THE CONVENTIONS.

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun says that the hotel keepers of Chicago report that the attendance at the Democratic convention this year will be more than usually large, and that the manager of the Palmer House has written that all his rooms are engaged for the Democratic convention, but that he can still furnish some rooms for the Republican convention, to which there does not seem to be such a rush. Heretofore the Republican conventions were the most largely attended. Speaking of the respective candidates the correspondent adds:

It is understood that the Americus Club of Philadelphia will attend the Democratic convention in the interest of Mr. Randall, and the Tammany people will be there simply as lookers on, and with no purpose of undertaking to dictate the action of the convention. If there should be any mob pressure brought to bear on the Democratic convention, it is antici pated it will come from those interested in Western candidates; but this only in the contingency which absolutely and irrevocably leaves Mr. Tilden's name from the list of candidates, for it seems to have become so thoroughly recognized as scarcely to merit question that if he will be the GINGHAM UMBRELLAS, Gents' band-made and candidate no other name will be presented to the convention. A Demo cratic Senator said to day that in all the conversations on that side of the Senate chamber it was universally agreed that Tilden would get the iomination by acclamation if would only speak the word. A Massachusetts Republican of prominence says Mr. Tilden would get from 20,000 to 25,000 votes from Republicans in that State, who would gladly seize the opportunity to show their disapproval of the fraud by which he was deprived of the Presidency. Mr.
Tilden has never committed an error in his political calculations, and he has no doubt himself that, should he consent to run, he would be triumphantly chosen over any nominee the Republicans could put up. We have not the slightest doubt that if Mr. Tilden will come out of his shell, and say that he would acand would be nominated, nor have we any doubt if, when the convention meets, notwithstanding his silence and apparent unwillingness to be a candidate, it nominates him with anything like unanimity that he will accept. It must be gratifying to him to thus see a great party looking to him as a forlorn hope, and beseeching him to lead it out of the wilderness up to the mountain top. We do not believe the sole hope of the Democracy is in Mr. Tilden, and we don't believe he is the embodiment of all the virtues desirable in a candidate, nor do we believe that he could lead every other Democrat in the race. We believe that any State that will cast its electoral vote for Tilden would cast it for Bayard, Payne, Randall, Cleveland, McDonald, or any other good man that the convention might nominate. All this talk about thousands of Republicans in one State or another being anxious to vote for him to rebuke the fraud of '76 is mere nonsense. They could have rebuked it by protesting against it at the time, or by casting their votes for Hancock four years ago, which they took very good care not to do. They are not nearly as anxious to rebuke as they are represented to be.

Whilst we recognize the ability, the patriotism and the services Mr. Tilden has rendered to the people, we cannot work ourselves up into any great degree of enthusiasm over him, and we believe now that if he were nominated it would throw a cloud over the canvass from the start. Republican illustrated papers would be filled with all sorts of ridiculous cartoons, and Nast's pencil would from week to week illustrate Mr. Tilden in all the phases from the spoon-fed invalid to the muscular athlete, with the Democratic party down on its knees before him beseeching him to come to the rescue. Nast not only helped to beat Greely but helped to kill him. One of the hardest things to encounter in political campaigning is caricature and ridicule. Falsehoods can be met and bad arguments answered, but the cartoonist's pencil or the jester's pen are supreme in the dominion where reason or argument fall stillborn. There is work before the Democracy in the coming campaign, and afterwards if we win, and | 10.85, equivalant to bone phosphate we want a candidate of mental and 36 78, phosphoric acid soluble in ambodily vigor, not only for the work that falls upon the standard bearer before and during the fight, but for the work that must be done after the fight is over and the victory won. We want a candidate to whom the party can look with pride, and for whom the boys can throw up their hats and make the welkin ring.

A correspondent of the Raleigh News from Carthage suggests the name of P. D. Walker, of Mecklenburg, for Attorney General.

THE TARIFF BILL.

ITS PROSPECTS INCREASED AND ITS FRIENDS GROWING MORE CONFIDENT.

Great Speech of Frank Hurd --- The Republican Movement to Strike Out the Enacting Clause of the Morrison Bill Likely to Fail .-- Another Conterence of the Internal Revenue Reformers and the Adoption of a Threatening Resolution. Correspondence of THE OBSERVER.

Washington, April 29.-The great est speech yet made in this Congress. and one of the most powerful speeches of recent years, was delivered by Frank Hurd, of Ohio, this afternoon. It was a magnificent piece of oratory as well as ratiocination. At its cose nearly all the Democrats and many Republicans clustered around him to offer congratulations. The speech not only took the House by storm, but increased the already increasing prospects of the Morrison tariff bill. Gen Clingman declared that two million copies should be printed and circulated.

Mr. Hurd has a fine presence strong physical powers, a superb voice, faultless elocution and a wellordered, logical, virile mind, stored with great learning in law, literature and politics. He has mastered every trench of the tariff subject and presents the revenue reform side of it with the highest dramatic art and the finest analytical ability. The report was current to-day on what I consider good authority that another conference had been held of those Representatives who are most directly interested in the repeal of the internal revenue laws. It is said that a resolution to this effect was adopted: If by the time the Repub lican motion to strike out the enacting clause of the Morrison bill is made in the House (probably next Tuesday), the Ways and Means committee shall report an amendment or an independent bill embodying what is known as the Carlisle amendment of the recent caucus, that then the members composing this conference will not vote to strike out. The intimation, of course, is that unless this shall be done these Representatives will vote to kill the bill. It will be remembered that at the caucus it was agreed that the internal revenue matters were to share the fate of the tariff; if that was lost all was lost. The implied threat above stated would indicate a distrust or juggling for position. I would prefer to believe the former. Certainly somebody is
