WEDNESDAY, MAY 8, 1882. COTTON SAVING.

SOME SUGGESTIONS TO MANUFACTURERS BY EDWARD ATKINSON. A Waste of $30,000,000—How This May be Remedied With Improved Ginning Houses—The Buzzard Wing Press—Opportunities for Northern Capital—Signs of Improvement.

GINNING ON A SMALL SCALE. The process of ginning and baling in these States, which are, on the whole, two of the best in the States in the South, is conducted by one of three methods:

1. Gineries run by horse or mule power. 2. Gineries run by steam. 3. Gineries run by water power.

Whether or not such an undertaking shall be begun depends upon others, but the matter has been investigated and reported upon.

SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT. The more hopeful side of the question is to be found in the fact that a vast deal of information was spread abroad from the Atlantic cotton exposition.

TO NEWSPAPER MEN. ... I have discovered the vegetable essence for SCHOPULA.

is so little the custom outside of Texas to sell the cotton in the seed, and the planter to subject the farmer and the planter to the expense of the ginner.

A CHANCE FOR NORTHERN MEN. I have never investigated any subject in which so large a profit appeared to be within reach on so small an investment.
