DOWN IN GEORGIA.

A Few Random Notes From the Gate City.—The Crops, &c.

ATLANTA, GA., Oct. 2, 1882.

To the Editor of the Observer.

Before another week has turned on the wheel of time, the politics of Georgia, which now are so uncertain, will have arrived and settled under the wings of one of the present contestants for gubernatorial honors—Hon. A. H. Stephens or Gen. Lucius Gartrell. Next Wednesday is the decisive day, and at present it is difficult to tell who will be headed. At the various hotels in this city the political situation is the theme of conversation. The most sanguine of the men are not satisfied at the looks of things, and seem to be in a great measure afraid that Gen. Gartrell, the independent candidate for Governor, will sweep over the State by a hair's breadth.

Tragic Result of a Spree.

WHEELING, October 2.—Near Clarksburg yesterday morning John H. Bagges Jr. killed his wife and daughter aged 13, while mentally deranged from the effects of drink. He attacked his wife while she was in bed. She called the doctor, but he was unable to escape from his father's grasp. The mother and daughter fled from the house. Bagges seized a large iron poker and followed. Over-taking his wife he struck her twice, the last blow proving fatal. The daughter coming up to save her mother, was killed with one blow. The other children fled. The neighbors found the mother and daughter lying dead in the road, and discovered Bagges in the house intoxicated. He denied the killing and all knowledge of it.

Lynch Law in Virginia.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, October 2.—Jim Rhodes, the murderer of the Masse family, was taken out of jail between 12 and 1 o'clock last night, by a body of men, and carried about half a mile from town, and hung from a gallows. Citizens who were near by state that Rhodes begged for more time in order to make a confession, but as numbers of citizens were rapidly approaching the scene, the lynching was not averted. He confessed that he was Rhodes and said his mother and brother did not do any of the killing.

The Fever at Pensacola.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 2.—A Picayune Pensacola special reports forty-five new cases of yellow fever and four deaths yesterday.

SITTING WITH WHITE CHILDREN.

A Separate School System for Colored Boys and Girls No Longer Demanded. New York Sun, 22d.

A citizen complains, in a letter to the Sun, that colored children are permitted to attend the public school on Thirty-fifth street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, and are sitting in the same classroom with the white children. He says that he and a great many others will remove their children from that institution. Dr. Elliott, the principal of the school, writes in the building referred to, that "there are no colored children in this department, and, so far as I know, none have been applied for admission. Were they to do so I do not know what ground they could be refused. The right of colored children to education in the common schools of New York is accepted without question, and I have no objection to their sitting in the same building with the white children, but I understand that there are colored children in attendance among white classes over the city."

The principal of the primary department in the Thirty-fifth street school, said: "Yes, there are three little colored girls, between the ages of six and seven years, in our primary department. They have always, since I have been connected with this school, had some colored pupils here. We have had as many as five at one time. Only one has a complaint made to me about it. Two or three years ago a little girl said that her mother did not want her to sit beside a colored child. Of course I paid no attention to it, and nothing more was said about it. The colored children behave quite as well as any others and try as earnestly to learn. I see no reason why they should be ostracized. We do not keep any record of the colored children in attendance at schools where the majority of the pupils are white," the reporter was told at the office of the city superintendent of schools.

"The meeting then adjourned until 4 p. m., when the committee made a full report, declaring that the lease had been forfeited, and stating several causes of forfeiture, the chief being the failure of the lessee to continue the work on the road from Goldsboro to Salisbury, as provided in the lease. The committee also unanimously reported a resolution declaring the lease forfeited, and directing the president of the railroad company to take possession of the property. The further consideration of the report of the committee was postponed until Friday, November 10th, and the meeting adjourned to meet on that day at the court house in Goldsboro.

Increased Purchasing Power of Farm Products.

A contemporary says: In 1810 one bushel of corn would buy one pound of nails. In 1882 one bushel of corn would buy fifteen pounds of nails. In 1810 it took four bushels of wheat to buy a pair of boots. In 1882 five bushels of wheat would do the same thing. In 1810 it required sixty-four bushels of barley to buy a six-foot barrel of broadcloth. In 1882 five bushels of barley would do the same thing. In 1810 it required one bushel of wheat to purchase one yard of calico. In 1882 one bushel of wheat would buy thirty-five yards of a better quality. In 1810 a pair of woolen blankets cost as much as a cow. In 1882 a cow would buy from six to twenty pairs of blankets superior in every respect.

Atlanta is growing with every day—new houses of every size and design are going up in all directions. Business is lively and every body is on the qui vive. I could enumerate, but it would take too much time. Suffice it to say that Atlanta is the great city of the South, the destiny of thousands is in her hands, and it is not ten years her population will have doubled itself—it is 55,000 at present. That is not extravagant to estimate for the present. She is a little "taken in" by the business immensity of this great city.

The people are happy and prosperous. In the goodness of God they have been blessed with a successful year. The cotton, the rice, the corn, the sugar, the wheat, and the other crops are all doing well, and are coming in freely and bringing a good price, so "they say." The health of the city and the entire country is remarkably good, and is only slightly affected by the influenza there will be nothing to mar the even tenor of our way—peace and plenty all around, while never-evolving politics abate.

Since writing the above it has been ascertained from the newsgatherers by the different sources—coming trains to-day at noon, and by telegrams to-day at headquarters—that a complete "flip" has taken place, and all bets are going on the election of Stephens by from 50,000 to 50,000.

So the plot thickens and the demagogue prevails in Georgia. This is a strange and peculiar thing, and we cannot correctly count the votes till they have been polled next Wednesday, the 5th of October.

Poppy Cultivation in China.

The consumption of opium in China is very great, and probably increasing. But to the dismay of the English, who desire to supply the drug from the Indian fields, the Chinese are raising poppies more and more. The English consul at Ichang, China, states in a recent report, the result of a careful inquiry into the question of the respective quantities of opium and of wheat and rice. The result of the investigation went to show that the opium poppy yielded twice as much to the cultivator what is worth 1888, whereas an acre of wheat will give at best only 75s. To the value of the drug itself, 20s. has to be added for the oil capsules and other expenses, which may be set against the extra labor required from opium producers, and the extra manure. Other estimates put the yield of both opium and wheat lower, but the probability is in favor of the latter view. From market towns, or in hilly country, the advantage of opium over grain is much greater, because it costs so much to take to market. No wonder then that the cultivation of the drug is increasing. The poppy is grown now on all sorts of land in China—on hill slopes, terraced fields, and paddy and bottom lands. As recently as 1872, the Hon. Richard Cecil reported on the cultivation of the drug, it was grown only on the hill lands.

Use for Ants.

China leads civilized countries in finding a use for its ants. Prof. Riley, of the Agricultural Bureau, Washington, has recently reported to the Hon. Secretary of Agriculture that he has found an account of a curious use made of ants in that part of China. It seems that in many parts of the province of Canton the orange trees are injured by certain colonies of ants, which gnaw away at the base of the trunk, and the branches are colonized by placing the ants on their upper branches, and bamboo rods are stretched between the different trees so as to give the ants easy access to the whole orchard. This remedy has been in constant use at least since 1640, and probably dates from a much earlier period.

Mistake in the Man.

"So you saw my poor husband when he died," said a woman to a man who had just returned from Colorado. "Yes, madam. I was with him. I gave him a drink of water just before he died." "Did he take the water?" "Yes." "Then he was not my husband. Poor George never took water. You made a mistake in the man, sir."

A Varied Performance.

Many wonder how Fricker's Ginger Tonic can perform such varied cures, thinking it essence of ginger, when in fact it is made from many valuable medicines which act beneficially on every diseased organ.

From eminent W. L. Almon, President Medical College, Halifax, N. S.: "Ginger Tonic is invaluable for fever, indigestion and weakness, and is unsurpassed for female complaints. (For no other) of disease."
