OPMONS THAT MARY.

Some of the "tariff for revenue only" journals which are opposed to the abolition of the internal revenue system, take the position that the repeal of the internal revenue tax, will necessitate the continuance of a high tariff to make up for the deficiency from the loss of the internal revenue. But sometimes while arguing on the same line, they run foul of each other. The Wilmington Star, for instance, which is a vigorous advocate of the maintenance of the internal revenue tax, while it favors a modification of the method of collec-tion, insists that the repeal of the tax on tobacco would not benefit the con-sumer, but the manufacturer, and that the consumer would have to pay about as much for his tobacco after the abolition of the tax as he now has to pay. The Savarinah News opposes the abolition of the tax on spirits because it would cheapen whiskey and thus prove an absolute injury to the people, while it would at the same time force the continuance of a high tariff. If taking the tax off tobacco will not cheapen it, why should taking the tax off whiskey cheapen it? It ought to have the same effect in one instance as in the other. The fact is it would reduce the price of both, perhaps not immediately, but in a little while, for both tobacco manufacturers and distiller would continue to get all they could for what they had to sell until some one in the spirit of prompetation cut down prices when others would be compelled to follow. We were told that the reduction of the tax on quinine would not reduce the price of it but it did. We doubt whether the abo it did. We doubt whether the abo lition of the tax on tebacco and whiskey would increase the consumption was raised by the passengers and presented to him.

The above are some of the largest mills in the country and represent nearly 400,000 spindles.

Blackberries. Potstoes Sweet. Toinhannani-Beeswax and designation and Butter and designation and butter and designation and butter and designation and butter and designation and design MY NEIGHBOR, THE DRUGGIST.

What a wonderful miscellany is displayed on the shelves and the counters of the store which my neighbor, the druggist, keeps! It is a commentary on human misery and the relief of distress. What a variety of compounds! What wealth of ingenuity has been expended in making them and in bringing them together! e There are medicines to cure disease and there are poisons to kill. There are cosmetics to make the complexion beautiful, and there are pills, and plasters, and potions, and lozenges, and pads, and ointments, and pomades, and salves, and sundries, and soaps, and knick-knacks, and perfumes, and toilet essentials, and, in a word, almost everything that people need to cure their diseases, and a great many things that cannot cure even a sick cat or a debilitated monkey.

My neighbor, the druggist, will not take it as uncomplimentary, if the remark is made that many of the things he sells for the cure of dyspepsia are of no particular account. The fact is that dyspepsia is a very tough disease to wrestle with. It needs tonics and it needs iron. A good many of the articles offered for the cure of this malady have failed in that the tonics they contain are not the right things, and that the iron is introduced in such a way as to do more harm than good.

But my neighbor, the druggist, is fortunate in having on his shelves, one medicine which is no failure, but, on the contrary, a sure success. Among all the others it stands pre-eminent. It is Brown's Iron Bitters. Here I see what my dyspeptic friends need. Many a victim of dyspepsia has been helped by it into liberty and life. Let all the other contents of the drug-shop go, but give me Brown's Iron Bitters for my dyspeptic friend. A dollar a bottle, did you say? Certainly a reasonable enough price. My neighbor, the druggist, will tell you so.
