Some Suggestions About Commercial Fertilizers which it may be Werth While to Consider.

No. 1.

THE OBSERVER has kindly offered us the use of its columns to place before you views we hold, in common with some others, relating to the use of commercial fertilizers on our crops. We hope to place the subject before you in a plain, intelligible way, and make suggestions of a practical nature, which, if utilized, will prove of value to your interests. We are firmly convinced of their great utility, and it shall be our endeavor to arouse in you the same interest we feel in the matter. We are one of you, and write solely in our mu-

Berlin, Nov. 18.—The Emperor's speech emphatically points out that social evils are not to be relieved by repression alone, but rather by concurrent promotion of the welfare of the working classes.

The Emperor says he will look back on all his success and with greater satisfaction if he bequeath to the fatherland new and lasting guarantees for continuous peace at home and to the necessitous a more secure and generous measure of that assistance to which they have a claim. The aged and infirm, he says, are entitled to a greater degree of State provision than they now enjoy, at this moment when matters connected with internal institutions present far-reaching and different problems, the solutions of which is not to be mastered in a single session, but which the Emperor has felt it to be his duty before God and man to put forward. He rejoiced more to be able to express his entire satisfaction with the state of foreign politics. At no time during the last ten years, he says, could the maintenance of peace be anticipated so confidently as at present.

The meetings at Gasten and Dautzic were an expression of close personal and political relations between the sovereigns and their empires. The confidence thus exesting between these imperial courts is a trustworthy guarantee of the peace which is the identitual interest. The drought of the past summer has upset all of our pre-conceived ideas of the value of the use of commercial ferthe value of the use of commercial fer-tilizers on our crops, and left us at sea as to the policy of continuing their use. So long as their application seemed to give us a profit we were content to con-tinue their use without once consider-ing whether or no in the long run it was our true interest to do so. But the losses entailed on us by the drought, and the hardship of the payment of our guano accounts, have brought us face to face with the question, and in a man-ner most of us will long remember. We see the seeming profits of a series of years, arising from their use, swept away by this disastrous season, and the time is now propitious for taking into consideration whether or no we have not been "paying dear for our whistle" not been "paying dear for our whistle" all the long years we have been using these manipulated guanos; whether it has not been a sheer waste of money to have bought any of these superphosphates. Science and practical agriculture are beginning to shed light on this subject.

Animal bone and mineral phesphates are the base of all the "superphosphates" of commerce. They contain about 50 per cent. of the phosphate of lime, which makes them valuable mainly in agriculture, and when treated with sulphuric acid (oil of vitrol) they become superphosphates. This treatment with acid is necessary, it has been held, to separate the phosphoric acid of the phosphate of lime from the lime, and thus make the phosphoric acid sol-Animal bone and mineral phosphates and thus make the phosphoric acid sol-uble in water to prepare it to be taken up by the plant as food. Under this up by the plant as food. Under this supposition the phosphate material thus treated acquires its principal value, commercially and agriculturally, from the percentage of soluble or free phosphoric acid it contains, and when ammonia, potash, or other plant food is added, the value of the material increases relatively. When void of ammonia and potash it is known on the market as "acid phosphate" or "disselved bone." If fresh animal bone is used the ammonia is furnished by the used the ammonia is furnished by the bone, otherwise the manufacture adds it from other sources. If potash is required it is added by the manufacture, it not being found in the natural bone or mineral phosphates.

or mineral phosphates. As "superphosphates," "ammoniated superphosphotes," &c., these latter goods are known on the market. This manipulation of the superphosphotes. nipulation of the animal bone and mineral phosphates is what gives business to the many establishments scattered throughout the North and South for the manufacture of our commercial fertilizers. The farmers and planters of the South are their principal customers, the farmers of the North confining themselves to the use of the ground bone and ground phosphate without the acid treatment. And wisely, too, as we hope to show you. We in North Carolina bought about $3,000,000 worth of the manufactured article last season, of which you of Mecklenburg took from $150,000 to $175,000 worth.

Leading scientific and practical agriculturists are beginning to discover that the laboratory of nature is able to prepare the food for plants in her own way without the aid of the chemist and fertilizer manufacturer, that plants have digestive powers of their own, and that if we place food within the reach of the plant nature will utilize it for us. In our next communication we shall and owner to place before you satshall endeavor to place before you satisfactory evidence of the soundness of this position. C. McDonald. Cabarrus County, N. C.

Thanksgiving Proclamation. STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT. Custom, law and gratitude alike requiring that at least one day before the close of each year should be devoted to giving thanks to Almighty God for his manifold mercies and blessing, I Thomas J. Jarvis, Governor of North Carolina de issue this my proglamation. Setas J. Jarvis, Governor of North Carolina, do issue this my proclamation, setting apart Thursday, November 24th inst., as a day of thanksgiving, and prayer, and do earnestly request all the people of North Carolina properly to observe the same. Let the churches and other places of public worship be opened and the places of business close. Let the people, resting from their labors, spend the day devoutly, as becomes a thankful Christian people. On that day let not the poor, the widow and the orphan anywhere be forgotten; and the orphan anywhere be forgotten; remembering that to give to these is to lend to him from whom all blessings come. Especially let not the Oxford Orphan Asylum be forgotten, the necessities of whose unfortunate inmates, never greater than now, I especially commend to the control of the control o commend to the generous considera-

Editors Telegraph and Messenger:
Can you tell me the origin of the saying "Cotton is king," quoted so extensively of late in connection with the Atlanta Exposition B.

As far as we can learn the expression was originated by Hon. James H. Hammond. Senator from and afterwards Governor of South Carolina. It is stated that he first asserted the supremacy of cotton in a speech delivered March 4, 1858, in the Senate of the United States, a speech that attracted much attention by the way the laboring classes were handled. The saying referred to was introduced in this way.

"No, you dare not make war on cot-"No, you dare not make war on cotton. No power on earth dares to make war upon cotton. Cotton is King! Until lately the Bank of England was king, but tried to put her screws, as usual, the fall before the last, on the cotton crop, and was utterly vanquished. The last power has been conquered. Who can doubt that has looked at recent events, that cotton is supreme?
