Paradise---Pen Pictures of Places and Things .-- She Can't Tell All She Saw --- A Country Where Nature Has Lavished Her Beauties, and Where Ithe Health and Sport Seeker Can be Accommodated.

CHARLOTTE, August 30, 1882. To the Editor of The Observer. pened to the man, but as his expression was placid I knew there was no trouble hidden behind the abrupt command, and so with the alacrity of an obedient spouse I hastened to comply with my Prince's orders. A little later his royal highness vouchsafed to explain. He had sold some property at a handsome advance, and feeling flush and able to take a good long holiday, he wanted his Clo (me) to share it with him. "Besides," said my gentle despot, "you've been writing to THE OBSERVER, and I know by sad experience that when the pen disease once has you in its clutches you're done for, and I lose my little wife until she recovers." We were to leave the children with one of his relatives who would coddle and spoil them for a fortnight he said, and give me something to do in restoring household discipline when we got back to our Charlotte lares and penates. Meanwhile we were to mount a pair of mountain ponies he had purchased and go where and when fate and the fancies might direct. "We'll leave your trunks and all your fol-de-rols at my aunt's," said his mightiness. "Put on your blue flannel dress, your stout shoes, and your broad brimmed felt, stuff your saddle-pockets with what underclothing and toilette articles you can carry, and lock everything else in your Saratogas." Of course I was sorry to leave the children two long weeks, for they never have been away from me before, but John's word is law in his little kingdom. so I word is law in his little kingdom, so I Walker made so homey for us that my pets called her grandma before they had been twenty-four hours under her hospitable roof. I shall never forget the halcyon days we have spent there this summer, the plain rooms, the clean, cool, comfortable beds, the wonderful counterpanes, marvels of needle work, the bright bunches of geranium in the yard, the quaint borders of box, the delicious water in the old brown well, the balmy air, sweet with the breath of a thousand flowers, the great apples, the peaches and melons, and the lovely lady who presides over all these with a natural grace and dignity both winning and tascinating. Oh, my Charlotte sisters, who wear yourselves out every summer in a vain quest for recreation and health at the centres of fashion, hie

you to that neat private hostelry in Valleytown for a season, and you'll never wish for another summer resort than that. You don't suppose, Colonel OBSERVER that I am intending to tell you of all the places we went to, or all that befell us on our journey. If you do, you don't know Prince John, who says "boil it down Clo; give the Colonel the cream of it, but do leave something to the imagination of his readers. Besides I'm not going to have every fellow that says howdy to me put in as an appendix, so you've been in the mountains old boy, cutting around with your wife Darby and Joan fashion. They mustn't know 'twas we, but think 'twas one of the other fellows." Its only on my promise to obey that my lord consents to my sending you this, my last letter of the season. Instead of details of route and journey, you shall have a few pictures of places and things that made of these were the upper and lower Nan-tahela districts. The first, about Munday's, has been often described by wrijustice to the beauty of the situation, the good cheer of the house, the forest a vivid impression on my mind. Two ters who could come nearer to doing sports, and the gamey trout of the stream that dashes down the rocky glens and sends its exulting, never ceasing song, echoing through the majestic forests that line its banks and form green arches high above its fast flowing waters. If Munday were to put out the old fashioned tavern sign, "Enter-tainment for man and beast," it would have a breadth of significance far beyond any that legend conveys in less favored lands, for while the indoor cheer would tempt the sated palate of an epicure, and make the chronic dys-peptic forswear his graham bread, the glorious gallop through the land, led by the music of two hounds, the eager fight with the bright beauty that is making your reel sound its clickety click, and all the various woodland sports that belong to the place, give a meaning to that one word-entertainment—that can be appreciated only by those who have enjoyed it all. My Prince and I took it all in, and if any doubt this statement and say I am over enthusiastic, let them try it a week and then tell how they feel. All visitors don't stop at Munday's. Many carry camp equipage and settle down in one of the numerous lovely nooks on the forest, but broken by occasional clearings with their cabins, orchards and cornfields. There are one or two picturesque little tub mills where the neighbors carry their corn to be ground -mills that would please an artist more than they did Prince John who said "such water powers as these ought to have something on them worthier of their strength than these insignificant

"I tell you what, Clo," said he in one of his poetic bursts, "if I were the Naid of that branch I'd sweep that pole affair off my track quicker than you could say Jack Robinson. I would not let it hang on my fair skirts like a chinquepin bur on my mare's tail."

"But John," said I, "it answers these people's purposes for the time being, and hurts no one." "Yes it does," was his answer, "for it says to every traveler, we of these parts are satisfied with our little and don't care to be disturbed by the bustling and busy world outside.' For once my Prince was wrong, but you would not have made him see it. for he felt that the poor little tub mill was a profanation of the beauty of nature had lavished there. Oh! the grand trees, oak and chestnut, hickory, birch, laurel and poplar of these woods, and the grace of the great pendulous vines clinging to and swinging around them. What puny efforts to imitate nature we make in our city parks, of which by the way, no place has enough, and how poorly the best of them compare with these grand and glorious woods! For a rough mountain road commend me to that by which you descend from the summit of the gap into the Nanta-hela valley. I should call it the Christian's path, for it is narrow, steep and stony. Our sure-footed nags went down, down down with never a stumble, but

Dry Goods, Clothing, &c. BACK FROM THE MOUNTAINS I was glad when we got out of the laurely than the state of the laurely than the l wall on either side and saw the level Wall on either side and saw the level ground ahead, and our ponies must have shared my feelings for they pricked up their ears, whinnied in duet and broke into a lively canter. I said as much to John, who laughingly pooh-poohed my idea, and reckoned "they smelt Nelson's oats." Nelson's was our intended stopping Nelson's was our intended stopping place. We found it to consist of two old and one new cabins, with the usual concomitants of stables, sheds, loom and spinning wheel. Nelson is a young, energetic farmer, with a wife fitted to be his mate, the two, a kind, hospitable To the Editor of The Observer.

The day after I mailed my last letter to you my liege lord, whom I call the Prince, suddenly appeared before me, and after kissing our pets and a similar little exchange between us he startled me by saying in those potent tones, which experience has taught me admit of no gainsaying, "Pack up, Clo; we must start out of here this evening." I could not understand what had happened to the man, but as his expression loss in the two, a kind, hospitable couple, with their parents and one child living here in that simple style which has not changed since the first settlers paved for themselves homes in the coves and valleys of this part of our grand old State. Their new cabin has a porch supported by black walnut columns that would be worth their weight in silver in New York John says, but my Prince will sometimes exaggerate a little. Behind, the home lot the Nantamy Prince will sometimes exaggerate a little. Behind the home lot the Nantahala comes dashing down from the mountains, in front a considerable branch sparkles and brawles over its pebbly bed and joins the river a few yards beyond. Here we found neat beds, plentiful mountain fare, and shelter and food for our ponies as long as we wished to stay. After a day's ex-ploration we decided upon another and then a third, and could I have had my will we should be there now, but the Prince said nay, and that settled it. Please to take out your dictionaries, hunt up all the adjectives, "sublime,"
"grand," "glorious," and such that you can find, string them like diamonds on a necklace, and turn them every way, and in the best light they will utterly fail to give you any adequate conception of the wondrous spectacle which the good God has created here that man may see and adore. For this narrow mountain gorge is invested with indescribable charms that would touch the coldest heart, and awaken in the breasts of all who can appreciate "the wonderful works of God," a new sense of His power and goodness. Four miles below Nelson's is a place where on either side the mountains are thousands of feet above the river and clothed to their summits with massive trees of many kinds. Vegetation here, for some reason, (John says it is the radiation), is two weeks earlier than at Valleytown. The mountains are no more than a pistol shot apart, had to do his bidding. I was sorry also and the sun kisses the river never more to lose this quiet retreat which Mrs. than two or three hours in a day. Here I found wild flowers, ferns and lichens, some of which were old friends, others fresh and beautiful acquisitions. In one place a bold spring of ice-cold water flows in strong volume from near the base of the mountain which seems to be of solid marble. Near it is just the place for a hunter's lodge, and I proposed to John to buy it and put up one where we and the pets might come every summer. How would it be when one of those tremendous cloud bursts came, Clo?' said that practical man. "Wouldn't you be shrinking into the corner with Fred and Betty, and shrieking after every thunder peal-are we struck,

That's just like the Prince, always dashing cold water on my little conceits, as the says "to keep my brains from getting red hot." I told you the place was indescribable and have I not proved it? But our

Western Extension road will run its

through there in a year or two and then everybody can get there and see it. John says "wind up Clo; its bed time," and I must obey. But I wish before closing to say that in behalf of all the children in our mountains especially. I wish to thank Col. Jones for his noble plan for promoting education. The cities and wealthy communities will perforce tax themselves as much as may be necessary to secure good instruction for their youth, if they get no help from outside. But the mountaineers are poor, they live far apart, and they can not sustain good schools. Yet some of the brightest and most promising little people, manly boys and sweeteyed girls, I ever saw were gathered in the pole cabins and cross road churches in every township. We went into scores of them. It made my heart ache to see how eager they were to learn, and how few were their opportunities. They were not my pets, but they were the children of as noble a race of men and women as the sun shines upon. Give them an education fitted to their surroundings and the generation now growing up in these wonderful forests and amid the grand scenery of our western counties will help to make that one of the most glorious sections of our highly favored State. "You are waxing fervent again," says John, to whom I have just read this, and who thinks as I do on this question; "Tell them good night Cle. and come to bed." So both good night and good-bye to you.

Would Pay Ten Dollars per Bottle for it. Brunswick county, Va., Nov. 5, 1881 I have been entirely cured of a most fearful looking and painful sore on my ankle, by the use of M s. Joe Person's valuable Remedy. It came more than twelve months ago, very much like a ring worm. I painted it with tinc iodine. It became a very paintul and bad looking place, then I commenced to try everything I could think or hear of, until it became so very painful that I could scarcely walk. Then I went to the best dootor in the whole country for advice, who told me be could cure me if I would take to my bed and there remain for four or nive weeks, and if I did not do this pretty soon it could not be cured at all; the bone would become d seased, and my foot would have to be taken off. Imagine how I felt to be told that I would have to lose my foot, or to give up all business? Kither of the remedies would have ruined me. Mind you, this was the banks of the Nantahela, sleeping on odorous hemlock beds, cooking their fish and leading a merry, wholesome, independent life all the days or weeks of their sojourn.

To get to the lower Nantahela you go through that Red Marble Gap which the litigating railroad men will make famous. From Valleytown to the gap the way lies through a rolling, gradually ascending country, mostly in virgin forest, but broken by occasional clear. than any medicine I ever heard of. It is not only the best remedy in the world to purify the blood, but I believe it will cure all skin and blood dis-eases, and it will certainly cure a love of strong drink. It gives me pleasure to furnish this for publication, as I know there are many sufferers who would be cured, could they know of and obtain Mrs. Joe Person's Bemedy.

Very truly and respectfully, JOS. R. MASON, JR. South Gaston, North Carolina.

Dear Madam: -In reply to your letter asking what I think of your Bemedy. I would say that the sales have been very fair, and so far as I can learn the Bemedy has been very satisfactory to my customers who have used it, especially so in the case of a little girl of this city, ten years of age, who was troubled for a long time with sores breaking out over the face and neck having the appearance of Scrofula, and which had resisted the usual alterative treatment for a long time She took four bottles of the Bitters last spring, when the sores entirely disappeared, and up to when the sores entirely disappeared, and up to this time she has had no return of them, her skin looking as fair and clear as any one's.

your Remedy seems to merit, I am
