My Crutches Thrown Away. The following was taken from the Marion (N. C.) Post of March 19th, 1884, and was inserted by Mr Finley, and was not an advertisement:

For the past eight years I had been not only great sufferer, but entirely disabled, getting about on crutches with difficulty. A little over a year ago I began the use of Mrs. Joe Person's Celebrated Scrofula Remedy. Have used 25 bottles, and now I can walk without crutches with ease and feel that I am on the road to renewed health. My case was ment so long that I had little hope of recovery. therefore take pleasure in giving my testimony to the value of Mrs. Joe Person's great Scrofula Rem A. L. FINLEY. WEAKENING ON PROTECTION, We clip the following from an ex-

New England is weakening on protection. Governor English, of Connecticut, a wealthy manufacturer, recently caused surprise by giving a qualified endorsement of free trade. Soon after came the demand of the Democratic State committee for a reduction of taxes, and the New Hampshire Democrats have declared substantially for the Morrison bill, Recent votes of New England Representatives in Congress show a tendency in the same way. The fact is tariff theories are in a sort of transition state, and both parties are more or less divided on them.

There is doubtless a considerable change of sentiment in New England upon tariff protection. But this is not remarkable for New England. If there is any one thing that New England is particularly skilled in, and her sharpness is pretty generally conceded, it is in taking care of herself, and in keeping a close eye upon her own interests. New England never had much to say upon the sub rid of her slaves, and ample time was given to her slave dealing ship masters to pick up their cargoes and get back from the African coast to Amer ican ports with them and pocket the cash; she then discovered that human slavery was a horrible institution, and in course of time became pretty unanimous for its abolition. She shed a good deal of the blood of her neighbors and of purchased substitutes to do it, too. Ex-Governor English is worth about $5,000,000, the larger portion of which was made in the lumber business. Ex-Governor English had no particular fault to find with tariff protection to lumber until the forests of Maine began to be pretty well exhausted, when he came to the conclusion that free lumber was the true essence of statesmanship on that question. When the New England mills had almost a monopoly of the manufacture of cotton goods there was no voice raised against a protective tariff, but when competing mills sprang up all over the South, and the New England mills began to suffer from the competition, then it was discovered that a protective tariff had very serious defects, in fact, that a protective tariff was not altogether as good a thing as it had been. All and Wakefield, of Minnesota; James, of which goes to show that New England has an eye to business. We don't write this in a spirit of recrimination, for we don't take pleasure in that kind of thing, but simply to show that New England is not actuated so much by principle in this matter as by self interest, which has ever been her inspiring motive of action. Her people are a bright, quick witted, vigorous minded people, whose indomitable energy and pluck are recognized everywhere. They have many commendible traits. But in politics, as in all other public matters, they have an eye to business, and support that policy which they think will best promote their inter-

That reputed interview with Gen. Joe Johnston in which he was re ported by some Western newspaper man as saying that the South would enthusiastically support Grant or Lincoln for the Presidency if the tariff discussion continued, is pronounced by the General to be manufactured out of the whole cloth, as he never saw the so-called interviewer, and consequently never gave utterance to the expressions attributed to

It is decidedly amusing. A Republican convention, composed in great part of men connected with the internal revenue department, assembled in Greensboro a few days ago and declared in favor of the abolition of the internal revenue system. Imagine a party which has been kept in existence by the internal revenue machine being in favor of abolishing

The religious element defeated Bob Ingersoll, who was a candidate for delegate to Chicago, says a Washington letter, and then it adds that delegates "shamelessly offered to sell their votes to the highest bidder." Low bidding, instead of religion, would seem to be what demoralized

HOW IT CAME UP. An Analysis of the Vote on Taking Up

Cowardly Bully, Makes an Ass of Himself.

Washington, April 15.—Randall returned from Philadelphia time enough yesterday to organize his legion for opposition to taking up the tariff bill. Kelly had previously, with the aid of Reed, fixed the Rosenth Chief morning publican contingent. This morning a formal meeting of the Pennsylvanians decided to fight the measure, as one of them afterward phrased it, step by step and inch by inch. All of the signs at the hour of the assembling of the House pointed to a hot and uncomfortably close conflict, and these were not changed until the result was actually announced. The galleries rapidly filled. The House itself was very nearly full, including some persons paired with absent gentlemen. Very soon after prayers the seats were generally occupied. The redoubtable Randall was at his desk once more. Eaton went across to speak in his ear some suggestion. Morrison flitted from place to place. A number of small measures were considered. Impatient persons in the galleries whispered, "Why don't they bring it up?" alluding of course to the bill in Morrison's charge. The morning hour was announced by the Speaker as starting at 12:30. At eight minutes to 1 Mr. Chairman Morrison arose and addressed the chair. But Carlisle recognized Talbott for some other purpose. Five minutes to 1 Morrison secured recognition. The Republicans started to oppose going into committee of the Whole. but held back at the last moment. Every member seemed to vote to go into committee, at which there were smiles and smiles, and a little chaffing. The Speaker called the gentle-man from New York, and S. S. Cox, the veteran, seized the gavel. Eaton had just left Randall and taken a seat near the front. He arose immediately with an objection. "And I object," chorussed Pig Iron Kelly. The fun had started. These obstacles blocked the committee's way, and the House resumed its sitting. Did you ever see a committee of the Whole vanish? Well, the Chairman never had much to say upon the sub wilts and the Speaker buds forth in ject of African slavery until she got his stead. The ex-Chairman, standing on the floor in the open space before the Speaker, says his report from a paper, or rather pretends to read something like this: "Mr. Speaker: The committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union has had under consideration bill so-and-so, and has come to no conclusion thereon; " or "has reported back bill so-and-so and recommend its passage." In the, present case the statement was that the measure had been refused and that objection had been raised; whereupon the objection was considered by the House. The demand for the yeas and nays on the question of consideration was general on both sides of the chamber. Lively interest was manifested in the vote as it progressed. Bennett, expectant, confident, sat in his own chair. He had been there all the morning. Cox threw his "aye" on the second call from the portal in the screen. Dowd answered also on the second call from his seat, as did each of the others. All of the North Carolina Democrats voted in favor of consideration, but the two Republicans voted with the large majority of their party against it. Some of the correspondents who kept tally figured up five majority; others, only two, while one or two men were heard to say that the bill was gone. But the result was soon ascertained by official announcement to be a majority of two in a total vote of 140 to 138. Five Republicans represented the affirmative. They are: An derson, of Kansas; Nelson, Straight

It is clear they would not have broken from their patrty without strong cause. And the same remark is to be made respecting the 39 Democrats in opposition except so far as it is to be qualified by the known fact that some of them have no such great majorities for protection be hind them. Mr. Randall had 57 in caucus. To-day he mustered only 39 Three revenue reformers were absent unpaired. Thus New York shows up a majority for considering the bill. Of the three Connecticu Democrats, two, Messrs. Mitchell and Seymour, voted aye; Mr. Eaton, no Delaware, no; Maryland, Covington not voting; Hoblitzell, Talbott, aye Findlay, no; Virginia, aye-Cabell Garrison, Tucker; no-Barbour, Geo. D. Wise. affirmative vote of the Democrats. Hewitt, of Alabama, voted no, as did Hunt, of Louisiana. The great interest as to how the States would vote was in Ohio. Mr. Hurd had counted confidently on six for the bill. The vote stood: For-Geddes, Hurd, Le Fevre, Jordan, Murray, Seney, 6. Against—Converse, Foran, Morey, Paige, Warner, the tariff question with an ably writ ten speech of just an hour's length It was facetiously said that it took three men to deliver it—Goldsmith W. Hewitt, of Alabama, protectionist, who held copy on Morrison's left, Morrison himself, and Blackburn on his right, received the sheets from the speaker as he despatched them. He was heard with close attention and applauded and congratulated by his party friends. Mr. Kelly's reply was his usual vein of abuse of England. and exposure of her working-class wretchedness. He said nothing of that in his own country as that was on the protection gauge. His time was extended a half hour. Mills, of Texas, concluded the day's discussion in a forcible effort, which roused Cannon and Hoar, Republicans, and Mr. Eaton, Democrat. They did not relish his statement that the agricultural product of the county had greatly depreciated from 1860 to 1880, the period of high tariff. But he insisted he had official figures. Cannon was after the speech was stupid enough, after the speech was concluded to ask if he believed the statement. This is a victorious day for the revenue reformers.
