SOMEWHAT REMARKABLE. In Mr. Blaine's answer to the interrogatories of the Indianapolis Sentinel publishers, in the libel case, he says, in reply to the question about his child's tembstone, that he had not his child's tombstone, that he had not portfolio, it is more than likely he seen the stone since the first of July, since when it has been defaced by erasure of certain figures and lettering, but intimates that it was done at after that until the existing vacancy the suggestion of the New Age a is filled. the suggestion of the New Age, a Democratic newspaper published in Augusta, Maine. It is somewhat remarkable that a man who professed to be so horribly shocked at the vandalism on his child's tombstone, would not go to the cemetery in the same city in which he resides, and see for himself whether the vandalism had really been committed or not, and not trust to reports to form an opinion which he was to back with his oath. He swears that he believes so and so when he does not really know of his own knowledge that the child's tombstone has been defaced. One would naturally suppose that a father would take interest enough in a matter of that kind to go look at the stone, even if he had no swearing to do about it afterwards.

Another remarkable answer is that to the question of the place and time of his marriage in the life of James G. Blaine, published this year by E. striking a boy named Willie Hopkins.

It is remarkable that while he admits seeing portions of that book, written by a friend, and many of the facts gathered by the author in conversation with him, and published in his own town, that that portion of the book in which one would naturally suppose he would be much interested and desire to have correct—he never saw before it went into the book nor

Some 200 persons witnessed the execution which took place in the jail yard. Until this morning Murray has steadily refused spiritual consolation, but at an early hour he sent for a Catholic priest, and since then he has been sentenced by the creditors. Geo. and Andrew Buchanan left the city Sunday leaving no clue as to their whereabouts. It was then that the first suspicion of crookedness was aroused and rumors were set afloat. The rumors first took tangible form this evening, when George W. Morris, the assignee of the company, resigned and turned the entire business over to the Fidelity Trust Company. The cause, it is lation, but at an early hour he sent for a Catholic priest, and since then he has been almost constantly engaged in religious worship.
