My other associate, who is yet alive, joined a company of horse, and I personated an artist in search of the unique and sensational. It was resolved that, if possible, we should act in concert, but that each should watch a opportunity to fulfill the mission for which I was responsible. We had to wait for some weeks. The Prince made one recon-noisance, and came back so fatigued THE that the commander-in-chief ordered him to be kept inside the lines in future. The poor youth fretted greatly at the restriction. Lieutenant Carey made a reconnoisance with the Prince Imperial a little dis-tance from the camp. It was merely a tance from the camp. It was merely a pleasure trip. In the meantime we had enlisted a Kaffir camp-follower, who had been punished by Carey, and under pretext that we desired to kill the Lieu-tenant he joined us, and we went into ambush at a spot near where the royal party of six would halt for dinner. They arrived in due season and off-sad-dled near a few ruined huts. We ad-vanced with great caution until within vanced with great caution until within thirty yards of the unsuspecting party. The Prince was lying on his side in an exposed position, and any of us could have shot him then. Valousky whis-pered to me to fire, but I thought it bet-ter to wait until the party had mounted, and then fire simultaneously at the Prince. The Kaffir, who was entirely ignorant of the real motive of our expedition, had only eyes for Carey. At last the moment for action came. Carey caught the horse in the meche grass and mounted, and the troopers stood ready the party's attention, and, turning around, they saw the black face of the This Tobacco is indeed an "exquisite pleasure The purest and sweetest that nature can yield," Art alding these qualities has made it a treasure, Esteemed alike by Congressman and plowman in the field. scout. Thinking that they had fallen into a strong Zulu ambush, every man considered only his own safety, Garey clapped spirs to his horse and dashed into the ravine, followed by another bullet from the Kaffir's rifle. Several of the troopers, who had got only one foot in the stirrup, clung to the pommels of their saddles. One of the troopers failed to catch his horse, and the Prince, afer hanging for a few mo-ments to the holster of his saddle, fell back exhausted, and was trappled by back exhausted, and was trampled by his horse.
