sign of the new era which is dawning in the South, is found in the number of inventions patented by Southerners. During the decade just ended, they averaged 1,444 each year. In the prewar, only 371 a year, being something more than one-fourth as many. Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee lead the van, but Texas shows a wonderful advance-a ten-fold increase, indeed. The abolition of slavery has done as much for the white race as for the black, by developing the latent capacities of a people who formerly were content to jog along without taking the initiative in industrial matters.

The Ohio Legislature has passed an act in reference to the license tax on liquor sellers, which goes into effect on the first of May, and provides that all dealers in intoxicating liquors not located in a village or city, or within a mile thereof, shall pay a license of $100; when in a village of less than 2,000 population or within a mile of it the fee is $150: when in a city of less than 10,000 population or within a mile of it, $200; within a city of 10,000 inhabitants or more, or within two miles of it, $250; and when within a city of the first class, like Cleveland or Cincinnati, or within two miles thereof, $300. Wholesale and retail dealers, big and little, wine and beer saloons, as well as whisky saloons, are comprehended within the terms of the act, and taxed alike, without reference to the amount of business done. The law is intended to wipe out the small groggeries. It is thought that this act will have no little influence in coming elections, and that the Republican party, which had a majority in the Legislature by which it was passed, will suffer by it.

A GOOD SIGN. According to the statements that each us through many of our Southern exchanges, the crop of grain planted in the South this year is considerably in excess of former years. In this State, as far as our information goes, it is very largely so. This is one of the good signs of the times and something upon which not only the planting community, but the Southern public at large are to be congratulated. Diversified farming is the true road to independence for the Southern planter, who never can be really independent while he has to depend upon the granaries of the West for the meat that feeds his help and the hay and grain that feed his stock. To be entirely successful in his pursuit he must be independent in this respect, must have his granaries and grass fields at home. And there is no reason why he should not, for there is but little land in the Southern States which will not grow grass and grain well, while some sections of it are especially adapted to both. Throughout all the Northern tier of States, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia, these crops grow luxuriantly and yield abundantly not only enough for home consumption, but a very large surplus for shipment, when the effort is made to raise them and any attention given to their cultivation. As fine clover as ever grew out of the ground has been grown in lots within the limits of Charlotte, and even up in the mountain ranges it grows to a degree of luxuriance the mere statement of which would look like the wildest exaggeration. There is no excuse whatever for our people continuing the habit so long prevalent in the South of sending abroad for the meat they eat or feed for their stock which can be raised so successfully at their own doors. The trouble has been that as a general thing our cultivators of land have confined it comes to stealing horses and cattle themselves to specialties for which their lands were considered especially ple, so to speak, ran wild over them. When the seasons were propitious and prices good the farmer made some money, when not he lost money and ended the year worse than he began it, not unfrequently in debt, for moneys borrowed to work his crop and ugly, harassing mortgages staring him in the of 1830 to help tide over the short crop face by day and disturbing his rest by night. Many a planter could testify to We hail it then, as a good sign that crops remain an uncertainty there is the subject of diversified farming is bean opportunity for speculation which ginning to receive that attention which its importance demands. House Committee Reports. WASHINGTON, April 4.-The House elections committee to-day agreed to report in the case of Lynch against Chalmers, from the sixth congressional district of Mississippi, that Chalmers was not elected and that Lynch was elected to the seat and is entitled to it. The committee also directed the report to be made to the House in the case of the third South Carolina district in favor of Aiken, the sitting member. To-morrow's meeting of the committee will dispose of the case of Mackey against Dibble. A majority is in favor of Mackey.

THE VETO MESSAGE IN THE SEN-ATE. The House Continues the Discussion of the Army Appropriation Bill.

Washington, April 4.—Senate.— Miller, of California, from the commitmittee on foreign relations reported favorably with an amendment the Sen-ate bill to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicarauga. Immediately after the reception of the President's message vectoring the anti-Chinese bill, at 1.15 o'clock the president pro tem. suspended the operation of business to lay the communication before the Senate and directed it The reading of the message by the secretary was listened to with marked interest and attention by the entire The vital objection of the President is to the twenty years suspension of immigration, which he construes as virtually prohibitory and therefore a violation of the spirit if not the letter of the negotiations upon which the treaty was based, and as a breach of national The message calls attention to the propositions made by the United States commissioners on this point and counter propositions on the the part of China to show that the understanding of the latter country in the agreement which was ultimately made was that immigration would be limited or restricted to a reasonable period. The President then points out other features of the act which, in his opinion, can be modified to advantage. The system of personal registration and passports is specifically mentioned as undemocratic and hostile to our institutions, and he alludes to the omission of the act to make any provision for the transit to China of Chinese subjects now residing in foreign countries, to which subject, the President adds, his attention has been called by the Chinese minister. The message refers to the alleged benefits to its industries derived by the Pacific slope from the presence of the Chinese heretofore and expresses an apprehension of an injurious effect upon American commerce with China from legislation of the character of that proposed unless carefully guarded, and without naming any specific period of suspension he suggests that the length adapted.
