DR. GRISSOM ON YORK. Dr. Eugene Grissom is an old line

Republican, a man of brains and ability, and is known from one end of as a candidate for the governorship, but he refused to permit his name to go before the convention. When such a man who does not court notoriety, openly and emphatically repudiates the candidate of his party for a high office there must be reasons and good reasons for it. Dr. Grissom gives those reasons in cool, respectable phrase, but so pointed and unequivocal that there is no mistaking their full force and meaning. He knows York, has watched his public career, is familiar with his record has been thrown in official contact with him, and from his knowledge does not hesitate to say that Dr. York is not a fit man to sit in the gubernatorial chair of North Carolina; that in his hands neither the unfortunate in-State, or her future prosperity would be safe. He recognizes in the Mongrel candidate for the Governorship the arrant demagogue, who in years past goods were still large. The cause for this may, we think, be found not in islature tried to block by his opposition and his votes every effort made to better the condition of the unfortunates deprived of reason and would see them locked up in filthy jail cells rather than vote for the erection of asylums for them; tried to block the efforts made to establish normal schools to train teachers to educate the children of the State; was opposed to promoting the development and progress of the State by the completion of railroads under progress of construction, and in which millions of dollars had been invested by the people and the State, and who in all his egislative career was never known to originate any measure for the benefit of any portion of her people. Whatever there may have been in his record that was commendable York now repudiates.

1882, and 217,031 in 1881. The stock held by American spinners at their mills was undoubtedly very small.

now repudiates.

This is York. York as seen and measured by nine hundred and nines ty-nine out of a thousand of the intelligent, thinking people of the State, to whom he appeals with his campaign artifices, cheap tricks, and disgusting demagogy for their votes to occupy a chair in which he would be as much out of place as Sitting Bull would be in presiding over a council Doubtless Dr. Grissom's opinion is shared by many other Republicans, who support York not as a matter of choice, or because they like him, but because the party lash is mightier than the spirit of independence or the demands of patriotism.

THE COTTON MOVEMENT. LETTER OF MESSRS. LATHAM, ALEXANDER & CO

Review of the Movement for the Past Year, and Reflections and Speculations on the Present Crop.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16th, 1884.

DEAR SIR:—The past year will long be remembered on account of its financial commotions and business depressions, yet it was rather une-ventful to the cotton trade in this ountry.
While there were no great advances in the price of the staple, neither did any marked declines take place. The any marked declines take place. The average price for the year, though not high, was not so low as to be unremunerative to planters, and the crop, although far from being large, was not seriously small, the total being 5,713,200 bales. Our own crop estimate, as published

Sept. 13th on page 110 of our book, "Cotton Movements and Fluctuations," was 5,900,000 bales. This was much smaller than the majority of estimates current at that time.

The cotton year 1883-84 opened with crop accounts and bureau report unfavorable in September; they were similar in tenor during October, but cotton had been matured early by drought, and a free movement of the crop, together with the general depression prevailing in business, prevented any considerable advance in price. Middling was 10 18 in New York the first week in September, and 10½ in the corresponding week of November. During December it still ranged at 10½, and during January but slightly above that.

The price in Liverpool had varied, meantime, from 51d at the opening of our cotton year to 6d in January. That market had, by the failure of its most prominent "bear" operator, been relieved of a long felt pressure. and was in a more natural state than for a long time past; it was once more in a position to be influenced by supply and demand and other legitimate

But the first decided upward imetus to prices was given in March. Receipts at the ports and interior towns had then become very small, and it had become apparent to the general public that the estimates of a reduced crop, put forth early in the season by well informed houses, had been based on actual knowledge and were about to be verified.

Much speculative excitement fol-lowed. The price of middling in New York advanced to 11 $ before March was over, and reached 117 by the middle of April. The volume of business in cotton for future delivery in that city was well maintained. Notwithstanding the small range of fluc-tuations, the dullness in general

Prices of contracts had of course followed the general tendency of the staple itself, and August contracts. from being 11.14 at the opening of the cotton year and only 11.35 in December, had advanced to 12.35 by the 12th of April. That was the highest point reached for the year. Mercantile business was dragging, stocks of goods in first hands had grown heavy, financial values were declining, and gold was flowing out of the country. These causes and the financial crash that was precipitated in May caused cotton to give way. But not to such an extent as might have been expected prices declined but slowly; all through May and through most of the next month middling brought 11#; it was only in the latter part of June that it declined to 11 cents, at about which price it remained to the end of the his hands neither the unfortunate in-cotton year just closed. In Liverpool sane, the educational interests of the middling uplands reached 6 3 8d in May, and was 618d at the end of

At the close of the cotton year, now, who when a member of the Leg- of spindles nor in the producing power of the mills, but rather in a marked decrease in purchases by jobbers and retailers throughout the untry. These, warned by the have for some time past pursued a very cautious policy in their business, and have bought only sparingly, forcing manufacturers and manufacarers' agent to carry the bulk of the

Considering that the crop of 1881-82 was nearly seven million bales, prices of cotton were well maintained during the year just past, and at its close stocks of cotton show that the large crop mentioned has ceased to be rep resented in the present position of

Stocks in the United States ports on August 31st were smaller than for several years past, being 126,992 bales, against 236.540 in 1883, 125,582 in

The total visible supply of cotton in the world was 1,549,508 bales, against 1,732,705 last year, 1,336,924 the year previous, and 1,713,300 in 1881. Consumption of cotton in the United States has been only fairly large in the North. In the South it reached 339,517 bales, against 313,393 last year and 286,954 in 1882, an increase of 52,563 bales in three years. In Europe the consumption was somewhat smaller than for the previous year, During August, however,

European spinners rapidly reduced their surplus stocks, and at the close of this year held no more cotton at their mills than they held twelve months before, notwithstanding the large crop of 1881 82, nearly seven million bales.

In a letter dated Sept. 4th and addressed to us, Mr. Thos. Ellison, of Liverpool, has comprehensively set forth the takings and the probable future requirements of spinners throughout the world, and the probable invisible supply system of cotton ble invisible supply or stock of cotton at their mills. The same leading authority concludes that the supply of cotton from India, Brazil and the

the past year; low prices, unprofita-ble spinning, sluggishness in all branches of business, on account of heavy shrinkage in the value of securities and want of confidence among buyers, together with an almost entire absence of speculative activity. Our own information, derived from a very extensive correspondence with leading bankers, merchants and manufacturers, shows that there has been a material overproduction of cotton goods, leaving at the close of the year excessive stocks in the hands of manufacturers. But this state of affairs has already existed for nearly three years. Conservatism and retrenchment have been the policy of the masses during that period, and the good effects of this course must soon be felt. An entire demand and laws distribution active demand and large distribution of goods may set in at any time. Besides, it is not probable that the large speculative element of the world will remain inactive much longer. On the contrary, with the least encouragement, speculative operations might Cotton is not high at present It is an article indispensable to the whole world, and its production is measurably restricted; it cannot, therefore, be expected to share in depressions in trade to the same extent as other articles for which substitutes can be used and which are more easily over produced. The supply from all foreign countries has not increased in many years it has actually diminished, leaving the American crop still as important a factor in the cotton supply of the world as it was more than twenty years ago.

There is no probability that the growing American crop will be large, and we see nothing in the present situation to warrant any feeling of despondency.

Before the end of the cotton year the whole situation may have changed for the better. Very truly, LATHAM, ALEXANDER & Co. ON THE EVE OF BATTLE for the Battle of the Ballots. Washington, Oct. 13.—A Columbus, O., special to the Evening Starsays: The last day of the campaign developes some changes, though each party still claims to have assured victory. The respective committees give out today some idea as to esti mated majorities, and while claiming as a rule that figures don't lie, are willing to admit that they are sometimes misplaced. The Democrati committee foot up a p:ajority of 9,224 The Republican committee are not quite so exact, but adhere to the gen this State to the other. His standing in the Republican party is such that his name was prominently mentioned big name was prominently mentioned by the New York Cotton Exchange it unwise to make public their real estimate, but the fact is their actual estimate, but the fact is their actual figures make a total of over 18,000 majority, and all over 10,000 they ex they call "the Maine surprise" over again. They have endeavored to keep this very quiet, but it is the estimate they have sent to Blaine, and which they will stand by and which they claim will be verified be fore the sun sets tomorrow. These figures were all made on Saturday, but since then the committee has received information which give them greater confidence in their estimate. One of the reasons for this is a revision of the wool growers' vote, which give the Republicans the bene fit of a more decided change than had been anticipated. In a letter letter received from a prominent wool grower he says: We punished the Republicans for reducing the duty on wool, now we are going to punish the Democrats for not restoring. Another reason for their restored confidence is the advices from the advices received this morning are quite encouraging in some quarters as to the German vote. These facts have certainly given the Republicans much more confidence than they had Saturday. They declare that nothing but money and

OHIO CLAIMED BY THE MANA

Western reserve that a full Republican vote is going to the polls, while fraud can defeat them. A telegram from the National Republican committee that a fund of $150,000 has been sent from New York since Saturday for distribution in Cleveland, Columbus and Cincin nati to aid the Republicans, is pro nounced a falsehood by Chairman Oglevee. The Democratic chairman, lowever, has advised the Democratic managers in those cities to look out for such corruption fund. Gov. Hendricks left this morning for Parkersburg, West Virginia, where he makes his last speech in the October campaign. In conver sation he said that he was confident that the Democrats would carry Ohio. Of Indiana he had no doubt whatever, and the result in Novem ber he predicted would be the election of the Demogratic ticket. He was not, however, as confident of Ohio as of Indiana. Even if Ohio did go Republican, as it did in 1876, he added that New York would go for Cleveland in November, just as it did for Tilden in 1876. He was not enthusiastic, but was earnest in his prediction. He says this is the greatest and hardest campaign he ever was in, but that it has improved his health very much. His speech in Parkersburg tonight is to be a joint one with Gen. Woodford, of New This afternoon there was a meeting of citizens designated by the Republican State Committee with the committee appointed by the Cleveland and Hendricks club to co-operate in detecting fraud at the polls tomorrow. The Republican Committee appeal to the business men of the entire state to close their places of bus iness tomorrow, and to devote the day to organization in the interest of the purity of the ballot box. There never was such a cry of fraud in the history of politics in this State, and which-ever party is defeated is going to run to cover under it. Tissue ballots, combination tickets, fraudulent votes and voters are all attractive. The railroads are generously co-operating with the managers. The consolidated roads have reduced the fare to one cent per mile each way to persons visiting the exposition from points in North Carolina. The tickets will be placed on sale as soon as possible and continue on sale till October 26th, and be good for five days.

THE U. S. SUPREME COURT.

The Important Cases to be First Heard. WASHINGTON, October 12.—The Supreme Court of the United States reassembled at noon today with a full attendance of members of the bar. A few attorneys were admitted to practice, but no other business was transacted and court adjourned at 12.15.

The regular call of the docket will be gin tomorrow with first assigned case for that day viz: No. 53, United States against Waddell and others, which will be submitted on printed briefs. The next cases to be called are what are known as the "war premium" or "Alabama claims," cases of the Great Western and Columbia Insurance Companies against the United States, brought here by appeal from the cour of claims. These were suits brought by the insurance companies to recover in one case $546,965, and in the other $876,843, alleged to be due them out of losses arising from the capture and destruction by confederate cruisers of certain vessels on which the petitioners had issued policies of insurance The suits were brought in the court of claims for the alleged reason that the special tribunal appointed to consider such cases excluded the claims of the petitioners. The undisposed of balance of the award was covered into the United States treasury and the petitioners were left without any other means of enforcing their demand. The court of claims in an opinion delivered by its chief justice dismissed the petitions upon the ground that no cause of action against the United States was shown. From this adecision the petitioners have Hendricks and Blaine.

COLUMBUS, Oct 13.-Mr. Blaine left ancaster at a little after 9 o'clock he started, the train going down on the Hocking Valley road, carrying pected to furnish in the way of what Mr. Hendricks, the Democratic candidate for Vice President, arrived at Lancaster. The crowd at the depot cheered Mr. Hendricks, when he appeared on the rear platform of the train, and he returned thanks in a very brief speech, in the course of which he said: "If Ohio to morrow shall support the Democratic cause the fight is over, but if Ohio tomorrow shall not do that, then in Indiana and in Ohio and other States the fight is unto death."

At Columbus ex-Gov Foster and chairman Oglevec, of the Republican State committee, and commissioner Dudley boarded Mr. Blaine's car. There was a stop there of over an hour, but the car was left on the outskirts of the city, and did not go into the depot at all.

Gen. Negrier Disabled. Paris, October 13.-Gen. DeLisle telegraphs that the wound in the leg which Gen. Negrier received in the engagement at Kep is so painful that it is necessary that the officer should take rest and that he would therefore join the columns. He continues: The Chinese in the last engagement lost 1,000 men including a general. Our victory was mainly due to the gallantry of the van guard under com-mand of Capt. Fournier.

Expressions of gratitude on the part of the public are always impressive and solemn. It is pleasant to know that the public are justly praising the merits of Dr. Buil's Cough Syrup, a sale remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, croup, sore throat.
