HOW DROMGOOLE WAS RUINED. A Brilliant Virginia Statesman and His Life's Mistake, Cincinnati Enquirer.

George C. Dromgoole, in 1835, was one of the ablest men in Congress, but his fault was dissipation. Remorse for a single act of folly—a folly then fashionable among the chivalry—led him to dissipation. He had a friend, a classmate at college, from whom he was nearly inseparable. If not a blood relation he was at least connected with Gen. Dromgoole's family by his marriage. The two friends had a slight difficulty, in which the lie was given difficulty, in which the lie was given and the result was a challenge to the field of (so-called) honor. At the first fire the challenger fell pierced by the ball of Dromgoole's pistol, a lifeless corpse. From the moment George C. Dromgoole saw his friend weltering in HEN YCU ARE OUT LOCKING OR THE companion of his boylsh days as he lay dead—murdered; and night afternight in his dreams the duel would be re-peated, and it was only when he drank deep that he could find rest from the deep that he could find rest from the horrid phantom. The victim left a wife and several small children in reduced circumstances; and although in comfortable circumstances himself. Dromgoole dared not offer relief, because he was the murderer of the widow's husband and father of her orphan children. From that moment his resolve was taken, and no miser horridad. solve was taken, and no miser hoarded his resources with more of care and tried harder to increase his wealth and to place it on a sure foundation than did General Dromgoole, and although some might guess yet never knew the reason, until after his death it was found that all he possessed was given to the heirs of his unfortunate friend. To leave it in money might, he feared, cause those to whom it was bequeathed to reject it, and having a fine opinion of Ohio and of her prosperity he invest. of Ohio and of her prosperity, he invested most of it in lands in the counties of Pickaway and Scioto, where he was certain it would rise in value.

What Goes with a Farm. When a farm is bought or sold, questions often arise as to what goes with it, and disputes may often be avoided if farmers know just what their farm deeds include. In brief, says Mr. Haigh, of the Detroit bar, in the American Agriculturist, where no reservations are made in the deed, the conveyance ncludes the land, the buildings upon it, and all such chattels or articles as have become so attached or fixed to the soil or to the buildings as to become what is known in law as "fixtures." What constitutes a fixture depends largely on the intention of the owner in putting it there, and also upon the manner in which it is affixed. Anything so affixed to the soil or the build ings, that it cannot be removed without injury, nearly always goes with the farm; and anything of a permanent nature, fitted for permanent use, and annexed thereto by the owner with that intention, generally goes with the land, though, it might be severed without any injury, as the fellowing examples will illustrate: All fences on the farm go with it, but not fencing materials, as rails, etc., if bought elsewhere and piled upon the farm, and not yet built into a fence; they have never yet been "annexed." But rails cut from timber standing on the farm and piled up for future use, go with it; their original annexation is not severed by being changed from standing trees to rails. If, however, they were cut with the intention of using them elsewhere than on the farm, they would then be personal property, and would not pass. The bare intention in the mind of the owner in this instance makes the difference between real estate and personal property. Hop poles, if they have been once used upon the farm, are regarded as a part of it, though at the time of sale they are stored away for future use. Loose scaffold poles, however, laid across the beams of a barn, have been held not to be a part of the realty. Standing trees, of course, are part of the farm; so are trees cut or blown down, if left where they fall, but not, if corded up for sale; the wood has then become personal property.

California Farms.

The statistics given by the Los Angeles, California, Daily Commercial, as to the immense farms of that State, are doubtless correct but they are astonishing. It quotes a list of a dozen large California farms, and adds the following in the southern part of the State: The late Dap Murphy, of Santa Clara, with his 16,000,000 acres; Haggin & Carr, with 300,000 acres, Miller & Lux, 600,000 acres; Gen. Beale, with 200,000 acres; H. M. Newhall, with 48,000 acres; Lankershim & Co., 56,000 acres; B. F. & G. K. Porter, 36,000 acres; Moffit & Maclay. 20,000 acres; E. J. Baldwin, 20,000 acres; J. & L. Bixby, 30,000 acres; J. Irvine, 48,000 acres; John G. Downey, 75,000 acres; L. W. Hellman, 25,000 acres; Richard Gird, 30,000 acres; J. S. Flood, 137.000 acres; Thomas R. Bard, 50,000 acres; D. Freeman, 50,000 acres, and numerous other farmers and stock growers whose farms extend into tens of thousand of acres. This is a great country and it does all lie in Colusa.

A Little New England Family.

The New England Medical Monthly records the following case: Among the papers of the late Thos Atwater, of New Haven, Conn., the following memoranda were recently

"Mrs. Mabie, No. 100 I wenty-ninth street, New York, of the firm of Topping & Co., has been married forty eight months. July 24th, 1858, had 1 child.

July 30th, 1859, " 2 children. March 29th, 1860, " ... 2 March 4th, 1861, " ... 3 "

Total.....12 These children were all born within three years and seven months, and are all living and healthy. This is a copy from a memorandum given by the father, Mr. Mabie.

A Liberal Giver. Mr. John B. Stetson, a prominent hat manufacturer of Philadelphia, is said this year to have spent $20,000 in making Christmas gifts to his 700 em-ployes, not counting some other such trifles as three twenty-year $10,000 life insurance policies and a hundred shares. of building and loan association stock. The gifts included 23 gold watches, 3 sealskin sacques, 15 fur-liped cloaks and several hundred pairs of kid gloves. In return Mr. Stetson received a superb bronze chiming clock worth $350, and some other choice mementoes.

Storing Electricity. Cleveland (O) Correspondence Chicago Inter-

Daily Charlotte Observer.

Several months ago your correspondent telegraphed you that Professor Charles I Brush, of this city, had nearly completed an invention for storing electricity. Mr Brush to day announces that his efforts have been crowned with success, and that he has secured a patent on the appliance, in doing which he has accomplished what the most famous electricians of the world have tried in vain to do. The Brush storage battery, as the invention will be called, is simple in construction, consisting of a square box containing cells, in each of which are two cast lead plates. The plates are electrically treated in a manner that is of course a secret, and are immersed in acidulated water. One of the plates is black, and is called the hydrogen plate, while the other is white, and is termed the oxygen plate. These plates are what are properly called accumulators, and into them is stored electricity. They are portable, and can be packed and shipped as any other merchandise. They can be handled without danger, and can be made of any size required, so that there is no theoretical limit to the amount of electricity that can be stored. The capacity of a battery depends upon the number of cells and size of the plates. A pattery of twenty-four cells will contain enough electricity to supply twenty lamps of twenty candle power each for a period of eight hours. Mr Brush claims his system is perfect in every a period of eight hours. Mr Brush claims his system is perfect in every respect; that the loss of energy in storing and in again giving up electricity is comparatively small, and that any ity is comparatively small, and that any required amount of electricity can be accumulated, and afterward used either for light power, telegraphy, or for other purposes, but no doubt the principal use that will be made of storage batteries will be to furnish currents for incandescent lamps, in which the current of electricity is passed through the carbon in an air-tight globe, producing a beautiful light, and as there is no combustion there is no deterioration of atmosphere in the room where the atmosphere in the room where the light is used. Thus it will be seen pri-

Political Education in the South.

American Register. Mr Pattison, the recently elected Governor of Pennsylvania, is the most youthful chief magistrate ever chosen, perhaps, of any common wealth, if we except the late James C Jones, of Tennessee, who defeated James K Polk twice for this highest office in Tennessee. Jones, when first chosen, was twenty-nine years of age. Polk, during the heated campaign, always referred to Jones as "my juvenile competitor." Pattison, as was Jones, is a very handsome man. He is tall, slender, dark, and his expression is inclined to be serious. His features are regular, eyes bright and expressive, lighting his face when he recognizes and salutes a friend. He is domestic in habits, but jovial and even boyish in company. His manner is hearty and sincere on all occasions. During the campaign he met General Beaver. The latter, being at the city hall, was taken into Mr Pattison's office and greeted cordially. General Beaver said: "We are opposing candidates for the same office. I hope the campaign will be conducted without personalities." Mr Pattison replied: "It certainly shall be so on my part. After all General, the people will have to decide the people will have the people cide between us, and they will do it without reference to enything of that kind." Modes of conducting political contests in the North are widely different from those practiced in the South. Prentiss and McNutt, Prentiss and Foote, Jones and Polk, Jones and Agron V Brown, Ben Hill and Senator Brown, Sam Houston and Wigfall, Andrew Johnston and G A Henry, occu-pying positions as rival aspirants for the same offices, met one another face to face and discussed in the presence of eager throngs, great questions before the country. The example of these aspirants for highest offices is followed by every candidate for every political pesition. Each encounters his competitor at the hustings, and the ablest, though in a partisan minority, often wins. Thus it happens that even if the percentage of illiteracy in Tennessee and in North Carolina be great, the common people were, and are at this hour perhaps, the best informed politi-cal thinkers, taken as a mass, in the

perhaps foremost of mob-haranguing

Gen, Sherman's Hell on Earth. From Gath's Report of a Chat. "Now, about that," said Gen. Sherman, "you see I cannot be fool enough to decline what is not offered to me: but what do I want to turn from the prospect of rest and peace, at last for a period of years, to the delusion of four years in an office that is just hell? That's what it is," continued the General emphatically; "it is hell. What did Gen. Harrison get out of it? Nothing but a month of misery. What did Gen. Taylor get out of it? Twelve months of misery. What did Grant get out of it? Do I want to resign this competence Congress has bestowed on me for four years of hell? What did Hayes get out of the Presidency? What did Garfield get? Take them all within your memory. Nothing but worry, trouble and misunderstanding."

The Deg and the Wasp.

A dog and his tail fell into a dispute as to which should wag the other. An itinerant wasp passing that way casus ally remarked: "Speaking of tails, reminds me that I possess one which may possibly be influential enough to wag you both." This fable teaches that ten cents' worth of dynamite is a bigger man than a church steeple.

STEELE & PRICE

A correspondent writing from the Hermitage, a few miles east of Nashville, Tennessee, says that the old residence is approached through a long row of cedars. In this quiet old brick building, with wooden columns and wooden coping in front, reside Colonel Andrew Jackson, adopted grandson of the hero, with his wife and mother, and two old negroes, man and wife, about sixteen years old when purchased by Jackson, nearly sixty years ago. General Jackson and his wife sleep side by side in the little garden near the residence, each beneath a broad granite slab. Inscribed in old-fashioned Roman letters are the words on the slab which covers Mrs. Jackson, composed by her devoted husband:

"Here lie the remains of Mrs. Rachael Jackson, wife of President Jackson, who died on the 22nd of December, 1828."

The old here had been elected President

The Tomb of Andrew Jackson.

The old hero had been elected President for his first term, but did not take his seat till March 4th following. The inscription recounts her virtues in words forcible and tender, and closes: "A being so gentle and yet so virtu-ous, vile slander might wound, but could not dishenor. Even death, when he tore her from the arms of her hus-band, could but transport her to the bosom of God."

The day of the funeral Jackson, feeble and heart-broken, walked slowly behind the coffin, leaning upon a large cane he was accustomed at the time to carry about his farm. As the friends of the dead gathered about to look for the last time to have fore. the last time upon her face, Gen. Jackson lifted his cane as if appealing to heaven, and by a look commanding siheaven, and by a look commanding si-lence, said slowly and painfully, and with a voice full of bitter tears; "In the presence of this dear saint I can and do forgive all my enemies! But those vile wretches who have slandered her must look to God for mercy." One of the most beautiful and re-deeming traits in all this rugged and heroic nature was the unalterable love heroic nature was the unalterable love and devotion he bore his wife. For seventeen years after her death the memory of this noble woman was cherished, until the summer of 1845, when he was laid to rest, beside the onvate residences can be lighted independently of lighting stations. Mr Brush gave an exhibition of the working of the battery at his labratory a few days since, and all who witnessed it are satisfied it is in every way a success.

Gambetta's Condition Critical --- What His Physician Says

PARIS, Dec. 30 .- The Republique. Gambetta's paper, says the doctor who visited Gambetta yesterday afternoon, ascertained that the inflammation was extending outwards toward the skin, and the condition of the lower intestines was unchanged. There was a slight return of fever during the day. President Grevy made inquiries regarding the patient last evening. LONDON.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Paris, says the condition of Gambetta is alarming. His friends no longer deny that his state is critical.

rangement of Liver, Bowels and Kidneys. SYMPTOMS OF A DISEASED LIVER.

Bad Breath; Pain in the Side, sometimes the pain is felt under the Shoulder-blade, mistaken for Rheumatism; general loss of appetite; Bowels generally costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, is dull and heavy, with considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of leaving undone something which ought to have been done; a slight, dry cough and flushed face is sometimes an attendant, often mistaken for consumption: the patient completes and flushed face is sometimes an attendant, often mistaken for consumption; the patient complains of weariness and debility; nervous, easily startled; foet cold or burning, sometimes a prickly sensation of the skin exists; spirits are low and despondent, and, although satisfied that exercise would be beneficial, yet one can hardly summon up fortitude to try it—in fact, distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred when but few of them existed, yet examination after death has shown the Liver to have been extensively deranged.

It should be used by all persons, old and young, whenever any of the above symptoms appear,

Persons Traveling or Living in Un-healthy Localities, by taking a dose occasion-ally to keep the Liver in healthy action, will avoid all Malaria, Bilious attacks, Dizziness, Nau-sea, Drowsiness, Depression of Spirits, etc. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no in-toxicating beverage.

If You have eaten anything hard of digestion, or feel heavy after meals, or sleep-less at night, take a dose and you will be relieved. Time and Doctors' Bills will be saved by always keeping the Regulator
