Washington, June 30—U. S. Jail, 9:45 a. m.—Gulteau was very restless during the most of the latter part of the night, not sleeping more than 20 minutes at a time. Then he intended, he said, to read his poem, "Simplicity." He desired to have the execution so arranged that just as he uttered the last word the drop should be sprung.

John W. Guiteau arrived at the jail at 9 o'clock, and was followed in a few minutes by Warden Crocker. These two gentlemen, with Dr. Hicks, were in consultation as to the disposition of the body.

At 9:15 the prisoner came out into the corridor and exercised for 15 minutes. He walked very briskly, making it rather difficult for his guards to keep pace with him. He generally has taken his exercise in shirt and drawers. This morning, however, he wore a pair of dark pants and had a handkerchief tied oosely about his neck. The scene about the jail this morning s unique. The office of the jail has been given up completely to a large corps of newspaper reporters, and a squad of them are scribbling away on every table, window sill, and every proection that offers a rest for paper. Many newspaper reporters remained all tions going on inside the jail. At nine o'clock, there was a constant ream of persons coming into the jail. The scene outside was like that of some great gala occasion. Some enterprising colored men had erected booths from which they dispensed lemonade, cakes and other refreshments to the weary and thirsty people who began, before nine o'clock, to assemble in the road in front of the jail.

Mounted messengers speeding to and from the city, and carriages bringing visitors to the jail, kept a continua cloud of dust hovering over the road that winds through the wide common that lies between the jail and the city. At 10:10 o'clock, Guiteau expressed a desire to take a bath, and a large tub was taken into his cell. At this hour no one save the death watch was with him. Guiteau nervously disrobed and plunged into the bath. It was quite apparent to the guard who was closely watching his every movement, that his object in asking for a bath was simply to obtain some employment that might distract his thoughts from dread contemplation of his approaching death. He evinced increased nervousness, and muncertain movements, distrait manner, and marked tremor in his tones when he attempted to speak, impressed the guard with the belief that he was rapidly weakening. The opinion is expressed by some of the jail officials that he will be unable to control his emotions when the dread moment arrives; and even if he does not com-

Two minutes later, the iron gate at the end of the corridor clicked, then Warden Crocker made his appearance, and a moment later the familiar figure of Guiteau was seen, His face was pallid and the muscles about his mouth moved pervously. Other than this, there were no signs of faltering. The procession moved quickly to the scaffold, and Guiteau ascended the twelve somewhat steep steps with as much steadiness as could be expected from a man whose arms were tightly pinioned behind him. At the last step he faltered for a moment, but was assisted by two officers who walked one upon either side. Upon reaching the platform he was placed immediately behind the drop facing to the front of the scaffold. Capt. Coleman stood upon his right, Mr. Robert Strong upon his left, and Mr. Woodward directly behind him. Mr. Jones took, a punition on the north side near the upright of the beam.
