Democratic circles of the "old ticket"

believed all along and believe now that if the convention should nominate him he would accept, especially if the nomination came without much of a contest. There was a time when Mr. Tilden was the strongest man in the Democratic party, but we doubt whether, under the conditions that now exist, and the complications are the complications and the complications are which every other interest allow which every other interest allowed that it ought to that have arisen, he is now. If the tariff is to be the issue, he must take his position on one side or the other, and from the present indications the Association fully endorse it. fight will be made more upon the platforms adopted than upon the men, and whoever the men may be they must be in accord with the platform. There seems to be, especially for an increase of the civil list and within the past few weeks, a drift of the rights of the citizen and inconsis sentiment towards Thomas F. Bay- tent with the principles of Republiard, of Delaware, and without any can government as established by the connivance directly or indirectly upon his part. The movement seems to be inspired by the recognition of the virtues of the man and his eminent fitness for the position. He stands unquestionably to-day in the front rank of American statesmen, the peer of any. His discussions in the Senate are characterized by grasp of broad intellect, depth of thought, thorough study of the subject, dignity of demeanor, and honesty of purpose; in striking contrast to others of his fellow Senators, who survey the field and take their positions on a question for or against as they recog nize its popularity or unpopularity.

There is nothing of the demagogue in his composition, and whether we always agree with him or not, we recognize his ability, his devotion to duty, his patriotism, and his unquestionable integrity. These will be his strong claims when his name is presented to the convention. But then will come the question of availability; whether he can carry this or that

The Republicans are quite as much at sea as the Democrats, and the man don't live who can tell who their nom inees will be. Logan's friends are working, Arthur's friends are working, Blaine's friends are working, Lincoln's friends are working, Ed munds' friends are working, and Grant's friends are working, (in the dark). Logan's strength is in the West, where is also Lincoln's; Arthur's is in the machine, which is just now getting some pretty hard knocks; Blaine's is in the Eastern and Middle States, where his friends are active and vigorous; Edmunds' is in the independent order of Republicans, and Grant's in his personal following. not confined to any particular section, not sufficiently developed yet, however, to give their movement any special prominence. Logan is vulnerable, Blaine is vulnerable, Arthur is vulnerable, Lincoln has no record for attack or commendation, and has to inspire much personal following, and Grant's stronghold, if he should be pushed, will be his military fame, which still holds him in good hand. hour and get away with the ribbons. CONFIDENCE ABONG REVENUE REFORMERS.

The Defeat of the Wool Measure Considered Significant --- Some Reasons Why it May not Mean the Passage of the Merrison Bill---Ransom and Isham G. Harris--- The Withdrawal

Correspondence of THE OBSERVER. WASHINGTON, April 8.—The revenue reformers are in better spirits than at any time perhaps since the begin-ning of the session. They interpret the defeat of Converse's proposition to restore the wool duty of 1867 as favorable to the passage of the Morrison bill. While they are warranted probably in this prognostication it is clear that the vote yesterday is in large measure a different one from that which it is likely will be contained. that which it is likely will be east on the Morrison tariff measure. Quite a number of gentlemen voted irrespective of their judgment on the general tariff question. There is Mr. Eaton, who voted against restoring the high duty on wool. He will not support the Morrison bill, or any tariff measure at this session. So of some of the Virginia members. Of these there is doubt, hewever, as they will be loath to defeat a proposition to repeal the tobacco tax.

Judge Bennett hopes for the passsage of the bill reducing the revenue. Gen. Cox, too, is sanguine. Yester-day Gox led the debate of thirty minutes on Phil Thompson's resolu tion against the repeal of the whiskey tax, and every Democratein the delegation except, Col. Green, who was absent, voted in the negative. An analysis of the vote shows that only four Republicans, including York, were recorded on the same side. This is interpreted to day as showing the animus of parties on this question of so much importance to North Carolina. Gen. Ransom took a spirited and brilliant part in the closing debate on the education bill in its favor. In a colloquy with Gov. Isham G. Harris, just before midnight, he reforted with some asperity, but in parliamentary language, the criticism that the people of North Carolina would not approve his action. If Senator Coke, who held the floor at the time, had not refused permission for the spat to continue, there might have been some material for the big morning dailies which take the past midnight dispatches. These Senators, it is needless to say, are as brave as Ney and personally the best of friends.

It is learned to day that Wheeler has requested the withdrawal of his nomination as collector and the substitution of the name of his former deputy, Mr. Hardin, of Alamance. This may untangle a part of the skein, or it may not. Mrs. Atkinson, sister-in-law of Bishop Atkinson, the venerable lady

A Merrible Case of Cruelty. At Wilmington, Del., Monday Martha Smith, colored, was arrested for cruelly treating a six-year old daughter of a woman named Wesley, which has been in the keeping of Mrs. Smith for some time. On the child's back were two immense scars, from which the flesh had been burned almost to the spine, which she stated had been inflicted by the woman setting her upon a red-hot stove for disobeving a command. Her tongue was badly lacerated, which was the result of the woman sticking a fork through the child's tongue to keep ner from crying.

An Arthur Delegation. ATLANTA, Ga., April 10 .-- In the Republican convention yesterday considerable time was taken up in the discussion over contested delegations from Chatham county, but when settled R. D. Locker, marshal of the Southern Georgia district, was elected permanent chairman. A. Z. Buck, W. A. Pledger, L. M. Pless ants and C. D. Forsythe were elected as the delegation to Chicago from the State at large. They go unin-structed, but are considered as being for Arthur.
