MR. LOGAN ACCEPTS.

In THE OBSERVER this morning will be found in full Gen. John A. Logan's letter of acceptance. It is not quite as National Temperance Society circulong as Mr. Blaine's letter nor quite lated a memorial to the conference as readable. We do not know whether Gen. Logan lays claim to originality or not, but he certainly asking it to "take cognizance of the alcoholic liquor traffic," and requesting that it would not endorse the originality or not, but he certainly "saloon parking of the Democratic er until last night when she lost consistency." cannot lay claim to any in this document, for in it he has simply imitated Blaine, though he puts his imitation in a less plausible and less artistic way. It is a very weak imitation, and presents not one single idea or theme that was not discussed or alluded to in the original document. The only place where he gets out of the rut and attempts to spread himself is when he strikes the civil rights theme, which gives him a chance to dilate, regardless of figures or facts, on the, from his standpoint, unhappy condition of political affairs in the terrorized South. As an illustration of his utter disregard of the truth of current history or of statistical figures, with which he ought to have at least some acquaintance if not familiarity, he unblushingly states that in "many of the Southern States the celored population is in large excess of the white," when he knew, or ought to have known, that this is the case only in two, South Carolina and Louisiana, so that the tower he builded falls to the ground for want of a only desire is for the good of the foundation. We are not surprised at this reckless assertion on his part, this reckless assertion on his part, but we are somewhat surprised that he should make statements the falsity of which are so patent, and which can so easily be shown. This is a reckless trifling with the truth that does his sense but little credit. But it shows the mental and moral bent of the man, and that he will scruple at no statement which in his opinion may add to the strength of the case he has in hand. We have been perfectly satisfied that he proposed to build his hopes on the bloody shirt, and felt sure, when Mr. Blaine was so silent upon it, that he left that part of the job to Mr. Logan. But in this even he presents no new argument, repeating only what has been said in every campaign, (except the falsehood as to population, which we never knew larger and smaller Radical writers and simpers than himself. Aside whom any one would ask the suf-frages of the people. We respect the convictions of others, but for our-selves we say that it is just as impos-sible for us to support Blaine as it is to lie or to steal. We are assembled here today to confer together and to consider what practical action we shall take. We have one purpose in view, and as reasonable men we de-sire to actiforether, but we shall not from showing the animus of the writer, his letter of acceptance is a ument worthy of but little attention, as it presents nothing new and discusses no point that Blaine had not more fully and plausibly discussed before him. As coming from John A. Logan, a Vice Presidential candidate, it will be read and then take its place among the campaign rubbish.
