ARLINGTON, Aug. 15, 1882. To the Editor of The Observer.

There are various much more comfortable means of locomotion, in travelling down the stream of time, than riding double on the ragged edge of a bare-back mule in hot weather, and it took several days of rest to recover our usual equanimity.

The person who sighed "for a lodge in some vast wilderness, some boundless contiguity of shade," could be easily accommodated hereabouts without rushing into poetry, or making such a fuss about his melancholy feelings, though for our own part just at this moment, we would rather be in Charlotte, at the beer saloon of Charles Roediger, moralizing over a foaming schooner fresh from the famed gelid vaults of our friend Gambrinus.

"Whose land is this?" we inquired of a barefooted negro whom we saw sitting on a fence and picking his teeth with a jack knife." "'Squire Hinson's,"he replied and we

"Whose land is this?" we enquired of a colored matron who was sunning the variegated bed-clothing of a cabin hard by, which resembled the hut in the picture of the Arkansas Traveller. "'Squire Hinson's, to be sho'," she

Continuing our journey for several miles still further on we asked the same question of a white man digging a well, to which we recived the stereotyped reply for this part of the country, "'Squire Hinson's, sir."

It needs considerable skill to pilot the way to Arlington where 'Squire Hinson resides, as the roads are so sinuous, deviating and conflicting. The sign posts en route are like angel's visits, and when found the directions are generally obliterated, and frequently nothing is visible thereon, save a weather-beaten work of art representing a hand with all the fingers gone, excepting a broken thumb pointing significantly upwards, as if directing attention to regions beyond the skies.

monument smiling at Grief," there came along at a moderately slow pace, a solitary ox harnessed to the shafts of a wagon which contained a colored man and two women, with several bundles of oats in the sheaf, all going to the camp meeting at Morning Glade church. They informed me that all the land in sight belonged to Squire Hinson, so that the very atmosphere we breathed seemed to belong to this patriarch and in the secret, chambers of triarch, and in the secret chambers of our heart we couldn't help wishing they had him in the south of Ireland.

We were told that Arlington was "four miles off," to "take de fust road to your left den you gome to Mr. Floor your left, den you come to Mr. Floes, but you don't go there, but you take de fust road to Mr. Tom Ellington's, den you sees Mr. Steve Connell's, and you go down de hill, past 'Squire Hinson's meadow patch, whar he cuts de hay, den you go up de hill to de sweet gum, and turn round and dere you is." "And where am I, Aunty, when I turn "round," said I.

"Why lawd-a mussy! you is at de sweet gum tree—thought eberybody knowed whar de sweet gum tree is." Pleading our ignorance of the locality so lucidly described, where the beacon tree stood as a guide board for the benefit of manking, with out confessing our inability to distinguish a gum from a poplar we inquired "how far was it from the sweet gum tree to the objective point of our destination."

"Oh!" said she, "if you is a preacher, (and you looks like a real good one) you is only losing time a talking predestination, for we is all Arican Methodists, and ef you comes to de church to-morrow night, you will see us all walking around the walls of Jericho, two and two abreast, like a span of mules, and Brudder Sam Alexander a-toting of Gabriel's horn.'

Assuring her that amidst a variety of employments, in a somewhat chequered career, he had never been called upon to preach, and that we would endeavor to be present at the procession "around the procession to be present at the p the walls of Jericho," she said "ef you is a looking for work, de white folks is all a gone to meeting, and dey took dere mules and hosses along for safety, and dey locked de kitchens and de smoke houses, and dey barred all de doors, and left de dogs at home, so Lawd a mussy: if you is a tramp you'd better git up and git." With this fling at our ancient and honorable profession, the mild-eyed ox with his precious freight departed at a lively gait for the walls of Jericho, leaving us in a mood as pensive as Calypso mourning the departure of Ulysses.

Field upon field of waving sunlit corn, field after field of cotton with white, crimson and lilac blooms, as far as the eye could reach-upland, lowland and to Squire Hinson, whose name was mentioned so frequently during the day and always with respect and esteem, until in the classic parlance of Dennis Kearney we could write his apotheosis in the category of "bloated

At length we reach Arlington, which is prettily situated on an elevation, whose base is washed by a babbling brook which answers the purpose of the river Jordan of old, in furnishing pure water for the impressive religious ceremony of Baptism, which takes place here once a year. It is scarcely necessary to state that Arlington belongs to Squire Hinson, as do the grist mills, flour mills, cotton gins, saw mills ravines, digging holes in the hill sides and brick yards it contains, and the to no purpose. very church on the summit of the hill, with sufficient land around it for a of Ponce de Leon-like the lost tribes camping ground and grave yard, is the of Israel refuses to be found, and in its handsome gift of the Lord of the Manor to the large and rapidly increasing Baptist congregation of which he is a devout member. We were struck with the perfect condition of the improved machinery in all of the mills, and the superior quality of the flour manufactured, with the various ingenious labor saving contrivances and the neatness and business like manner with which everything was conducted, showing the eagle eye and commanding spirit of a master mind. We prophesy a future for Arlington, when her enterprising proprietor has time to lay out the embryo city -when she has stores, hotels, a jail and a calaboose, gas works and a town pump-when she has railroads leading to Harrisburg and Matthews Station. and the steam whistle of her first locomotive keeps time to the music of her town clock. We hope to see all these expectations realized in the life time of the founder of Arlington, as Alexander the Great saw the city he founded on the shores of Mareotis, rise "as from the stroke of an enchanter's wand"—before the stir-ring scenes of his earthly labors cease and he rests at peace in the bosom of his Father and his God.

We found Squire Hinson, who greatly resembles King Solomon (except in the number of his wives) at his country seat a mile from Arlington, surrounded by his household gods, on the verandah of a handsome, commodious, two story brick house, where, as it was about the time when ereolites and meteors were expected to be rushing through the sky he said to us: Look! how the floor of Heaven

Is thick inlaid, with patines of bright gold, There's not the smallest orb which thou behold's But in his motion, like an angel sings, Still quiring to the young ere'd cherubim. To which, endeavoring to keep pace with the poetical tenor of his remarks, we replied: The thick black cloud is cleft, and still The moon is at its side, Like waters shot from some high crag, The lightning falls with never a Zag,

"Turning the accomplishments of many years into an hour glass," we talked on various subjects long and earnestly, until it seemed as if the very witching time of midnight was near, when "church yards yawn and Hell itself breathes forth contagion to the world" "when weariness can spore world," "when weariness can snore upon the flint, when restive sloth finds the down pillow hard," and then to bed, to sleep, perchance to dream of walking in procession round the walls of Jericho. and seeing Gabriel in the person of Sam Alexander, with a linen duster and a stove pipe tooting the "good time coming" on a horn.

The sun was streaming through the window curtains of our bedroom when we arose refreshed the following morn, and after a stroll amidst beds of pansies, violets, asphodel and hyacinths before the "toesin of the soul," the breakfast bell, summoned us to the dining-room, we were ready for a visit to the Surface Hill gold mining property, some four miles distant.

Before reaching this famous property we saw many white and colored people of both sexes lively engaged in washing for gold. Their implements were of the rudest kind, and consisted of rockthe rudest kind, and consisted of rockers made of hollow logs, about four feet long, which they filled with dirt and turning on water allowed it to flow through the muddy contents. After the dissolving mud was carried off the remaining rediment showed fine and coarse particles of the precious metal, and frequently nuggets of various sizes, from one to lifteen pennyweights in value.

weights in value. It was easy to discern from the expressions on the countenances of the gold seekers, who were the fortunate or unfortunate ones as we passed them by, but the best evidence of success laid shining in the largemouthed bottle on the stump (once a pickle bottle), but now promoted to be the treasury department of a mining syndicate of one barelegged colored man and two colored children in their shirt-tails. The country was beautiful, and was rendered still more pictur-While in a deep study over one of these peculiar triumphs of genius, and of artistic improvements on Nature in feeling somewhat like "Patience on a the way of decorative art. Gay cartoons of Holman's liver pad, and St. Jacob in the attitude of St. George, on a jackass dispensing miraculous cures to a recumbent alligator, handsome fulllength portraits of Mrs. Winslow with her soothing syrup, Mrs. Lydia E. Pink-ham with her vegetable compound, from the drug itores of Dr. Joseph Davidson, at Charlotte, aderned the fences and most prominent trees, and Barrett's circus advertisements helped to make a Panorama such as in all our travels we had never seen before.

But at length we reach cavernous abysses in the earth at the Surface Hill Gold Mine, down which Empedocles were he alive might leap, and leave behind no further record than the mystic abyss of Ætna's crater has so far yield-ed, regarding that heathen lunatic, who wishing to be considered a God, is handed down to posterity as the most famous ass of ancient or modern times, to be rivalled only by Chas. J. Guiteau and his relative who did the talking for

More than fifty years ago this mine was already famous. It has never been half worked or developed except in the rudest sort of way. It has been, and still seems to be the rendezvous for all persons who are "hard up," who wish to scratch round to pick up a few dollars without labor. After a heavy rain negroes and white persons ramble over and around it in every direction, through the fields and woods to look for nuggets which the rain exposes. Sometimes they pay toll to the owners of the property, a custom very much "more honored in the breach than in the observance." Specimens have been found frequently of the value of seventy-five dollars, and the original owner has been known to have taken from a pocket in one morning no less a sum than seventy-five thousand penny-Some years before the war a negro named Dick Harris, (whose brother, Si Harris, a venerable old grey-headed African of seventy-five summers we have seen and talked to), used to live at the present old Blair mansion. As a slave, the legend goes, he bought his time and paid his master a pint of gold per day. Becoming too insolent and independent he was taken to Charlotte and sold to a planter who took him to South Carolina, where during the war he died. Sometime before his death he wrote to his brother Si to look in a certain place on the surface Hill gold mining tract and there he would find his scales for weighing gold, his pan and mortar, and other tools. They were all found in the place described, but a certain rock weighing, it is said, some three hundred pounds, which was very rich in free gold, which his brother had helped him to put in a wheelbarrow, but which he buried without a meadow land, we passed—all belonging | single witness to assist him, they have never been able to find, although he gave directions where to look for it. So many years have elapsed since the rock was buried, at a time when the cultivated fields were a thickly wooded wilderness, that all directions about "three-pronged trees," and other features, are valuless. But the spirit of enquiry is still rife in the neighborhood of the famous mine, and many a person is still hunting for that three hundred pounds of gold. We have often met old Si Harris, like the bridegroom of Ginevra, "an old man wandering as in quest of something" with pick and pan, roaming the fields with bowed head exploring the water courses and

A GENEROUS ACT

That Will be Appreciated by all Who Care for Their Complexion and Skip.

It is not generally known that the nervous system has a wonderful influence over the skin, but this is a fact known to medical men who have given much of their time to the study of diseases of the skin. No one can have a clear and fair complexion unmixed with blotches or pimples who is very nervous.

nervous system always beautifies the complexion and removes roughness and dryness of the skin. Some skin diseases are not attended by visible signs on the surface, but an intolerable itching that renders life interable.

We copy the following deserving and interesting compliment from the Tribune, which says: "Dr. C. W. Benson's New Remedy, 'Skin Cure,' is received by the public with great confidence, and it is regarded as a very generous act on the Doctor's part to make known and prepare for general use his valuable and favorite prescription for the treatment of skin diseases, after having devoted almost his entire life to the study and treatment of nervous and skin diseases, in which he took great delight. He was for a number of years Physician in charge of the Maryland Infirmary on Dermatology and anything from his hands is at once accepted as authority and valuable. The remedy is fully the article to attack the disease, both internally, through the blood, and externally through the absorbents, and is the only reliable and rational mode of treatment. These preparations are only put up for general use after having been used by the Doctor in Lis private practice for years, with the greatest success, and they fully merit the confidence of all classes of sufferers from skin diseases." This is for sale by all druggists Two bottles, internal and external treatment, in one package. Don't be persuaded to take any other. It costs one dorlar.
