Special Correspondence of the Observer

NEW YORK, March 4, 1884. DEAR OBSERVER-As I shook my self before entering my ranch from a stroll about the city this morning, people gazing out of overlooking windows saw something very much like a feather bed being shot out of a cannon. It was only the snowflakes tha: I was getting rid of. My hat resembled a big Charlotte russe, while my shaggy beard shining up through its snowy covering reminded me of an old Mecklenburg stubble field when it is a good day for rabbit hunting. Snowing? Oh, no! Just a little flurry, as the New Yorkers say. It began here Thursday evening and has been going it in a business like both towns. manner ever since, taking brief recesses for refreshments, it is to be presumed, every few hours. Central Park was to-day almost entirely de serted, not a person being seen on the mall except the gray uniformed Park policemen. And it is just slightly Lieutenant will pay this place a visit cold up here too. Men and women go fairly leaping along the streets as if running to a fire, but they are only navigating thus hastily to keep warm. Fur covered cabbies beat themselves with their fists to keep their blood in circulation, and the Parks are barren of their usual neat and attractive or naments - the tramps.

A BLACK ROBED PRESBYTERIAN.

Your correspondent, though in a new place, found his old home habits still strong upon him, and Sunday night he made his way to the celebrated Madison Square Presbyterian church. An usher in a Prince Albert States. He says, also, that the ore and white, handed him a programme now being worked at Cornwall, Eng of the evening's exercises and escorted him to the amen corner. The ser vice opened with an organ voluntary and as the first notes were heard, the pastor, a fine looking divine, strikngly resembling Captain Brenizer, the banker, ascended the pulpit. He was robed in black. The choir, composed of salaried singers, delivered a beautiful anthem, when the robed arms of the minister were thrown up and the congregation rose and sang the doxology. The apostles creed It is managed by Capt. C. C. side is doing at present, as the matter has been very quiet for the last week or two, but it is reported that others besides the present incumbent have been to headquarters with a view to convincing the powers that a change would be for the best.

It was thought by some people that the reinstatement of Gordon might mean a great deal in this matter, as he claimed that he had been removed solely on account of his political course. He also claimed that the ap-pointment of Smith was the work of the stalwart faction of his party, and that he looked to the leaders of the "coalition business" for help in his distress. The present postmaster didn't swallow coalition until his "nose was held," figuratively speaking, and if Gordon has told a straight tale about the matter it may be that his re-instatement bodes no good to the present incumbent.

BROTHER TALMAGE.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, who lec-tured in Charlotte last season on the "Bright Side of things," had a tearing down time at his tabernacle over in Brooklyn Sunday. The church was so crowded that the short hand reporters had to be moved up on the pulpit to clear space for a small army of new members that were that day gathered under his wing. His sermon must have been unusually spicy as the cengregation clapped their and shafts have been sunk down to hands, laughed and applauded as if it were a circus. Brother Talmage he veins in several places so as to expose the ore to the depth of 10 feet has surprisingly long legs and arms and they seem to widen as they go and when he flies them all at the down. Two tunnels and one shaft same time, it really does not fall far are already under contract, and we await for the details of progress with short of a circus. His mouth looks like a blackberry pie with the crust removed, and on the whole he is a considerable of a comic sight when he is at his best. Saturday night, after the play at the New Park, the sheriff arrested Mrs. Langtry.
