It acted like a charm on my wife, who had been in bad health for a long time, and for whom I have paid hundreds of dollars for doctors and medicines: It began to build her up from the first dose. Another female member of my family took it with equally satisfactory results. It is certainly the best tonic for delicate ladies that I have ever used, and I have tried them all. I have no doubt that want of exercise, close confinement in poorly ventilated houses, sewer gas poison and malarial poison often produce sickness among our wives, daughters and sisters, and I believe Swift's Specific is the remdy for all this sort of blood poisoning.

WHO WILL WIELD THE MALLET? Our Washington letter published this morning gives the vote of the North Carolina delegation, with the exception of Scales, in caucus, to Cox. of New York. It is understood this is a complimentary vote, to show their respect for Cox and at the same time enable him to retire gracefully from the field, and leave the battle to Carlisle and Randall. The general impression among those who have noted the drift of the current has been that Cox would be out of the contest, as he has not developed near as much said in substance: "I didn't know strength as either of the other prominent candidates. Cox is a good man that I was anything extrs of a whitter until about 1869, when in a nent candidates. Cox is a good man and an able one, but he has not been able to command the following in this first model of a large piece I ever made was a model of a Bermuda he would. To which of the other two candidates Cox's strength will go is not knnown as yet, but the probabili ties are that the most of it will go to Carlisle. If no other considerations entered into the contest but tariff reform, the probabilities are that Car tol building has 72,844 pieces and 561 lisle would beat Randall by long odds lisle would beat Randall by long odds in the race, for he would have the support of all that element in the with all the officers and Legislators. support of all that element in the party which leans towards tariff for the man sawing wood in the baserevenue only, although he professes to stand upon the Ohio platform, the same platform, and is credited with having framed the tariff plank in the Pennsylvania platform, which is almost identically the same as that of Ohio. But while these two candidates stand professedly upon the same platform, Carlisle is believed to be in favor of deep cutting and close pruning, while Randall would move slowly and cautiously. In this lies Randall's strength, and if he wins, to this he will be indebted for his victory. Our opinion is that when the lines are drawn in earnest, Randall's following will be found much greater than it now seems to be, especially among the Southern delegations. There are many among these, as there are from other sections of the country, who recognize the necessity of going slow and moving cautiously on any taniff measures that may be instituted, and will, hence, support for Speaker the man who occupies the middle ground. On the eve, so to speak, of a Presidential election, when a false or hasty step may destroy our chances of success, they feel that we cannot afford to make unnecessary and dangerous issues, especially as the radical reform proposed by some of the more ardent champions of Mr. Carlisle are impossible with a Republican Senate and a

The Republican party has been and is still quick to turn to advantage any and every mistake, and hence the necessity of cool, deliberate movement and harmony within our lines. If the Republicans win the next Presidential election we may talk about tariff reform until doomsday and be no nearer it. If we win we get in a position to make tariff reform possible, and just such tariff reform as the country demands. But force the issue now, let the extremists come to the front, place a Speaker of their choice in the chair, and the first blunder that may lead to a disaster will have been made.

As between Carlisle and Randall, while we have the highest respect for Carlisle, we believe that the good of one with whom he shakes hands to the party and the good of the country requires that the Speaker's mallet should be placed in Randall's hands.

So far have his followers car ried this argument that they are beginning to belittle Carlisle's candidacy by comparing it with Blackburn's four years ago. It is well to say that it is the Southern supporters of Mr. Randall who resort to these stupid tactics-only a single opinion, too, a sort of stray shot from the "Maryland

Hotel were thronged all day, and until late in the evening the confidence was bubbling. From Morrison to Murphy apparent satisfaction reigned supreme. Carlisle himself, self-contained herhaps as Madison or John Quincy Adams, ventured with a touch of enthusiasm in his manner to claim the nomination on the first ballot without a vote from either Ohio or Georgia. This was in reply to extravagant claims of support by Randall in those commonwealth's.

A new "sectional issue" has been started by some of Randall's Eastern followers. They profess to see indications of an alliance between the south and West, based on identity of occupation and interest. If Carlisle is elected, they declare, this alli ance will be consummated. But they say it shall not be, and that Randal must and will be chosen in order to defeat what they affect to believe will be a dangerous policy or association. Their appeal is to the Piedmont section of the South, the mining and manufacturing districts. But as the members from that region represent farmers and planters chiefly it is not seen how, if any such coalition is meditated, it can be broken up. I find that while the idea is laughed at, there is the very friendliest feeling now almost for the first time existing between the "Western Farmer of America" and the man whose "manners" are so much reprohated in Northern print as smacking of the 'plantation The part Tilden is taking in the contest is severely animadverted on. "What right has he," said one Congressman to-day, "to be whispering all around the country, wherever there is an election, whether State or National? If he had kept his hand out of this thing, we would all have consulted with him next year as to the Presidency. As it is he has lost his influence by meddling where he was not wanted. Notwithstanding all these comments, the campaign is being conducted on an unusually high plane which is gratifying to party and country pride. An official of the present House, a life-long Republi can, remarked to me to-day that either of the candidates would make a great Speaker, and that it was a markedly dignified canvass. It is noticeable that there is less drinking going on, and fewer heated discussions than has been usual. I take this to be due to the character of the candidates, who discourage every-thing of the sort. Two of them are social drinkers, but they keep their
