which the great engineer astonished his age, is interesting now only as an illustration of the begioning of the invention. There were plasters with holes in them long before BENSON'S CAP-CINE POBOUS PLASTER surprised both the public and the phy iclans; and the triumph of the Capcine is founded upon the partial successes, or the utter failures of its predecessors. Everything of value in the old porous plaster is retained in the Capeine; but at this point all comparison ends and contrast begins. For example: The old plasters were slow in their action; the

The old plasters lacked the power to do more than to impart sight, temporary relief in cases easy of treatment; the Capcine penetrates the system and permanently cures the troubles for which t is racommended.

The old plasters depended for any good results they might attain upon an accident of their makers and the naked faith of their wearers; the Benson's reaches its ends by means of the scientific combination of the rare medicinal ingredients which it conta ns.

In brief, the old pleaters, life Stephenson's disarded engine, are switched off the track, while the Benson's goes on its way winning golden opin-

Ves, in this very fact lies the leading danger to the people who buy and use this reliable and scientific remedy. "Hypocrisy is the tribute vice Days to starting failpays to virtue." Imitation is the concession failthe makes to success, Benson's Plasters are parolied in name and style.

acres at a cost of $1.20 per tou, allowing $2.50 a day for team hire. He sav ed one half the cost of his previous crop by not cutting the corn, but putting the stalks into the silo whole. Silos could be made cheaper than they were. He was convinced that it was not necessary to make them air tight. At that was essential was the pressure. He began to feed fourteen cows ensilage on December 31. At that time they were giving three cans of forty quarts each daily; now they give four cans. Each cow's fodder costs 21% cents a day. He reported that two farmers in his neighborhood had failed with ensilage last year. JY Smith, of Doyleston, thought if it had not been for ensilage he would have been in the sheriff's hands before this. Now, however, he was making butter for 61/2 cents a pound that his housekeeper had the impudence to ask fifty-seven cents a pound for in the market.

J W Walcott, who runs a large farm as an adjunct of his hotel, the Vendome, in Boston, answered a great many yestions as to his methods and results. The cost of harvesting to him was less than 44 cents a ton, and the total cost about $2. He had used rye ensilage for four years, and had never had bad results; but the rye must be cut early. To his milch cows he gave since November 20, corn ensilage mixed with three pints of corn meal and three pints of cotton seed meal a day; to his younger stock ensilage only. The most convenient silo was one that could be filled in a day. In one that had been a fortnight-filling he had noticed the strata indicating the quantity put in each day. One costing $25 was as good as one costing $25,000; the whole secret
