THE STARVING MOUNTAINEERS. History of the Sad Destitation in a Part of Virginia. Letter to the Balti more Day.

DANVILLE, VA., June 15 .- The average reader not familiar with the history and topography of the suffering county of Patrick might well ask, Why is it that there happens to be so much destitution in one county, while its neighbors are rolling in wealth and plenty, and why does this wail come from Patrick so suddenly and all at In the first place, Patrick's neighbors are not rolling in plenty. They, too, have suffered from last year's drought, but not so seriously, and then they are favored with better transportation facilities and were able to bring from a distance surplus necessary to make up the deficit in last year's crops. Patrick county has 13,300 inhabitants composed of strictly agricultural people. They always make their own bread, cure their own meat, spin, weave and make their own clothes in the olden style, and have ever been a free, independent and heroic people, hedged in from the outside world by the rugged peaks of the Blue Ridge mountains. There is no railroad nearer to Patrick than Burned Chimneys, in Henry county, forty miles distant, to which point the Danville and New River Narrow Gauge has recently been completed. These people have ever lived in their mountain county almost to themselves, being entirely independent of the balance of the world, and having the least possible intercourse with it. So notorious is this fact that the county has from time immemorial enjoyed the sobriquet of "The Free State of Patrick." There are no strictly wealthy people in use, I commenced a short time ago to use your Pile Clatment I experienced immediate relief. From the relief experienced in my case, as well as from the reputation so rapidly acquired by your Clatment in this vicinity, I have no hesitancy in expressing the opinion that it is the most efficient remedy for Piles ever invented. Patrick, and heretofore but few really poor were known there. All were wellto-do, independent farmers, making ample for home consumption and caring for no one. The crops of Patrick are grain and fruit. Some tobacco is cultivated in certain portions of the county. In 1879 the largest grain crops ever known were raised in the county, and everybody had wheat and corn to sell, but there were no buyers.

Being destitute of railroad facilities, and the cost of transportation by wagon across the mountains being more than the surplus grain would bring when taken to market, the people carried over to the next year enormous quantities of corn, wheat, &c. The year 1880 then found them with nearly enough old grain to carry through the twelve months. They had no way to get it to market and hence there was | This plan is in brief that the governno inducment to the farmer to pitch a | ment should purchase and own the encrop. Can it be wondered then that | tire lands of the commonwealth, levythe people of "The Free State of Pat- ing such a tax only as is necessary to rick" made the year 1880 a kind of holi- carry on affairs of State. This new plan but little attention?

It is said that during that year these people in a great number of instances attempted no grop at all, and yet there was plenty in the land. Then came 1881 with its great drought. The usual large crops were pitched that year, but the yield did not pay back the seed used in planting. Why it was that the strip of fertile land along the mountains which makes up Patrick county should have been dryer than any other part of Virginia cannot be explained, but such is the truth. It is a fact, and one that will never be forgotten by the nowwretched and famishing people, that from the 19th day of April, 1881, to the 3rd day of October of the same year, there did not fall in the county enough rain to wet a linen duster. Nothing like it was ever known in that region before. Streams, springs and wells dried up, and people had to depend upon the larger creeks and rivers for drinking water, and it became the custom for neighborhoods to club in, gather up all the barrels, casks, &c., to be found, put their teams together and haul water from the rivers to a common rendezyous, where the participants in the enterprise would repair for water. These trips to the river were made once a week and oftener if necessary. Some neighborhoods had to haul water fifteen and twenty miles. Some wheat was raised, but corn withered upon the hill, and even the stalk and root died. Fruit was a total failure also, and none was saved.

Last fall the board of supervisors of the county purchased a quantity of corn to be sold at prime cost to the needy. These brave and heroic people, who had never dreamed of coming to want, did not relish the idea of becoming beggars before the world, and they fondly hoped that with the aid the county government was offering they might hold out until the crops of this year should be gathered; but they did not know their own situation, for such was their pride that neighbor would keep from neigh-bor his true condition. But hunger forced them before the world, and hence six weeks ago, when the county treasury was exhausted, when it was discovered that there was no corn in the county; that those who had some had divided with those who had not till all was gone; that five thousand men, women and children were upon the eve of star-vation and nothing in the county to feed them upon—the wail from Patrick which has gone all over the land was heard. Men were starving almost before they knew it. A man with a family in one section, not knowing the extent of the destitution himself, thought he would economize to the last and try to make out without exposing his peverty, but if he should come to the bottom of his scanty barrel he would be as quiet as possible about it and borrow a little from his neighbor on the next section to him. When his bread was all gone and he started to borrow from his neighbor he met that neighbor on the road with parched lips, shrunken cheeks and hollow eyes, the very picture of woe and hunger, coming on the same errand —to borrow of him. Thus it happened that the county was aroused almost in a night to a realization of the fact that the people were starving and there was no bread ta appease their hunger. Such in brief is a true history of the famine. The cry for help has been heard by noble people everywhere. Danville has contributed largely; Richmond has taken prompt and vigorous action; Lynchburg has contributed, and Baltimore, as she always does, has acted nobly. It is impossible now to say whether the danger is past. There are 5.000 or more destitute people to be fed until the wheat is harvested the last of July. The question, will the wheat crop now standing supply the county with bread until the standing corn is available? is a debatable and a serious question. The supplies which Baltimore and other cities are sending reach Patrick slowly, as they have to be hauled by wagons forty-five miles. Manassas and Appomattor.

The funeral took place at Alexandria, Va., recently of Col. Wm. R. McLean, who had the singular fortune to own and reside upon the fields of Manassas and Appomattox when the two armies met at these places at the beginning and end of the war. After Manassas, anticipating continued hostilities in that neighborhood, he bought a farm near the Appomattox river, to which he removed his family. It was on this farm that Gen. Lee completed the formal act of the surrender. Pirst Virginia Wheat Received.

PETERSBURG, VA., June 23 .- The first lot of this year's crop of wheat raised in Virginia has been received here. It was raised in Chesterfield county, near this city, and is held at $1.50 per bushel. Reports from all sections of the State represent the wheat crop as the best known in years. Thousands of ladies cherish grateful remembrances of the help derived from the use of LyJia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Hop Bitters is the only thing that will surely and permanently prevent and cure. All other pretended cures only Davitt's Career.

Atlanta Constitution That a man should formulate from prison walls a programme which should command the approval of the government as the only means of pacifying the people, is a tribute which but few men enjoy. Yet such is the proud distinction of Mr. Davitt, who is now in this country or a such in the property of the province of this country on a lecturing tour.

The agitator's first experience in his young life was the eviction of his famiy by an Irish landlord, followed by a separation which found Mr. Davitt an humble worker in a cotton factory, where he had the misfortune to lose an arm. He was an earnest student, and in order to prosecute his favorite theory regarding the relations of people and soil, acquired the use of several European languages. In 1870 he was convicted of treasonable practices, and was held in Portland prison, in solitary confinement, under a sentence of fifteen years. In 1878 he was released on ticketof-leave, and coming to Boston, with the prison air yet about him, gave utterance to the doctrines of either a peasant proprietary for Ireland, or the direct ownership of the land by the government. From this declaration sprung the land league, of which body Mr. Davitt was the brains and the active officer. He was re-arrested and imprisoned, but his work still went on. and the singular spectacle was presented of a British premier proposing to the commons a measure for the creation of which its author was held in chains.

The final release of Mr. Davitt proved that the prisoner was as great as the premier, and if the premier showed nobility of character in setting at liberty the man who successfully fought him from behind the bars, the prisoner was equally noble in coming from his persecution free from rancor, bitterness or prejudice, and thinking only how he could further benefit his people. No one has been more outspoken against outrages and murder than he; and nowhere has conservative methods found a more ardent champion than in the radical advocate of "the land for the

Mr. Davitt's mission to America is to establish the fact that harmony exist in the party in Ireland; that between Parnell and himself the best of feelings exists; that while Parnell is the recognized parliamentary leader, he choses for himself to be a "free lance" among the people, to create and crystalize that public opinion which forces even the most inimical statesmen into reason and common sense. While the land league under Parnell calls for a peasant proprietary, under a plan of installment payments for fifty-two years, Mr. Davitt now advocates a more radical measure-the nationalization of the land. ay and gave their usual avocations | does not interfere with Parnell's policy, but is only an extension of it. In presenting these views to the people the utmost harmony exists, for, as Mr. Davitt says: "If the landlords are waiting for a rupture between Parnell and myself, they will have to wait twenty

Like the Opium Kater, he first uses the orug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over eating first influence the stronger which redoubles its crayings. fiames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite So every drink of liquor or dose of optum, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself.
