The Largest Landslide in the World---

THE BIG LANDSLIDE

Clear rivers with innumerable branches, abounding in rich grazing lands, and fertile tracts, is a great square block of territory almost projecting to and of larger domain than the State of Connecticut.

Here the Red and Washita rivers rise, and clear cold springs abound in vast numbers. Here celebrated battles have been fought, and the once lordly Indian subjugated by the hand of the white man. Here herds have fed in thousands, and surveys for various railways have been run through. A land it is of perpetual summer and a climate vying with the finest on the Pacific slope. Long the eyes of speculators have turned to the spot, and the tide of emi-gration has been stopped only by the ack of facilities for transportation.

But a few days ago a curious incorporation was noticed among the list from Springfield, of a company of prominent Chicago men empowered to build a State capitol for Texas, and then the startling announcement that this vast territory described, known on the map as "Pan Handle," had been deeded to the incorporation as payment for the proposed State capitol.

Most prominent among the names of the incorporators were the Farwells of this city. Congressman C. B. Farwell was at once visited for facts relative to this unparalleled scheme, and the following dialogue ensued: "Mr. Farwell, the readers of the Inter-Ocean would like a description of that little matter in Texas."

"Well, now, I don't believe we know anything about it; do we John?" turning to his brother.

"Just a little, perhaps," observed Mr. "We had better not tell him, had we?" quoth Mr. C. B.

"Let me ask you a few questions." "Fire away. I might die in a worse

"Who are the parties interested in this transfer of land?" "A. C. Babcock, of Canton, Ill., Abner Taylor, my brother John and myself, of Chicago.'

"When was the matter proposed?"
"On the seventh of last month I came from Washington on the receipt of a telegram, and we talked the matter over, and soon after sent a rehable expert to make arrangements if everything was satisfactory."
"What about the Texas side of the question?"

"The State set apart a body of land to pay for a capitol which would be large enough to meet the demands of the future. The proposition was made to us, and a telegram from Austin assures us that the agreement has been consummated beyond recall."

"How large is the tract of land?"
"It comprises 3,000,000 acres."

"How is it bounded?" "It comprises what ought to form a part of Indian Territory, which bounds it on the east and north at the intersection of a line 36 degrees 30 minutes and the law which applies to factory north latitude, with the 103d meridian chimneys and river steamers, if extend of west lonitude running 341/2 miles ed to public buildings and private of west lonitude running 34½ miles south of the corner of Kansas, New Mexico and Colorado. The area consists of about 5,000 square miles, being nearly 200 miles long and almost 30 wide. Some 50,000 acres of this were set apart by the State to defray the expenses of the survey of the tract, and the remainder belongs to us."

"That makes you the largest individual land owners on the globe, does it

They claim that it is the finest vineyard land on the continent. There is no stop-page of operations there for winter. It is well watered and timbered."

"What is the prospect of railway "Three railways are rapidly pushing through—the Houston and Texas Central railway, and another one from Austin, and one from Denver, which Denver people are building."

The region lying between St. Paul's and Pentonville is warm and sheltered, and north of the latter place the open country, with the county of Hertfordshire, is shut off from the suburbs, and all their dinginess by the range of hills known as the Hog's Back, Hampstead Heath, Highgate, Campden and Richmond hills are literally high places, from which, but for the pall of smoke, the views cityward would afford a series of glorious sights. Were it not for the smoke, London might contain a vast succession of beautiful gardens full of bright flowers. The natural atmosphere is so pleasant and temperate that there are few days from the 1st of January to the 31st of December on which, when it does not rain, persons of an ordinarily robust constitution may not sit out in the enjoyment of the open air from dawn to dusk. Londoners themselves scarcely realized this undoubted fact, but a moderate acquaintance with what goes on at such spots as Hampstead Heath and Richmond hill during the winter months would assure them of its truth. There is not a dry day from October to May when well-dressed people may not be seen seated taking the air from Holloway to Barnet, and the benches situated under the shelter of that fine old sundried wall by the river's bank, within sight of Richmond bridge, form an habitual resort for the select few who have for years past regularly put our contention to the test. Very soon the ever-present smoke will probably dull their outer surfaces and destroy every trace of beauty independent of mere form. Ordinary Londoners, who go to bed betimes, and do not rise at a particularly early hour, never see the metro-polis at its best. During the spring, however, London, for the first hour or
