which is giving the politicians in that sovereignty so much trouble. The villagers in the neighborhood of New York pray nightly, "from New York city picnics, politicians and pa-

Brother Barnes is not making as brilliant a success fighting the devil in Indiana as he did in the Blue Grass State. Perhaps he don't take Indiana mourners in "limber drunk" as he did in Kentucky.

Texas, which is said to have 50,000,-000 acres of school land, rapidly appreciating in value, and worth probably $100,000,000, is expected to have in the most distant future a school fund of a quarter of a billion dollars, a sum greater than the combined school fund of all the States.

The Raleigh News and Observer surmises "that the county commissioners of Mecklenburg will, at their next meeting, take steps to sue out a writ de lunatico inquirendo on the case of the CHARLOTTE OBSERVER." Nothing of that kind will be necessary in the case of the Raleigh organ, for the editor of that paper long ago fully established the fact of his lunacy.

An interesting trial was concluded in Detroit, Michigan, Saturday. A colored man and white woman, married, were arraigned under an old law of the State which prohibits the marriage of white and colored people. The law was never repealed and they were convicted under it. There are probably a hundred cases of mixed marriages in that city. The case will be carried to the Supreme Court.

Greensboro Patriot: Superintendent Scarborough does not "stick in the bark" in the matter of national aid for educational purposes in the States. He recalls Andrew Jackson's administration, when the proceeds of the sale of the public lands were distributed among the States for educational purposes. This was the beginning of the common school system.

It seems that it is not necessary to be a "suspect" in Ireland to be arrested. To associate with suspects is enough. Henry George, the American writer, has been twice arrested on this charge, getting monotonous for Mr. George, and ought to be for the American government which until late years took some pride in protecting its citizens abroad.

Here is the way North Carolina news gets mixed up sometimes. We clip from the New Orleans Times-Democrat. A full account of the affair was published inthe Obrserver several days ago from the Statesville Landmark: Statesville, N. C., is all torn up in consequence of the conduct of Prof. C. W. White, a a prominent member of society and president of a large seminary for girls in that town. He courted one of his pupils, Miss Nannie Holbrook, a wealthy girl of Statesville, but upon the night fixed peremptorily by the young lady's parents for the marriage, he was found suffering from the effects of a dose of laudanum. He subsequently fled the town, but was apprehended and taken

SENATOR HILL'S CONDITION.

The Atlanta Constitution of Sunday thus describes Senator Hill's condition: Senator Hill has not been out of bed since Thursday owing to his extremely weak condition. He was much weaker yesterday and his condition was more critical than on the previous day. It is with great difficulty that he writes, and soon he will be so weak that his writing will have to be given up entirely and when with his tongue already silenced and his fingers too weak to guide a pencil his thoughts will have to be anticipated. Senator Hill's constitution is a powerful one, however, and there is no man who can say how long it may hold

LATER: The Atlanta Constitution of yesterday says that Senator Hill was sinking rapidly and it was thought by the physicians that he could not possibly live more than three days at the furthest. enema resorted to. Senator Brown telegraphed to Washington yesterday to Sergeant-at Arms Bright, to notify him of the condition of Senator Hill, that he might inform such of the Senators and members of Congress as might desire to be present at the funeral. Thus goes out the life of Georgia's great and honored son.

THE PARTY OF THE FUTURE. Under the above head the Charleston News and Courier has the following, which contains food for thought and is worthy of the consideration of those who aspire to the leadership of the Democratic party:

The political party which is first to stop playing hide-and-seek with the people will be the political party of the future. As long as the two great political parties, the Democratic and Republican, continue their efforts to be all things to all voters, and to be, politically speaking, in two places at one and the same time, the Republican party will remain in power. These are our convictions, and they find strong confirmation in a leading article in which the New York | Mr. Darby wrote a dignified letter ac-Herald, with unusual earnestness and directness, tells a Democratic correspondent, who despairs of the country when he sees the Republicans openly using the money of the people to keep themselves in place, that the country is all right, and is waiting. "What it is "waiting for is a Democratic party which shall have conscience and sense "enough to unite on a remedy for abuses which the country sees plainly enough." The Herald says:

The American people move slowly, but they are not blind. They see what goes on. They have shown themselves for several years inclined to a change of administration. That is sufficiently proved by the very narrow majorities the Republicans have been able to maintain in both Houses of Congress, and by the result of the last two Presidential elections. But when the great American voter changes his servants he means to have a better set in the place of those he turns out, and on the whole he is right. What encouragement did intelligent voters-and it is those who control the destinies of parties—what promise of better things did these get from the ridiculous attitude of the Democratic party in 1880, when its Presidential candidate wrote congratulatory letters to Greenback candidates in Maine, and reassuring letters to high tariff men in New Jersey, and the party which had declared itself for honest administration and a tariff for revenue only had for its chief manager Mr. Barnum, an extreme protectionist, known chiefly in connection with "mules?" What is the use of Senator Pendleton making perfunctory orations about a permanent civil service, when an official report proves that the Democratic Senators, when they were lately in the majority, made a sweep of the employees of their own body?

This is a just description of some of the self-made difficulties of the Democratic position, but the case is not without precedent. The Republican party is in the situation that the Democratic call it, but haven't a word to say against | party was in for several years before "Its leaders quarrelled among themselves, as the Republican leaders now; they got up sham issues, as the Republicans now; they went into job-bing and pilfering, as the Republicans now; and the Democratic Jay Hubbell of 1858 and 1860 levied his assessments upon old and young, men, women and children, in precisely the style and with all the shameless audacity of the Republican Jay Hubbell of the present year. The Democratic party was defeated, and has been among the outs for more than twenty years. How was this accompl shed. The Herald says:

"Over against that party, effete, sel-fish, corrupt, stood the Republicans, then young, vigorous, aggressive and with wit enough to be thoroughly united on one policy, which they urged with one voice everywhere and at all times. They were not airaid. They tolerated no marplots or feeble trimmers in their own ranks The prospect of defeat did not scare them, and the actual defeat in 1856 only made them bolder and more outspoken. They were not the wishywashy stuff to sit by silent or without prompt denunciation it one of their Senators should have usen in his place and made a set speech in opposition to their policy, as Senator Voorhees did the other day without hearing a word of reproof from his D. macratic associates. The Republicans of a quarter of a century ago had a policy and faith in it and courage to declare it and they after a while carried the people with them and got the voters to turn out the corrupt and demoralized party in power. They did this in the face of political assessments, of jobbery and maladministration of all kinds. The plain truth is that when the people want a change, and believe that they can make it to their advantage, no assessments, no jobs can keep them from doing their will. Whenever they see, opposed to the Republicans of the present day, a party with honest, courageous and sensible leaders, who will stand by the people if they are elected, they will put that party in jower. Until then they will probably sick to the Republican party. In our belief they are wise in so doing. If the Democratic party ever expects to cope successfully with the Republican party it must have a policy, and must go before the country on issues squarely and unequivocally defined, it must be a positive not a mere negative policy, which when analyzed means "anything to beat the Republicans." but both times released. This must be This has been the trouble with the Democratic party ever since the war, and it is the trouble with it to-day. It never had an opportunity it did not let slip through some gross blundering misparty by its unbridled corruption and disregard of law opened the gates to victory some stupid Democratic leader in-> special business to slam them and bolt Thus it has been for years and thus it will be until the Democratic party learns, in the language of Dennis Kearnev to "pool its issues" and select leaders that will work in unison, instead of each one trying to lead off on his own hook and on a platform of his own.

HANDLING COTTON.

We clip the following pertinent remarks on the subject of preparing cotton for market from the Raleigh News and Observer, and commend them to the attention of planters:

Now before the cotton season opens, we wish to impress upon our friends the advantages of having their cotton clean, well ginned, and properly graded before shipment. The South loses many millions of dollars each season by mixing good cotton with an indifferent article. It sells not according to the best part of it, but according to the worst. Again, we lose heavily by not having the staple clean, free from dirt, mud and leaf. Slight specks detract from the value of the article, while sand and mud render it almost unmerchantable. Cotton ought to be carefully handled through every operation. There are some manufacturers who make it a point to buy, at greatly depreciated prices, cotton of good staple that has been stained or is leafy. They get it at low prices, and then use it to advantage. A sandy cotton, as we understand, no manufacturer wants. It has to be cleaned before it can be worked. Our Raleigh cotton has always sold well. It is of a grade similar to the old Anson county cotton, which, we learn, has for years been largely shipped to the Mediteranean for some peculiar use. It sells well up. The prospect is that cotton will bring a fine price this season; but poor cotton will never be in demand. The true secret is to bestow extra care upon it from the time it is picked until it is sold. A New York paper informs us that "Providence will take care of Mr. Tilden's health." If that be so the presumption is that the old gentleman will be all right. Mr. Jee Dobson was renominated for solicitor at the Yadkinville convention

BUSINESS PROSCRIPTION FOR OPINION'S SAKE.

Elsewhere to-day we publish a manly letter from Mr. Frank H. Darby, the nominee of the Liberal party for judge in the Wilmington district. Mr. Darby was chairman of the New Hanover Democratic executive committee, and had been chosen as city attorney by the morning. The first witness called was Democratic board of aldermen. As his views in opposition to the present sysof county government were open and pronounced, without changing his polltics he was nominated as a candidate for judge by the Liberal party State convention held in Raleigh in June. cepting the nomination, stating that, in his opinion, the office should be nonpolitical. Whereupon the Democratic board of aldermen demanded his resignation as city attorney, and the letter we publish to-day is in reply to that demand.

Mr. Darby strikes out vigorously from the shoulder, and hits his antagonists some telling licks. He is made to feel the force of partisan proscription, but it has made him twenty thousand votes in North Carolina. The lesson has taught thousands of men who have heretofore co-operated with the Democratic party that to oppose the "machine" bosses in this State is to become a political outcast. But the spirit of intolerance cannot prevail. These proscriptionists overshot the mark when they hurled this shaft at Mr. Darby, for the great Democratic masses of this State, whatever the machine runners may be, are not proscriptionists, and have no sympathy with it. They believe in free thought, free discussion, and a free utterance of honest convictions whether they agree with or differ from them, and the would-be dictators who would drive men into playing the role of dumb slaves or abject followers will find that they have mistaken the temper of the sovereign people of this State. It is too late in the day for proscription in North Carolina, and they who attempt it are simply inviting and hastening their own utter overthrow.

PENSIONING CONFEDERATE SOL-DIERS.

We clip the following from a Chicago

paper: "Mr. R. T. Bennett, Democratic candidate for Congress-man-at-large in North Carolina, is around publicly advocating the pensioning of Confederate soldiers by the government. Mr. Bennett would reap quite as bountiful a harvest peddling peanuts in a grave-

When we saw it charged by papers opposed to Mr. Bennett that he advocated in his first speech at Raleigh the pensioning of Confederate soldiers, we doubted it, and took it to be either a mistake on the part of those who made the charge or a campaign canard, such as are sometimes put affoat. But it seems he did take such a position, advocating, if we are not mistaken, pensioning, not by the general government but by the State. We take it, however, that Mr. Bennett intended this more as an evidence of his respect and regard for the Confederate soldier than a proposition in downright earnest, although he might be willing to tax the people for such a purpose. It is one of those impracticable measures that he knows very well can never be carried out nor even attempted in serious earnest, and he has probably dropped it from his speeches, as we have heard nothing of it in his recent utterances.

It was a blunder for Mr. Bennett, for it will be worked into a conspicuous place in Northern election literature, and made to do effective campaign service in the coming Congressional elections on the other side of the line. That's about all that it will accomplish, but that is too much.

The Philadelphia Record says: So profound is the indifference of the masses of the people to mere party movements that no appeals to partisan spirit appear capable of arousing them.

Gambetta's Sorrow.

When Gambetta's mother died he was greatly overcome. Mr. Edward King tells the Boston Journal of what happened Gambetta received the dispatch announcing her death. He fell on a couch in the Chamber of Deputies in uncontrollable emotion. Nowhere else than in France could the following scene have occurred:

"Enemies, doubters, sneerers, even the irreconcilable clericals, crowded around him and offered their hands, which he grasped one after another in management, and when the Republican | a dazed, uncertain manner, as if the whole scene were densely unreal to him." He at once left to attend the funeral. He was of very humble origin but he never forgot his mother. We have been told of two North Carolinians in the years gone who became ashamed of their origin-honest but humble-and the one would not recognize the mother and the other the father. We knew both men of whom this was reported and could not respect either. It is a very bad heart that is ashamed of its parents or that treats parents with indignity and contumely. All honor to Gambetta! The first orator in France, he yet breaks down in an agony of heart-pain when the obscure but true mother sinks into the arms of kingly

What Our Military Costs. Philadelphia Record

The United States is a peace loving nation, and not anxious to be at war; but we spend more for military purposes than anybody. The Congress whose session has just closed, appropriated for army, navy, fortifications and military pensions, all military purposes, with the clerical force employed on pensions, $160,000,000.

This is the largest sum spent in peace for military purposes by any nation on the globe. For the last year reported, France, 1881, spent $125,000,000; Germanv, 1882, $109,000,000; Great Britain, 1881, $136,700,000, and Russia, 1881, $117,-000,000-all the other nations of Europe spending each a much less sum. As two-thirds of our expenditure is spent on men who are not withdrawn from the active industries of life, the loss is less than in the case of the expenditures of European nations; but the bare fact remains that labor is today more taxed for military purposes in the United States than in any other civilized country.

THE VIRGINIA "DUEL." Trial of Garland for the Killing of Addison. MEHERRIN, VA., August 15.—The second day's trial of Richard D. Garland, at Lunenburg Court House, for the murder of James Addison, of Bal-timore, commenced at 9:30 o'clock this E. T. Orgain, an intimate friend of the murdered man. He testified to know-ing W. W. Boswell, brother-in-law of the girl, and calling at Wedderburn's saw mill and informing Addison that Garland was down the road waiting to see him, and of Addison's going to meet Garland accompanied by the witness and John E. Eanes, the subsequent introduction of Garland and Addison, and the duel which followed. The witness stated he thought Addison's pistol was fired once but after being wounded that the deceased told the witness he fired twice. At this point the pistol was exhibited to the court and the jury, when the witness said that he had examined the pistol after Addison had been shot and found one barrel empty and the impression of the hammer of the pistol on four of the cartridges which had failed to explode. After Garland had exhausted the loads in his pistol he asked Boswell for another. When Boswell handed Garland another pistol, Addison remarked, "foul another pistol, Addison remarked, "foul play; my pistol has refused to fire but once and I have no other." Boswell then remarked, "I am satisfied gentlemen if you are." Addison next said, "well, boys, I am done for, I have been shot through the bowels." Garland next replied, "I have been shot through the

At the conclusion of this portion of the testimony the letters which caused the duel and which have already been published, written by Miss Mamie Hatchell to Garland and those written to Miss Hatchell by Garland were read
