HOME CHIPLETS.

Remember the Episcopal pic nic o-day.

Windy and dusty yesterday, notwithstanding the rain the day before. Merchants complain that yesterday was the dullest business day experienced this season.

The services which have been carried on at the First Presbyterian church for the past week have been dis continued.

Sitting Bull is credited with havng said "what a pity our forefathers the noble men of the forests, did not pass an anti-European bill early in the Seventeenth century.'

The laundry man advertises quite a reduction in prices for washing this morning. We do hope the people of Charlotte will give the "steam" man a fair trial. See his advertisement. At the meeting of the Literary and Debating Club last night arrangements were make for a public debate to coine off Monday evening May 1st proximo. Admission to the hall will be had by tickets of invitation which will be sent out nearer the time of the debate. Rev. J. W. Wheeler, pastor of Culvary Methodist church is conducting a revival at that church, in this city. It commenced about a week ago and will be continued for some weeks to come. Mr. Wheeler hopes to secure the assistance of several able divines in this State in the good work which he has begun.

Cochrane opened out a new bar and the neatest of neat billiard rooms' yesterday, in the Central Hotel, and just in rear of the business office. It has been furnished with three of Collender's best billiard tables; or rather one pool and two billiard tables. In one word the appointments are all recherche, and it is intended that it shall be so kept.

The remains of Mr. Geo. D. Allen arrived here yesterday evening at 6:80 from Jacksonville, Fla. The train should have reached Charlotte at 5 o'clock, but was delayed an hour and a half, owing to which the funeral was postponed until 9 o'clock this morning. At that hour the funeral will take place from the Methodist church. The friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited.

-Col. Frank Coxe and wife returned this morning from New York.

-Mr. Joe Lindy has returned to the city after an absence of a few weeks in Northern markets.

The Storm of Sunday.

A brief but violent rain and thunder storm occurred here on Sunday. The lightning lightened the spire of the Baptist church of a few shingles, ignoring the existence of the lightning conductor. The damage is, however, very slight, and as the congregation are hoping soon to be the possessors of a new church, we understand they won't trouble to patch up the old one unless

Out in Mallard Creek township several trees were split by the lightning.

Everybody's Book." Mr. Peter M. Hale, well-known in this State as one of the editors of the Raleigh Observer, in conjunction with Col. Walter Clark, of Raleigh, has issued for the use of the people a book under the above title, which is intended to supply a long felt want and give valuable information on legal points, as to drawing deeds, contracts, agreements, etc., and other business of a legal nature, without the trouble or expense of applying to legal counsel. The book has been highly commended by legal critics, and will be sold at the low price of twenty-five cents, which will place it within the reach of everyone.

Election of Vestrymen and Delegates. At the annual meeting of the congregation of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, held yesterday evening, the following gentlemen were elected vestrymen for the ensuing year: Captain John Wilkes, Gen. Thos. F. Drayton, Baxter H. Moore, Esq, Col. J. P. Thomas, Thos. H Haughton, Esq , Dr. M. A. Bland, and

Col. H. C. Jones. At a called meeting of the vestryelect the following were chosen delegates to the Diocesan Convention, to be held at Tarboro, on the 10th of May next: Capt. John Wilkes, Gen. Thos. F. Drayton, B. H. Moore, Esq., Col. H. C. Jones. Alternates: Hon. Wm. M. Shipp, William Haughton, J. S. Myers, and Capt. Fred. Nash.

KING GAMBRINUS. THE MYTHICAL DEITY OF LAGER BEER.

Located in Charlotte, Whence He Supplies His Friends and Customers Through His Agent, Mr. F. C. Mund

Gambrinus, we believe, discovered the process of making lager beer, and the German nation became so elated thereat that they at once crowned him King, but whether his kingdom was temporal or spiritual, or whether he was merely a King at the festive beard, this deponent saith not. We are satisfied to know there was such an individual, and that the said individual discovered and left to his posterity the art of making beer as a legacy. As to when he lived, how he died, or what he did other than making and drinking beer, we are not informed. Zenophon says: "For drink there was beer, which was strong when not mingled with water, but was agreeable to those who were used to it. They drink this with a reed out of the vessel that held the beer, upon which they saw the barley swim." Tacitus notices it as being in common use among the Germans in his time. Pliny describes the celia and ceria, the beer of the Spaniards. and the cerevisia of the Gauls, made from almost every species of grain, and evidently named from Ceres, the goddess of corn. Aristotle speaks of its intoxicating qualities, and Theophrastus very properly calls it the wine of barley. Herodotus (450 years B. C.) stated that the Egyptians made their wine of barley. An ancient description, by Isidorus and Orosius, of the precess in use by the Briton and Cellic nations represents it as not differing essentially from that now made. And nearly all of these historians agree that the beer of their day was a nourishing drink, from the "grain, sugar and starch it holds in solution, and the bitter substances combined with it impart tonic properties." But it is not of these we would speak to-day. The average beer drinker knows more in an hour in regard to his favorite beverage than we could tell him in a day, and the only reason why we allude to the matter at all is to say that the mythical Gambrinus has actually moved to and taken up his quarters permanently in Charlotte. He does business for the present at a little office on lower Trade street, east side, presided over by Mr. F. C. Munzler.

Twenty years ago Mr. Martin Munzler, Fred's father, located in Charlotte, and projected probably the first brewery ever started in the State, but, for various reasons, the manufacture of beer was discontinued. Fred, has been handling it ever since he was a boy, and thoroughly understands his business, and, as an evidence of that fact, after trying several other brewers, he commenced handling the celebrated beer made by the brewing company of Bergner & Engel, of Philadelphia. Originally located on Boundary avenue, he has been forced by the increase in his business to get nearer his customers, and has removed his headquarters (occupied jointly by himself and King Gambrinus) to lower Trade street, a few doors west of the railroad crossing. This move also places him near Anthony's ice house, where he stores his beer in the coolest ice vault in Charlotte. Lager beer, it seems, must be kept several months after it is made in an icecold cellar before it possesses the neces sary qualifications for use, and this is done by the brewers in Philadelphia. It is shipped to Charlotte in refrigerator cars, and the barrels are tumbled direct into the ice house here, where they remain at a temperature much below 32 degrees, until the beer is emptied into boftles and packed into crates, either for shipment or for delivery to city customers.

Ten years ago little or no beer was consumed in Charlotte, and nobody ever thought of shipping it off, and now it is brought here by the car load, Mr. Munzler getting a car load fresh from the brewery every week. As an evidence of the increase in its use, we may say sales have increased 400 per cent within the past five years, and it is now shipped in large quantities from this point to the surrounding towns.

In the treatment of many diseases it has been regarded as a tonic, and a large number of families in Charlotte use it as such, and it is probably this fact, together with the facilities by which it can now be procured, that has brought it into almost general use, and the same reasons which begot its use in Charlotte commend it to a large number of people in the country and towns along the railroads. Mr. Munzler is gradually building up quite a business with people and dealers at a distance, and we are glad of it, because wherever it and everybody knows that too much of these are consumed. We do not know that there is anything either in the physical composition, the mental requisites, or in our climate which absolutely requires a much better off.

Obituary.

Mr. Ferdinand W. Kuester died yesterday evening at his residence, corner College and Seventh streets, from the effects of a wound received accidentally, while at work in his gun shop on the 4th day of last November. On that day, Charles, a 15 year-old son of the deceased, was exhibiting a 35-calibre Smith & Wesson pistol to a customera vise several feet distant, called the attention of the son to the fact that the pistol over the counter to the customer who, after examining it some moments, returned it without uncocking it. In letting the hammer down, in some way the pistol was discharged, and the ball entered the thigh of the father, making a small and, what was then thought to be not, a dangerous wound. The wounded man was immediately taken to his residence, and has received every attention that medical assistance and careful nursing could give, but with no other effect, as it seems, than to prolong his life. Pyæmia set in some weeks ago, and from that time Mr. Kuester's life has been despaired of by his physicians as well as his friends, of whom he had many. He died in the Easter Sunday at the Churches.

Easter Sunday.

At the Episcopal church a large congregation assembled in the morning. The usual services for the day were conducted by the Rev. J. B. Cheshire, the subject of his sermon being "The Resurrection." Special music was very ably rendered by the choir, led by Mrs. H. C. Jones. In the afternoon the Sunday School children marched in procession from the schoolroom to the church, each class with its banner, singing the processional "Onward Christian Soldiers." Psalms, prayers and lessons were read. Then one child from each class rought up a floral offering, and hung it on a beautiful device about the chancel, representative of Faith, Hope and Charity. After this, Mr. Cheshire gave the children an address explanatory of the service. Then the offertory hymn was sung, during which the representative of each class brought up to the altar the mite boxes, the contents of which the children had collected during Lent. At the conclusion of the service the children again formed a procession,
