BENJAMIN HARVEY HILL.

Sketch of the Life of the Great Geor-

Atlanta Post-Appeal. Benjamin Harvey Hill was born at Hillsbore, Jasper county, Ga., September 14, 1823. He graduated from the University of Georgia with the class of 1844, receiving the highest honors. He was admitted to the bar in the course of the following year, and made his mark soon afterward in the case of Jordan vs. Jordan, which first came up in the Superior court of Troup county, where he obtained a verdict. Throughout the progress of the lengthy and complicated litigation which ensued, and which finally terminated in his defeat before the Supreme court, he not only displayed extraordinary legal capa-city and oratorical power, but evinced that unvielding devotion to a cause which always compels respect and admiration. The same qualities made famous at a later date the hard-fought case of Choice vs. the State, wherein he as zealously battled for his client's life as though his

In his youth and early manhood he is said to have been a constant student of Cicero, and to the influence of the master are to be traced many or the excel-lencies which lent grace and vigor to the productions of the scholar. Henry Clay was also one of his beau ideals and here again appears the wonderful facility of an appropriative mind to seize upon and profit by the nobler characteristics of its model

HIS ENTRANCE INTO POLITICS. In politics Mr. Hill was originally a Whig; having been sent to the State Legislature in 1851 as a representative from that party. When the Whigs as an organization ceased to exist, he affiliated with the American transfer of the state of iated with the American or Know-Nothing party, and in 1855 became their candidate for Congress against Hiram Warner, the Democratic nominee. He was defeated, though only by an insignificant majority. In 1856 he may be said to have first become widely distinguished as a popular orator. He was that year a presidential elector on the Fillmore ticket, and from the day on which he made the first grand effort in support of his candidate, must be dated his recognition as the leader of his party

During the same canvass be met upon the stump Mr. Stephens at Lexington, and Mr. Toombs at Washington, and achieved, his friends have claimed, victory over both. Out of the former of these political encounters proceeded a controversy with Mr. Stephens, which finally drew forth a challenge from that gentleman to personal combat. This challenge a commendable spirit of propriety induced Mr. Hill to decline.

IN THE CONFEDERACY. In 1859 he was elected a Senator in the Georgia Legislature, where he remained up to the time his State seceded. Having again been chosen a presiden-tial elector in 1860, he canvassed the State in the interest of the Bell and Everett ticket. He was at this time a strong Union man, and as such became a delegate to the Secession Convention of 1861. In this body he warmly advocated the Union, until a test vote had been taken, when, seeing the case was hopeless, he yielded, and upon the final ballot assented to the popular measure, though against his own judgment. During the same year he was sent to the Previsional Congress, at Montgomery, and later to the Confederate Senate, at Richmond, where, both as chairman of the judiciary committee, and upon the floor of the Senate, he rendered the most faithful and efficient service. Mr. Davis is said to have honored no other Senator with such confidence as he reposed in him; for, though originally a Union man, when once he had joined hands with the Confederacy he became one of its most zealous champions.

TROUBLE IN THE SENATE.

A personal encounter is said to have occurred in the Senate Chamber of the Confederate Congress between Mr. Hill and Hon. Wm. L. Yancey, of Alabama. An unfortunate affair concerning which no particulars were ever reliably furnished, the chamber having been in secret session at the time and there being no official publication of the

The Triumph of Temperance. New Orleans Times-Democrat.

One of the strongest arguments that the temperance orators make against whiskey is the row of statistics they produce about its consumption and the evils it entails. They show that intoxicating drinks cost more than all our churches and our schools; that the amount spent on whiskey annually would feed and clothe all the orphans and widows of the country, and much more to the same effect. This great statistical argument, on which Gough and his followers depend so largely in their campaigns will soon be lost to them forever, if we may believe the testimony of one of the largest distillers of that great whiskey city, Peoria, Ill. Peoria is beyond dispute the whiskey centre of the world. It manufactures enough whiskey every day to keep the whole town drunk throughout the year; and the distilleries turn out more gallons of liquor than the Illinois carries gallons of water by the town. On the liquor question, therefore, it and the distillers have a right to speak authoritatively, and very gloomily do they speak of the situation.

Mr. Martin, who is said to be the est and most experienced distiller in Peoria, writes in the gloomiest vein to one of the newspapers of that town. There are now 150,000,000 gallons of whiskey in this country, but 90,000,000 gallons of it are locked up in bond, and the distillers seem unable to sell it. The foreign demand has fallen off to almost nothing, the home consumption is yearly decreasing, and yet the distillers keep on manufacturing, hoping that there will be a change and an improvement "The 50,000,000 American people," he declares, in tones of the greatest regret and the profoundest designer, "drink less whiskey than the 25,000,000 did thirty years ago." This terrible result is due to two causes, lager beer, "the worst enemy whiskey has to face in the United States to-day," and the temperance wave which has just swept through the West. Of the latter Martin is in great dread; it is already affecting the interests of Peoria. Should the distillers of that city fall beneath this opposition, he predicts that the temperance wave will sweep everything triumphantly before it in the West, and we will become a sober na-

A Whole Brigade of Snakes.

Last Friday Capt. John R. Stockard and his son, Dr. Kivet Stockard, were driving along and discovered a very large snake of the kind generally known as the "highland moccasin. They determined to kill it and at once discovered that its behavior was unusual for a snake and an investigation was made. The old snake was cut open and they commenced taking out the young ones. This was continued until forty-three were taken out, which averaged about nine inches in length. This was a large family of snakes, and must have been about all that the old snake, if not very large, could carry with any degree of ease.

Would Pay Ten Dollars per Bottle

for it. Brunswick county. Va., Nov. 5, 1881.

I have been entirely cured of a most fearful looking and painful sore on my ankle, by the use of M.s. Joe Person's valuable Remedy. It came more than twelve months ago, very much like a ring worm. I painted it with tinc. lodine. It became a very painful and bad looking place, then I commenced to try everything I could think or hear of, until it became so very painful that I could scarcely walk. Then I went to the best doctor in the whole country for advice, who told me he could cure me if I would take to my bed and there remain for four or five weeks, and if I did not do this pretty soon it could not be cured at all; the bone would become diseased, and my foot would have to be taken off. Imagine how I feit to the bone would become diseased, and my foot would have to be taken off. Imagine how I felt to be told that I would have to lose my foot, or to give up all business? Mither of the remedies would have ruined me. Mind you, this was the advice of one of the best doctors in the State of North Carolina, and this conversation took place last February. I continued to burn, as he advised, with caustic until September, but found no benefit at all from his treatment. I was then advised by my friends to try Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy. I ordered ha'f pints from her, and took the first d'se on the 17th of September, using the Wash also, and now I am a well man, the sore is entirely cured, and I can walk as far, dance as much and jump as high as any man. Put me back to the first of September, let me know as much as I now do of the merits of Remedy, and I would not hesitate to pay ten dollars per bottle for it if I could not get it for any less. I think more of it than any medicine I ever heard of. It is not only the best remedy in the world to purify the blood, but I believe it will cure all skin and blood diseases, and it will certainly cure a love of strong eases, and it will certainly cure a love of strong drink. It gives me pleasure to furnish this for publication as I know there are many sufferers who would be cured, could they know of and obtain Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy.

Very truly and respectfully,

JOS. R. MASON, JR.,

Dear Madam: —In reply to your letter asking what I think of your Remedy. I would say that the sales have been very fair, and so far as I can learn the Remedy has been very satisfactory to my customers who have used it, especially so in the case of a little girl of this city, ten years of age, who was troubled for a long time with sores breaking out over the face and neck having the appearance of Scrofula, and which had resisted the usual alterative treatment for a long time. She took four bottles of the Bitters last spring, when the sores entirely disappeared, and up to this time she has had no return of them, her skin looking as fair and clear as any one's.

in Georgia.

As an evidence of his indomitable energy and devotion to the cause of his adoption, it is sufficient to say that when toward the close of the war, disheartened by defeat, exhaustion of resources, constant desertion of soldiery and the inactivity of statesmen, the popular courage dwindled down to zero, Hill was journeying-hurrying' over the country, endeavoring from the rostrum to breathe new life and infuse new hope into the flagging spirits of the people.

AFTER THE WAR. At the close of the war Mr. Hill was arrested and confined in Fort La Fayette. When released he returned to Georgia and devoted himself to his profession. A few years later he caused considerable excitement by the vigorous protests which he entered from time to time against the iron policy of the Federal Government toward the South, and the high-handed measures of the Reconstructionists-first in a speech at Davis' Hall, and afterwards in his "Notes on the Situation" and in The "Notes on the Situation," which appeared at intervals in the daily papers, became famous for their elegance of style as well as for their denunciatory strength. In the piling up of vitu-perative epithets it has been aptly said, Forty-fourth Congress to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Garnett McMillan, and at the expiration of his term, was re elected to the Forty-fifth Congress, In January, 1877, he resigned to accept a seat in the Senate, to which the Legislature had just elected him. It was during his service in the House that he engaged in the memorable discussion with Mr. Blaine, which was probably the first effort that brought him into great national prominence. His first fight against the admission of Kellogg, and later, upon Mahone, not only served to maintain the reputation he had before achieved, but broadened his fame for oratory and carried it to a height above that of his most eloquent compeers.

The term for which he was elected desired to remain in the public service. Virtually he held a life office. His character is too widely understood to require a word of comment. His abilities shone forth like stars from the night of contemporary mediocrity.
