In reply to inquiries of the mayor of Greensboro, Dr. R. F. Gray, the health officer of Winston, states that there was one case of small pox, but out of town, and that all parties who were exposed to it have been placed under guard. All precautions have been taken to prevent the spread of the disease, and he thinks that at present there is no cause for alarm.

Sam Binz, a Chinaman, ran a laundry in Louisville, Ky. Monday night a row broke out in the laundry, and when the police arrived they found Sam slashing away at the crowd with a hatchet. He declined to suspend operations at the request of the police, but went vigorously for them with his little hatchet when one of them sent a bullet through him which put a summary finis to his activity, and left Louisville a Chinese laundryman less.

Mr. Cyrus W. Field, who managed the subscription funds for the wife and mother of President Garfield has made following statement: The total amount received to date is $361,891.72. Of this sum the United States Trust Company, with whom the money was deposited, has paid $361,070.75 for $311,000 United States 4 per cent. registered bonds, leaving a cash balance in their hands of $220.97. The fund created for General Garfield's mother amounted to $1120.25, all of which has been paid to her.

Galveston News: While Texas has no public debt worth speaking of, and can offer no inducements to the embryo Mahones in that field of repudiation, she has a large land indebtedness which she can not pay, and it may be practically to organize a readjusting movement to overhaul the frauds by which the State has been despoiled of her magnificent domain. It is simply impossible to honor the land certificates in excess of the acres on hand, for the State's boundaries are fixed and her surface can not expand. The only remedy is to readjust—repudiate the land grants—investigate the curious processes of the pirates, and put men at the head of affairs who have the capacity and the honesty to take care of the people's property.

One of the chief causes of the far-reaching extent of the small pox in the North and West has been the unusually large immigration from Europe the past year, the immigrants, in spite of the precautionary measures taken, carrying it in all directions in which they travelled. It seems that there is some deficiency in the sanitary regulations at ports of entry, and a lack of power vested in health officers to enforce necessary regulations, such as vaccination, cleanliness, &c. The immigrants arrive, railroad agents pick them up regardless of their condition, hurry them into the interior and with them such contagious diseases as they may be affected with.

WHAT WILL ENGLAND DO?

America is sending us prime beef and mutton. American wool is ousting England from the market. American supplies are more numerous in the English market than home-grown. America is now sending us "English" plum-pudding for boiling. American horses have this year won the principal races in England and France. And now that America is bestirring herself about her navy, what will be left for poor old England to plume herself upon?—London Truth.

The unhappy condition of the agricultural classes in England, Ireland and Scotland is due in a great measure to competition in market supplies with America. Rapidity of ocean travel, and the discoveries of science enable American beef raisers to put beef on foot or slaughtered into the English market cheaper than the home raiser, with his high rents and limited farms, can afford to do, for much of this American beef is pastured on wide ranges of wild grass where the pasturage costs practically nothing but the trifling expense of herding, and sometimes not even that much. This is true also about the mutton and wool trade, a great deal of which is raised pretty much in the same way. The abundance and cheapness of pasturage also enables the American dairyman to put his butter and cheese in the English market at a less figure than the home dairyman can, and as a consequence the home products of beef, cheese and butter, on which the farmers across the water so largely depended for their profits, are being to a great extent driven out of the market. Some years ago they had the advantage in the superior quality of stock they raised, but the importation of their finest thoroughbreds into this country has been carried on so extensively that our stock now compares favorably with their best and they have no longer any advantage of us in this respect.

It must be remembered, too, that it is only within recent years that the enterprise has been undertaken, and that it cannot be said yet to have made a good start, although it has met with such splendid success. It will not be many years before the English markets will be practically supplied from this side of the Atlantic and from Australia, making matters still worse for the home producer, who must go under in the uneven contest.

And with all this before their eyes English statesmanship seems to be unable to comprehend the scheme of relief. There is no hope for the tiller of the soil over there save in being the owner of the land he cultivates, thus enabling him to branch out on a large scale, go into the business with system and spirit. Perhaps then he might be able to save himself, but even this is doubtful. But it is reduced to a certainty that while confined, as many of them are, to mere garden patches, comparatively speaking, for which they cannot pay enormously high rents, they cannot longer compete with the American producer, and if English statesmanship is not totally blind it must see this and if not totally perverse it must recognize it. Add to all this, as the London Truth suggests, a revived American Merchant Marine to compete with Britain's ships on the high seas, and lay American products and fabrics down in the markets of the world as cheaply as England now does her products and the English tradesman, shipper and sailor to the wall as effectually as the English farmer now does. The fact is American push and enterprise are darkening England's future not a little. No wonder so many of her people are looking across the Atlantic for future homes, and it will be no wonder either at no very distant period to see the majority of her bone and muscle planted on American homesteads where there is room for industry and reward for labor, and there are no landlords to reap the profits of the years of toil.

A Lively Skirmish Between Three Flucky Prisoners and their Partners.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 3.—Advices from Graham, Texas, report that the three McDonald boys, murderers of a man named Martin, at Belknap, made a desperate effort to escape from jail yesterday, which resulted in their death and that of a soldier besides the serious wounding of several other parties. About 10 o'clock in the morning the McDonald boys were led from the steel cage to the calaboose, with Jim Boone and Jack Baldwin, two other prisoners, were given their breakfast by two deputies. One deputy was testing the cage while it was empty, and the other deputy, Davis Melton, stood in the calaboose to a wood cell opening from the calaboose to the steel cage. He had a pistol in each hand keeping watch, and presently he put both revolvers in one hand to get a match from his pocket. The McDonalds sprang upon him suddenly and snatched him. In the struggle Melton was shot in the hand and his cries brought Murphy, the other deputy, from the cage, but on entering the calaboose he was shot and instantly killed by the prisoners. The prisoners then made a hole through the floor to a room below and taking Melton with them began their escape. A detour-hound watches the jail, but by a detour they avoided him and took their flight in a southerly direction. By this time the city was excited and citizens had gathered together and followed the prisoners. The latter placed their hostage, Melton, behind them and threatened to shoot him dead if they were fired on. Thus the murderers proceeded some 300 yards when one citizen deliberately took aim and fired, wounding one of the fugitives, who fell. Deputy Melton seized the opportunity, broke loose and ran. A general fusillade was now begun between citizens and the escaping prisoners. The latter entrenched themselves in the weeds and stumps. The battle raged for some time, and when the shooting ceased the three McDonalds were dead. Melton was shot three times; an old man named Wood was wounded in the thigh, and a water named Joe had a bone of his leg shattered. Baldwin and Boone took no part in the shooting, and were recaptured. Graham was a scene of terrible excitement during the bloody affray.

GRITTEAU'S SHOW.

A Shivering Judge, Jury, and Audience.—The Prisoner makes another Speech and Addresses a few Remarks to an Expert Witness.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 3.—It was raining in the room this morning and the jury, court officials and spectators sat shivering in overcoats and wraps. Gritteau made his usual speech. He said he had a happy New Year and hoped everybody else did; had lots of visitors and they all expressed the opinion that he would be acquitted.

Dr. Gray took the stand and Scoville resumed his cross-examination. The witness did not say in giving his opinion on direct examination that prisoner was sane, taken into account the evidence of the prisoner himself, but that that element into account his opinion would still be the same. The prisoner is sane and was sane on the second of July. The witness was asked if he was familiar with the case of Lieut. Samborn, who was killed by Dr. Wright at Norfolk, Va., and the replied "Yes, sir, I was." By the President to make an examination and give an opinion on the case.

"How much did you get for it?" shouted Gritteau. The witness was closely questioned as to how or by what physical examination insanity and disease of the brain could be detected.

"Have you ever had patients in your asylum who have recovered?" "Yes, sir, I have." "Have you seen persons who have recovered in three months?" "Yes, sir, I have." "Scoville,—"And were discharged?" "Yes, sir."

Scoville:—"Well, now if you experts were to examine such a patient immediately upon his discharge could you tell by any physical examination if he had been insane only three months previous?" "No, sir, not without a history of the case."

Scoville:—"I thought so." Gritteau:—"Your idea, Doctor, that a man can't be insane unless his brain is diseased, is rather frivolous; you don't agree with the Saviour; you ought to study up spiriology, then you would catch some new ideas."

The witness did not believe in what is termed by some writers "emotional insanity," or "moral insanity." Klotoponia, he considered simply thieving; dipsomania, or drunkenness, and pismomania, or mania, these designations were simply constituted terms, which had been invented to cover certain crimes. Insanity, said the witness, is never transmitted from father to son. I never knew anybody born with cancer; a susceptibility to insanity is undoubtedly transmitted from parents to children, but insanity does not necessarily follow, except from some profound physical disturbance.

The examination progressed with tedious detail. In the effort to extract something favorable to the defence the counsel renewed the attack upon the witness again and again, and each time was met with an evasive or qualified reply.

Scoville desired to put in evidence certain tabulated statements from the Federal reports of the witness. From these it appeared that of 54 cases of homicide by insane people, most of them were by persons acting under the insane delusion of divine authority for their acts.

At the request of the district attorney the witness described briefly the cases and added that each case was one of marked insanity, independent of the homicidal act.

After the recess Dr. Gray was asked a few more questions by Scoville when the district attorney announced the conclusion of evidence on the part of the government. Scoville then led over to the dock and conferred with the prisoner a few minutes. After returning to his seat he said: Your honor, I am taken completely by surprise by the action of the prosecution in not calling several persons whose names have been given in as witnesses for the prosecution. These gentlemen, being employees of the government, were in a position to know something of the moral condition of the prisoner about the time of the shooting of the president. I do not know what action in the matter the defence will wish to take, but I will inform the court to-morrow morning.

Dr. Boyer of Kansas City was then called by Scoville. The witness met Mrs. Dunmore at Leadville, Colorado, and conversed with her. She said she had entertained grave doubts as to the mental condition of her husband. He had been in the habit of drinking at the time she obtained her divorce, and thought at the time perhaps she had better defer the divorce proceedings and await some further development in the mental condition of her husband.

The prisoner undertook to read a letter as he claimed from an old friend of Garfield in Ohio, showing that public opinion was making in his favor. Judge Cox ordered him to be silent. He read a great deal of the letter to the public opinion outside the court room. Marshal Henry, rising and moving towards the dock: Keep quiet, sir. Gritteau: I've got sitting, sir.

He read a great deal of the letter to the public opinion outside the court room. Marshal Henry, rising and moving towards the dock: Keep quiet, sir. Gritteau: I've got sitting, sir.

Scoville again brought up the question of insanity, and the witness, in an agreement was finally made that the defence shall submit in writing to-morrow morning their motion, giving the names of the witnesses, and the facts to be proved in support of their affidavit, giving reasons why such witnesses were not introduced before.

FROM WASHINGTON. Utilizing Cranks for Gritteau's Benefit.—Attorney-General Brewster and the Star Route Cases.

WASHINGTON, January 3.—It is understood that the Star Route Gritteau case will shortly introduce a new feature, so-called, Cranks numbering between forty and fifty have been arrested here since Gritteau shot the President, most of whom have been sent to an insane asylum on physician's certificates. Physicians in each case will, it is said, be subpoenaed for the purpose of comparing those cases with that of Gritteau, with a view to demonstrating that commitments referred to were justly made, Gritteau must be likewise insane. Among the physicians whom it is expected will be called to the witness stand are those upon whose certificates Biggins was committed to an insane asylum. It will be remembered that Biggins fancied that Gen. Grant appeared to him by means of a key hole in his door and persecuted him. Biggins was sent to an asylum and afterwards sued Gen. Grant for one hundred thousand dollars damages. He was finally released and is now engaged in business in this city. Attorney-General Brewster assumed charge of the department of justice this morning.

One of the special prosecutors for the government in the Star Route cases stated to-day that they would commence their work before the grand jury in about two weeks. He said they have their evidence in a satisfactory shape and feel confident of its success in securing indictments. While not fully decided which case they will start with, still it is their impression now that they will lead off with ex-Senator Biggins in connection with the Star route service.
