Intensive Farming. Mr. Farish Furman, an intelligent young Georgian, who abandoned politics in order to engage in agricultural pursuits a few years ago, gives some facts, gathered from experience, which are worthy of consideration. Mr. Furman shows that five years ago he took 65 acres of thin "scrub" land, producing less than one bale of cotton to eight acres, and this land he has brought to produce a bale and a half to the acre. It is better that he has done this with home made manure, costing less than $4 a thousand pounds, and that yields
