Pain Killer.

Pain in the Back and Side.

Our life is like a mountain stream
Whose surging waters know no rest,
By hill and plain they flash and gleam
Till gather'd on the ocean's breast Sometimes in calm, sometimes in storm

Now white with wrath, now fleck'd with foam Then, imag'd in the rainbow's form, They onward move to find a home.

Sometimes their song is sweet and low, Sometimes 'tis sad like funeral dirge; Amd then they scarcely seem to go But steal along the woodland verge. But ch! at length they shout with glee! Old ocean's roar break on each ear; With joy they cry "the sea, the sea"— Our mest will be forever here.

When lot the sunbeam, swift and true, Shall kiss them from old Neptune's rod, And fogs and mists, o'er fields of blue, Shall bear them back through clouds, to God.

Such is our life, asleep, awake.
Sometimes in smiles, sometimes in fears;
Sometimes sweet hepe its flight shall take,
And leave us pain and grief, and tears.

Sometimes the heart beats low and faint, As troubles round our path increase, And sin, and care, and earthly taint Hide from our view the bow of peace.

We look ahead and joyful greet Some "spot of green," just on before. And fondly dream our tired feet

Alas! when near the close of day,
We reach, what seem'd the spot so fair,
We find it farther still away—
Mirag'd upon the evening air. This much we know—each pulse that beats, Each step we take beside the shore; Each day, each hour, the trav'ier greets Shall leave him less than were before.

So, when, with us, the day is done,
When sight is dim, when life is past,
May God, through his beloved Son,
Bring us to rest with Him at last.

It is somewhat remarkable that Missouri, according to the last census, shows a higher percentage per acre on the culture of cotton, than any other Southern State, being 63 per cent. Louisiana comes next with 59, Arkan-

Explanation. I tell you, my friends, that a good newspaper is the grandest blessing that God has given to the people of this century—the grandest temporal blessing. The theory is abroad that anybody can WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 .- At the opening of the Criminal Court this morning, District Attorney Corkrill made a personal explanation to the charges against him of a want of interest in the star make a newspaper with the aid of a capitalist. The fact is that fortunes are swallowed up every year in the vain effort to establish newspapers. The route prosecution; that he had been re-lax, neglectful and inattentive to his duty in that respect. vain effort to establish newspapers. The big whale eats about fifty minnows. We have 7,000 dailies and weaklies in the United States and Canadas, and only thirty-six are half a century old. The average life of a newspaper is five years. Most of them die of cholera infantum. [Laughter.] It is high time that it was understood that the most successful way to sink a fortune and keep it sunk is to start a newspaper. A man with an idea starts the Universal Gazette or the Millentum Advocate. Finally the money is all spent, and the

He said the Attorney-General had, on the first of June, been notified that an investigation was in progress in the postoffice department in connection with the star route cases; and that the persons engaged in the investigation desired the appointment of Mr. Cook, and he thought it proper to notify him (Corkhill) of Cook's appointment. He had a long conversation with Mac-Veagh, in which he said Cook's appointment. Veagh, in which he said Cook's appointment was satisfactory him, but desired to have his own position properly defined; that he was ready and willing to perform any service required of him, but the delay in the appointment of a marshal had given him all the business to attend to. The Attorney-General not only assented but said no officer so situated could give the necessary care and attention demaned by the star route investigation. Cook was formally appointed. He had never given himself out as his (Corkhill's) assistant, but as a special assistant attorsistant, but as a special assistant attorney for the United States charged with the presecution of the star route cases. He (Corkhill) therefore had not been consulted in connection with the prosecution. Cook's consultations had all been with the Attorney General whose assistant he properly claimed to be. It would be seen that he (Corkhill) could know nothing of the case or be in the slightest degree responsible for it. He also defended his action in adjourning that you are threatened with softening of the brain. Take your pocketbook and throw it into your wife's lap. Rush up to Bloomingdale Asylum and surrender yourself before you do something desperate. [Laughter.] the grand jury from the 19th of September to October 8rd, and said on July 15th that the counsel for the defense in the star route cases came into court with the remarkable motion that the case be presented to the grand jury, and that Cook, who was the only man who could speak for the government, stated that it was his intention after the sumtober. The assault on the president had, however, occurred and he had consultation with Judge Cox and the grand jury was adjourned to September 12th, then it was called and remained in session till September 19th, doing no business except examining a small pension case. Grand jury was then respited for two weeks longer with the previous understanding. At this time he had no knowledge that there was any immeliate intention to present the star route cases to this grand jury, but had the est reason to suppose that there was not. He called upon Attorney-General MacVeagh on September 5th, and in-formed him that he would have no ousiness for the grand jury when it assembled, and if any of the star route cases were ready for presentation the grand jury was at their service for the two weeks, otherwise he would adjourn the grand jury for three weeks. The the President's assassination he had not given the star route cases special attention, that he knew nothing of them, and that he (Corkhill) need not bother himself about them; that is either his services, or those of the grand jury were required he would be notified by the person he appointed in special
