WILL DO GOOD.

Mr. Blaine's unmanly and disgusting howlings over his defeat, and the wailings of the organs that echo him, can do no harm at this late day, but may do much good. Blaine flourished the bloody shirt vigorously during the campaign when he abandoned the hope of breaking the Solid South, but it failed to make a solid North, and failed to realize for him the cherished hope of his life. It not only failed to do that but in spite of it the Republican majorities were cut down in every Northern State save Pennsylvania, showing that the people paid very little attention to the nonsensical talk about the bloody shirt and the Solid South. The people of the North will not only attach no importance to it now but many of them who voted for Blaine, not because they liked him, but because he was the nominee of the Republican party, are disgusted at his past elec tion performances and will be heartily glad that he was beaten While it will not bring any advantage to Blaine or those who sympathize with him in his defeat, it may do good in the direction where he did not intend it. It has already had the effect of calling out such men as George Gor ham who take occasion to show that these are after thoughts with Mr. Blaine, not inspired by his real sentiments but by the pangs of defeat, and about a complete revolution. Gov. Silk, Stiff and Soft Hat, that when the advanced leaders of the Republican party of years ago pro posed means that would have prevented, in their opinion, a Solid South, he not only gave them no encouragement but threw obstructions in their way. They construe his defeat as a just retribution for his failure to stand squarely up to the Republican leaders in times gone by, while thousands of the better thinking class who supported him see the striking contrast in his letter of acceptance when he spoke so kindly of the South and his slanderous speech in which in the blindness of his rage he places himself either in the attitude of a wilfu lliar or of a mouthing hypocrite. While the stalwart laughs at his dis comfiture the better class of those who supported him turn from him on account of his glaring insincerity and gross self-contradictions. While Blaine strikes with a view to wound he may be really doing the Democratic party service. His wild ravings about the Solid South, may have the effect of making the Solid South a little more cautious perhaps than it might have been under ordinary circumstances. She never in-tended to make or try to make herself unduly conspicuous in running the governmental machine under the next administration, and if she did, all this howling would naturally result in checking that disposition, from policy if nothing else. Neither the leaders of the Democratic party in the North nor in the South are im-Carpets ---- Rugs ---- Cloaks ---- Dolmans beciles, and if Mr. Blaine or his friends believe they are going to commit hari kari just after they have won in a contest which they have waged for a quarter of a century, Mr. Blaine and his friends will be very much mistaken. The men who shape the policy of the Democratic party will show themselves competent for the trust reposed in them, and the solid South will show that while she is rejoiced over the result she has not become, as Mr. Blaine has, mentally unbalanced. Her head is remarkably level and she knows what she is about. Mr. Blaine will discover this before he is much older.

Twenty-five years ago Ira Davenport, of Plymouth, Pa., buried two cannon, and vowed that they should stay in the ground until Democracy triumphed. When the New York canvass settled the Presidential question, he dug them up and filled them with powder, and then he touched the fuse for the triumphal boom. They boomed. One shattered nearly all the glass in town, and the other shattered itself, but Ira was happy and rejoiced

Mr. Dana, of the New York Sun, seems to be somewhat muddled A few days after the election he wrote an editorial to show that there was no prospect of an early dissolution of head of his columns a magnificent either of the great parties, and followed it up a few days later with another editorial to show that the Republican party at the South was dead as a door nail, and that within a few years the Democratic party would be split into several factions.

The Richmond Whig, Billy Mahone's organ, sends the cheering information to Mr. Blaine that he "may be President yet." They may get to making ice in h-ades, but a pretty big cooling will have to take place

Why Cattlornia Went Republican. Before the Presidential election

California was generally placed l Eastern Democrats in the list States doubtful, but likely to go for Cleveland. To persons unacquainted with the recent course of events in the State the reasons for expecting California to give its eight electoral votes to the Democratic candidate seemed conclusive. In 1880 Hancock was given a plurality of seventy-eight over Garfield, and in 1882 the Democrats elected Stoneman Governor by a majority of 23,519, sending at the same time a solid Democratic delegation to Congress. The party's record on local questions was at that time such as to give it c mplete control of the State, its strong support of anti-Chinese measures having won for it a multitude of new recruits. But the 4th of November last brought jority of 15,000 was put in its place. Not only so, but five out of the six Congressional districts into which the State is divided elected Republicans, only one district, by a small margin, sending a Democrat to Washington. The Democratic Legislature, to use an expressive term, was completely wrecked, and the Republican majority insures the substitution of a Republican for Mr. Farley in the United States Senate. The cause of this complete rout is instruc-tive. As usual, the defeat was self inflicted. An idea that ultra legislation would prove popular took pos session of the Democratic leaders. and when the rank and file of the party did not assent to it they per-sisted despite the warnings addressed to them by conservative men. They called an extra session of the Legis lature, and by trying to pass bills excesssively severe upon capital and corporations sought to commit the party to a line of policy that the last State platform had distinctly rejected. Being resisted, the leaders attempted to read about one third of the party out of it. Bad leadership caused a split which it will take years to repair. Of the specific acts committed by the leading faction one may be cited which will reconcile good citizens to the severity of the rebuke administered by the avalanche of November 4 to

"Why, when and where was the rooster adopted as the emblem of Democracy?" The question quoted above and addressed to the editor of the Enquirer, has been asked a thousand times in the last week. It has been suggested, no doubt, by the great popularity of the bird since the 4th day of November. The question has been answered before, but for the benefit of those who do not understand the situation it can be answered. stand the situation it can be answered again. In 1844, after the Harrison campaign, there was great doubt as to how Indiana had cast her vote. The situation was similar to that in New York today in every respect. An editor named Chapman conducted the Democratic newspaper at In-dianapolis, and, as often the case in dianapolis, and, as often the case in boasting over a victory, his editorial rejoicing over the result was termed 'crowing." In a day or two, when some of the back counties were heard from, it seemed his crowing had been premature, and the Whig organ came out giving late returns showing Dem-ocratic defeat, and in the headline was the expression

"Crow, Chapman, crow." This was intended as a taunt, and rooster and printed underneath it the rooster and printed underneath it the words, "We Crow."

It made a palpable hit. The passion for roosters spread, and from that day to this the bird immortalized by the Hoosier editor has been the emblem of Democratic success.

GORHAM AND BLAINF.

It was Proper That they Who Scuttled the Ship Should Get Wet

The Washington National Republican, of which Geo. Gorham used to be editor, publishes the following from him on Blaine's defeat; called out by Blaine's Augusta speech:

"The South was made solid by Blaine's defeat of the "Force bill" in 1875, and Hayes' subversion of the government of South Carolina and Louisiana in 1877. The South thus government of South Carolina and Louisiana in 1877. The South thus made solid was broken in 1881 by the Mahone coalition in Virginia, despite Mr. Blaine's opposition. He summoned all his resources including his newspaper organs to drive Mahone and his followers away from the Resources in the restore the publican party, and to restore the solid South by forcing Virginia back into the Democratic fold. After failing in this work in 1882 he finally succeeded in 1883. This year he was quite willing to have Mahone succeeded but the record.

quite willing to have Mahone succeed, but the wounds he had inflicted proved to be mortal.

"As Mr. Blaine omitted these interesting facts from his speech on the solid South in Augusta last night, I ask space for this mention of them in the newspaper in which I have so often stated them before.

"If Mr. Blaine had been opposed to a solid South, even a year sooner, Virginia would not have been remanded to her previous condition last year and would undoubtedly have been joined by North Carolina. The twenty-three electoral votes of these two States, added to the 182 he received would have given him 205, just four more than enough without New York.

"Mr. Blaine's reason for opposing Mahone, as stated by him to one of his leading friends, in 1881, was that he 'was not going to build up' certain Republicans whom he named. As it turns out he was building up Grover Cleveland and the Democratic party. All of which shows that a ship cannot be scuttled and sunk for the nur-

Quicker North and South Routes.

A few-days ago the stockholders of the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad, at their annual meeting in Wilming-ton, authorized the board of directors to build a branch road from Wilson (or a point near Wilson) through Fayetteville into South Carolina, at whatever time the directors think proper. This is the Wilson short cut that was talked about so much some time ago. This action does not, of very important railroad changes that must come in the near future. Already the New York and Norfolk short-cut North is completed; it will not be a great while before the roads from Richmond to Ridgeway and from Richmond to Ridgeway and from Hamlet to through connections in South Carolina will be complete, and these will throw Raleigh on a direct and quick route between North and South. If the Wilson short-cut is built, that will make a competing line in the same direction, which will ine in the same direction, which will be of vast benefit to Fayetteville.

In all calculations about the future either of Raleigh or Fayetteville, these sure if not imminent railroad changes must be taken into account. President Cleveland's Temporar

Cleveland and his party at the Arlington from the latter part of February to March 4th. The suit of rooms consists of a parlor and three bedrooms on the second floor, overlooking Vermont avenue, and have been occupied in turn by Duke Alexis, Prince of Wales, Emperor Dom Pedro, of Brazil, General Grant and Mr. Roscoe Conkling.
