Wild Watterson.

Mr. Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who seems to have constituted himself the special champion of the free traders, is apparently becoming desperate.

From which we take the following:

The squad of protectionists claiming to be Democrats and led by Mr. Randall have undoubtedly mistaken the generosity and courtesy of Mr. Carline for vacillation and have jured themselves into the belief that because Mr. Morrison has not been elected he is uncertain and afraid.

Instead of diluted brandy, old man Bismarck now drinks cold tea.

Southern Methodist Growth.

Interesting Figures Showing How That Church is Progressing.

The General Minutes of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for 1883, just prepared by Rev. W. P. Harrison, D. D., the Book Editor, reveal some interesting facts illustrative of the rapid growth of the Church.

These are wild utterances for a man claiming leadership, and the recognized mouth-piece, through his paper, of the free trade wing of the party.

He draws the line, lays down the ultimatum, and says that men like Randall, Eaton and others who have given their big brains and years of unselfish service to the cause of Democracy must come to it or go to the Republican party, and that defeat would be preferable to further concession.

But we take it for granted that this wild raving does not express the feeling of any considerable number of men on Mr. Watterson's side of the line, for they would hardly be stupid enough to commit themselves to that line of action unless they wish to make the Presidential contest a mere burlesque.

Both legs? asked George. "Yes, both legs."

SENATOR RANSOM'S POSITION.

The Washington letter which we published Thursday gave the substance of an interview with Senator Ransom on the tariff and internal revenue questions, in which that gentleman takes strong ground for the abolition of the internal revenue system, as a matter in which the people of North Carolina are vastly more interested than in any that may be.

Mr. Jefferson Davis.

Complete Text of His Speech Before the Legislature in Mississippi.

The Jackson (Miss.) Clarion gives the following complete report of the speech of Mr. Jefferson Davis at the occasion extended to him by the Legislature of that State on the 10th inst.:

"Friends and Brethren of Mississippi: In briefest terms, but with great feeling, permit me to return my thanks for the unexpected honor you have conferred on me.

"We are now in a transition state, which is always a bad one, both in society and in nature. What is to be the result of the changes which may be anticipated it is not possible to forecast, but our people have shown such fortitude and have risen so grandly from the deep affliction inflicted upon them, that it is fair to entertain bright hopes for the future.

"It has been said that I should apply to the United States for a pardon, but repentance must precede the right of pardon, and I have not repented. Remembering as I must all which has been suffered, all which has been lost, disappointed hopes and crushed aspirations, yet I do not regretly say that it would do over again, I would again do just as I did in 1861.

"I have used it in dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and night sweats, with very good results."

NINETEEN YEARS OF WAR TAXATION.

Greenboro Patriot.

The people for more than eighteen years have been paying taxes levied for war purposes in time of war.

The first internal revenue was enacted to aid in extinguishing the debt of the Revolution. The second was passed to furnish means for carrying on the second war with Great Britain.

The third went into effect in 1863, to provide money for supporting the "rebellion."

An excise law is always offensive to a free people. That passed under Washington's administration led to open resistance in Pennsylvania, and brought matters to the verge of civil strife.

The next act existed five years, and from 1814 to 1815 yielded a revenue of $14,143,852.

In a few weeks nineteen years will have passed away since the close of the civil war. From 1866 to 1883 the receipts from internal revenue taxes aggregated the enormous sum of $2,644,282,156.

During the sixteen years of the two earlier periods of excise taxes, the receipts were $20,255,949 in all, or less than a seventh part of last year's returns from this source under the reduced scale.

The causes which led to the whiskey rebellion in Pennsylvania were trifling compared with the outrages inflicted by the agents of the internal revenue at the present time, especially in districts distant from the great cities and among people who are not familiar with the law, and who have only limited knowledge of their own rights.
