THE SOUTHERN DELEGATES.

On their way through Washington to Chicago some of the Southern delegates said that while their preferences were for Arthur, they were not irrevocably committed to him, but were open to "argument." Exactly what style of "argument" was not stated. Quite a number of them had conferences with Mr. Bayne, of Pennsylvania, a friend of the planned knight from Maine.

The probabilities are that the Southern delegations will be mostly solid for Arthur on the first ballot, and if the result of this vote be such as to give ground for the belief that he can be nominated, they will stick to him; if not, they will break and the bargaining will begin. We don't know of any Southern leader that can control and hold the delegations together after they break from Arthur, and they will drift toward the man who they think stand the best chances of final success. The only way they can be kept together will be by a movement on the part of Arthur's managers, in the event his nomination be hopeless, to combine with the friends of some of the other candidates with a view to controlling the action of the convention and dictating its candidates. This must be done to defeat Blaine, who, with the strength he already has, can win the nomination if he can split the Southern delegations, scatter them, and gather in the stray ones to his camp. As a rule, outside of Arthur, the Southern delegates have no special preference, and they prefer him simply for the reason that he is, and they think he stands the best chance of carrying off the prize. They, in the language of Riddleberger, are for Arthur because Arthur is for them, and as they are for Arthur because Arthur is for them, so will they be for any other man who is for them. This is the practical interpretation of being "open to argument."

There is no telling what a day or an hour may bring forth in a national convention. A quick and unanticipated move sometimes spoils what are seemingly the best laid and most carefully matured plans. Even the large majority of delegates do not know in the morning how they will stand at noon, and are controlled by influences that they themselves do not suspect. Not unfrequently the work is done in a moment of excitement, the result of some sudden move, facilitated by the liberal use and free indulgence of stimulating beverages, and the cool-headed man of the morning finds himself, enthusiastically, yelling in a manner that would put a Comanche Indian to shame over the impossible man of a few hours before. Such are conventions. The man does not live who can now tell who the Republican nominee will be, nor where the Southern delegations will light.

In his speech on the Yellowstone Park in the Senate John A. Logan, of Illinois, became eloquently indignant in his denunciation of lobbyists, and declared that he had been lobbied more on this park business than on any other business he ever had been in all the time had been in the Senate. It seems to us that if he had such an aversion to being lobbied he could have made that fact known and cut the lobbyists short. We rather fancy that much of this indignation is impromptu.

Miss Maude Crowley, daughter of Ex-Congressman Crowley, of Lockport, N. Y., died last Sunday, aged 19. It is said she was engaged to Allan Arthur, President Arthur's son, who broke the engagement, which resulted in melancholy which hastened her death.

The banks that have failed number ten, out of a grand total of 7,448 banks and banking houses in this country. As long as the remaining 7,438 pay one hundred cents on the dollar, the financial condition of the United States is pretty solid.

Macdon Telegraph: All the leading financiers are agreed that the panic will help matters. Perhaps so, if a number of broken bankers are sent to the penitentiary and more stringent laws are passed for the protection of the people's money.

Ferdinand Ward, General Grant's wicked partner, wore a nice little moustache, a nice little imperial, and his hair smoothed down a la pigeon wing on his forehead. His ears are large, but not of the donkey model.

In 1883 Chicago prostitutes wasted $15,000,000 in their 3,100 liquor saloons, and 18,000 of them languished in jail for disturbing the public peace. Over 6,000 of those arrested were under twenty years of age.

The South need not expect to escape all the afflictions. The walking mania has broken out in this paper.

The hall where the Republicans will have the racket in Chicago will seat nine thousand persons.

A movement is on foot in New York to secure the solid support of the Democratic factions in that city for Tilden at the Chicago convention.

Nebraska is considerably west of the center, but she shows her progress in civilization by sending a prize fighter to the penitentiary for three years.

Sugar is lower in price to-day than it has been in twenty years, and yet the free traders are howling to put it on the free list. It is on the free list in San Francisco, and yet prices are from 2 to 3 cents a pound higher than in New York.

A VOICE FROM BALTIMORE.

Reasons why Mr. Samuel Wittkowsky should be placed upon the Democratic State Ticket.

A Baltimore correspondent of the Winston Sentinel writes a ringing letter in advocacy of Mr. Samuel Wittkowsky for State Treasurer, from which we clip the following:

There is a field for the display of liberality of thought in politics as well as in other pursuits. As a resident of Baltimore, politics of States, other than my own, have but a passing interest for me, but I cannot refrain from applauding and aiding, if possible, the good work of a new man in North Carolina politics. I refer, of course, to the advocacy, by the Lincolnian N. C. Press, of Mr. Samuel Wittkowsky for State Treasurer. In an article in the issue of April 4th, entitled "A Hebrew in Office," the Press says that notwithstanding the fact that there are three thousand Hebrews living in North Carolina, who own about five million dollars worth of property, and pay about one-fifth of the total taxes of the State, they have laid no claim to a share in the offices in their State, but have ever worked in the van of the Democratic party in the interest of good government, using the name, money and influence for other candidates of their party. A communication in the Charlotte Home Democrat of May 2nd, bears also upon the same topic. It seems that Mr. Wittkowsky is well known in Western North Carolina, and his adherents and friends, as yet, are not numerous, but he has been in Hebrew in office in the Tarheel State.

The Jews are an old race of people and have occupied important positions in our country at all times. From their ranks have come great men in every department of art, science and letters. During the persecutions, which they suffered in the middle ages, they turned themselves to money changing and money lending, because the avenues to all other occupations were closed to them. They converted their possessions into gold and silver, because their property was plundered and destroyed by the inhuman tormentors who were liable to pounce down on them at any moment, and the fact that they could easily gather and carry off with them their wealth, when their lives were endangered and flight became necessary. The skill they naturally acquired in matters of money, they have transmitted to their offspring by heredity, and it is universally admitted that no better financiers exist to-day than the descendants of these much-abused money lenders of the dark ages.

In the offices that they have occupied in this country, the Hebrews have all shown themselves worthy of the confidence placed in them. Without going into particulars, as an example, we may take Mr. Judah P. Benjamin who died very recently in Paris. He was United States Senator from Louisiana, afterwards Attorney General, then Secretary of War, and finally Secretary of State of the Confederate States. After the downfall of the Confederacy, he moved to London, became one of the leading members of the bar, and filled the honorable position of Queen's Counsel until compelled to retire because of his health. This man was a Hebrew, and died of the same disease that has caused the death of so many of his race, that he believed in to the end, to his best ability, and to the interest of all concerned.

Since North Carolina has had, as yet, no representative of this race in office, it would, to my mind at least, only be showing the respect and consideration due, if not to individuals deserving well of their fellow-citizens, but to the State, to elect a man who was a Hebrew, and who had shown himself worthy of the confidence placed in him. Mr. Wittkowsky is known to me, but all accounts, given by the papers referred to, and by his friends, show him to be a very worthy gentleman, who will faithfully and conscientiously carry out the most arduous duty in his position, and, if the people of North Carolina will tender him this office, for which he is so admirably fitted, they will, I am sure, never regret the confidence they have put in a man who will never betray it. If elected, he will, no doubt, follow the same strict principles that characterize his private business, which must be enormous, and will conduct his office with that unswerving fidelity to the interests of his party and with that considerate regard for the public good that have ever been shown by all his colleagues, who have held important official trusts.

Though the gentleman, in this case, as worthy as any that could be found, the principle of the movement the Press makes, is to be encouraged and supported rather more than any single individual. The stand taken by the Press is, in my opinion, one, and if it fails in its glorious attempt to demonstrate that the narrow-minded superstition and bigotry of the Medieval period are now dead, and that tolerance, freedom of thought and liberal-mindedness prevail instead, it will only be because it is ahead of the time and people, and that the actual condition of the popular feeling does not warrant the position it takes. If it should not succeed, it will be conscious, at least, of the fact that it has nobly acquitted itself of a duty it felt devolving upon itself to perform in the interest of the liberal ideas and opinions of the 19th century, the age of civilization, progress and invention.

Digest of Supreme Court Decisions.

Baldwin News and Observer.

Peebles vs. Pate.

1. An endorsed return of an officer upon a execution is admissible evidence in all cases where the execution is evidence.

2. The defendant in execution and the purchaser agreed that the latter should buy the land and hold the same under the sheriff's deed until he was repaid the purchase money by the defendant. Held that such a transaction will be upheld in the absence of fraud upon creditors of the defendant.

3. Where an execution has been issued upon a judgment and land sold thereunder and a deed made to the purchaser it is not competent to have another execution upon the same judgment and sell the same land a second time for a balance of the same debt, alleged to be unpaid, and the purchases under the latter gets no title. Such a proceeding can be sustained only when the defendant subsequently acquires a new estate in the land, which is subject to execution, or perpetrates a fraud rendering the sale void.

4. The defendant in ejectment is not to revive a dormant judgment person where the execution under which the plaintiff purchased conferred no power upon the officer to sell the lands.

Every estoppel must be reciprocal; it must bind both parties; a stranger can neither take advantage of it or be bound by it. (The plaintiff can have no advantage of any estoppel that may exist between the parties to the mortgage deed mentioned in this case.)

McLean vs. McLean.

1. Motion for leave to issue execution to revive a dormant judgment may be granted the plaintiff, although he had brought another action to recover the amount of the judgment and recovered judgment in the same.

2. Where the plaintiff, as administrator, and subsequently sued his administration bond, alleging a breach in the non-payment of said judgment out of assets which afterwards came into his hands and recovered judgment thereon; Held that the judgments were separate securities for the same debt, and that the satisfaction of one judgment will discharge both.

Currie vs. Clark.

1. Where, at execution sale, the defendant's property was sold off by the plaintiff at an inconsiderable sum in pursuance of an alleged fraudulent arrangement to suppress competition among bidders; Held in an action to impeach the title acquired by the plaintiff that said title will be set aside and the parties placed in statu quo, without prejudice to the plaintiff's remedies from lapse of time since the sale.

2. It is the duty of the judge, at the request of a party to an action, to put his instructions in writing and read them to the jury. (The Code, § 414.) But where the court, as judge, gave oral instructions not differing from those set out in the written charge, it does not constitute ground for a new trial in the absence of any evidence that the jury asked the written instructions.

The opinion of the general public in regard to Avery Chaffin's Federal is continued by elegantly, however, the speaker and actor. All say it is the best remedy that can be procured for all affections of the vocal organs, throat and lungs.

COMPARISON IS PROOF.

A great many merchants seem to try to make a great deal to do about the panic in New York and its effect on the CLOTHING TRADE, etc. One of our firm, who chanced to be in New York when the great money crash took place, says it had no significance either on the Clothing or Dry Goods market, but this is the season when manufacturers are compelled to unload. The manufacturers die hard but dull times at last compel them to sacrifice their stock for cash. It is a well known fact we make no unnecessary noise unless we have
