary Blaine a few days ago wrote to the President tendering for the sec-ond time his resignation as Secretary of State. Mr. Blaine said that he did not wish the President to be under the least embarrassment so far as he was concerned, and if the President so desired, his resignation was subject to instant acceptance. In reply the Presi-dent asked Mr. Blaine to remain, and indicated that he had not as yet fixed any period for naming a new Secretary of State. From the day that General Arthur entered on his duties as Presi-dent, when Mr. Blaine placed his resignation at his disposal, he had never entertained the subject, and Mr. Blaine therefore deemed it proper to tender his resignation a second time.

Blain and MacVeagh.

In reference to the Attorney-General-ship the following may be stated: Mr. MacVeagh has insisted positively on retiring, but the President has been very decisive in requesting him to remain until the star-route cases are disposed of. The President considers that no new man can take charge of the. Department of Justice and conduct these cases as Mr. MacVeagh ought to be able to, and the President further knows very well that if the government fails to sustain its case it will be as-cribed to lukewarmness, if not some-thing worse. If Mr. MacVeagh will not stay in the Department of Justiceand he says he will not-it has been suggested to the President that he be asked to act as associate counsel for the government in the prosecution of the star-route cases. Then if Mr. Mac-Veagh declines the belief that he has no confidence in the success of the prosecution against the members of the socalled star-route ring will be very much strengthened, and a failure to convict cannot then be charged to any act of the President. In well-informed quarters it is said to-night that the President contemplates the appointment of a gentleman for Attorney-General who has not yet been named in that connection, with the understanding he acts until the star-route cases are disposed of, when the permanent appointment of ex-Senator Howe will be made.

Notwithstanding the failure of the State to make an appropriation for an exhibition of North Carolina's resources at Atlanta, our State will still make a creditable appearance at that grand Southern fair.

The agricultural department has made the necessary arrangements and the Old North State will hold her head well up alongside her sisters. Too much credit cannot be given to Commissioner McGehee, Prof. Kerr, Mr. Wilson, and the others who have busied themselves in the matter for accomplishing these
