IS SHE INSANE?

A London dispatch announces that Mrs. Dudley, who shot O'Donovan Rossa, is eccentric if not absolutely insane, and that she once attempted suicide while travelling upon a railroad in England. The probabilities are that when arraigned in court for the shooting the plea of insanity will be put in. In our editorial comment on the shooting yesterday we expressed the opinion that the woman had been worked up to the pitch of seeking Rossa's life by reading and hearing discussed the dynamite explosions in London, and late reports as to the conduct and antecedents of the woman go to confirm this opinion. She seems to have been much agitated over the reports from London, and had copies of Rossa's paper defending these outrages, showing that she took great interest, and that her mind was fixed on the sayings and doings of the dynamite chief, and the deliberation with which she proceeded to carry out her purpose, shows what a deep hold the subject had taken upon her, and how she nursed it. She may or may not be crazy. But crazy people have a good deal of method in their mad ness sometimes, especially when their thought is turned to the accom plishment of any particular object.

THE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL. We publish today the bill introduced in the legislature providing for the establishment of an industrial school in connection with the State University, which tells what it is proposed to do and how it is proposed to be done. The sum appropriated is $15,000 out of the funds in the treasury not otherwise appropriated. This journal has been a friend and advocate of the industrial school from the start, because we believe it to be one of the necessities of the times, and that such school or schools will contribute much in the future in the material growth, development and prosperity of North Carolina. This is a practical age in which we live, and skilled labor is in demand.

The question then recurred Book's amendment as modified.

On this Vance took the floor. The young man who starts out in ridiculed the idea that Senators did life with a fair education, and with not have sufficient knowledge and a knowledge of some useful industry starts out much better equipped for the struggle of life, than he who starts out with his head full of routine classic lore as his stock in trade.

Interested in Uncle Sam's Foreign Policy.

LONDON, Feb. 3.-The Post in special article this morning says America's recent activity in Chili. Peru, Africa and Corea indicates her intention of having a foreign policy The question is one of considerabl importance to England. The policy adopted by Mr. Clevelaud upon assuming the office of president will be watched with keen interests here. The adoption of free trade would mean increased intercourse with the world at large and would compel America to admit the force of the regular foreign policy and to defend her interests in Asia and Africa against European attacks.

A Duel not According to the Code. PORTSMOUTH, VA., Feb. 3.-At about 1 o'clock this morning John L. Jack, who thought he had been slighted by Carter B Page in a matter of social courtesy, challenged the latter then and there to mortal combat. Page left to arm himself, and on his return found Jack waiting for him at the door of a restaurant. Page gave word to fire, and 9 shots followed each other quick succession. Page fired four times and Jack's fifth shot struck Page in the face, the ball lodging in his neck and inflicting a serious and possibly a mortal wound. Jack was arrested and held for trial Both are young men and are well known here. Page has resided in this and other States.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS.

THE INTER-STATE . COMMERCE BILL STILL AT THE FRONT.

The House Gets Through With its Filibustering and Takes up the River and Harbor Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.-SENATE .-Before the Senate met this morning Mr. Riddleberger's desk was the centre of attraction of visitors and such Senators as were in the chamber. A beautiful floral harp was upon it-a tribute, as is presumed, of Riddle-berger's admirers. The harp was over two feet high, the frame composed of tea roses, Japanese helio tropes and mignonettes, the base of azalias, and the upper part of lilies and other rare exotics. The strings of the harp were wreathed with "Is that a Welch harp?" Senator Dawes asked of Senator Jones, of Nevada.

"No," Jones replied, "It is the harp of Erin. The Senate was called to order a the usual hour.

Miller, of New York, presented the credentials of Wm. M. Evarts, elected United States Senator by the State of New York. The credentials, which were unusually lengthy, were read.
During the reading of the credentials
Hoar remarked that in his judgment a certificate from the Governor of a State simply saying that the person named in the certificate was duly elected Senator of the United States from the particular State named for a given term was sufficient creden tials according to the usages of the Senate and laws of the United States.

The chair, announced Mr. Edmunds, stated that the papers read did not contain any certificate from the Governor, as required by Congress. The papers were referred to the committee on privileges and

Morgan introduced a bill accompanied by a memorial on the subject from the Legislature of Alabama, providing for the loan of tents to an association at Mobile, Ala., in control or the inter-State drill. The bill and memorial were appropriately referr-

On motion of Cullom the Senate then resumed consideration of the inter state commerce bill. .

The question was on Plumb's motion to add the words "under similar circumstances" to the amendment offered by Beck which amendment would prohibit a railroad company from charging more for transporting goods over part of its line than for transporting the same goods over its whole line.

Plumb's motion was agreed to yeas 26, nays 20. The question then recurred on common sense to be able to say that railroads should be prohibited from pooling and discriminating against persons and places. There were, no doubt, matters of railroad management that Senators did not under stand, but there were also some simple matters that even the Senate pages could understand. Much eloquence had been expended in the Senate on this railroad subject but Vance thought the eloquence of the Senators was in inverse ratio to their disposition to do anything effective. It had been said that so many people were interested in railroad stocks that we ought not to pass laws to restrict their charges. The same argument would apply to the business of robbing hen roosts. The clamors of railroad men were like the protests of chicken stealers who would inform legislators that they did not understand the business or chicken stealing. He said that it was a very complicated business and differed totally from the vulgar business of stealing things other than chickens. References to railroad authorities as "experts" was in Vance's opinion as though chicken stealers should insist that one of their number, Bill Sykes, for example, should be consulted by the representatives of the people before laws were passed on the subject of chicken stealing, because Bill Sykes thorough ly understood the subject; Bill Sykes had been in the business for forty years and could tell an old hen from a pullet by starlight in the loftiest apple tree in the farm yard. There was in Vance's opinion one great mystery about the railroad business and that was the meek endurance and long suffering patience of the American people. The claims of Vanderbilt, Jay Gould, Albert Fink, et id omne genus to having cheapened the price of commodities by railroad transportation were claims that properly belonged to science and not to the parties named. As well might a sieve claim credit for letting water pass through it. There was not much credit to be given to people who said "the public be damned." The Cullom bill was the direct proge ny of the circumlocution office and would result in nothing. The Senate should not dodge the issue by passing such a bill. Vance advocated the House bill.

Beck said that he would now vote against his own amendment. Since it had been modified by the amendment of Plumb it would make the bill utterly useless if passed. He severely criticised the bill Beck's amendment as modified was

House.-Though scenes attendng the night session were enacted last night, they were not marked by that degree of hilarity which generally characterizes them, and the hours tediously dragged their slow length along. It was after 1 o'clock when the friends of the bankruptcy bill succeeded, after many efforts, in having a call of the House ordered, and it was not until 1:45 that the Sergeant-at-Arms brought in the first batch of recalcitrant members. The same trite and threadbare excuses which have done duty for years were offered and were greeted with the same bursts of derisive laughter, and were in every case deemed satisfactory. The general debate upon the bill was participated in by Breckenridge, of Arkansas, Ochiltree, Stone, of Massachusetts, Washburn, of Minnesota, Hepburn, of Iowa, and Funston, After the debate closed the first section of the bill was read. Reed, of Maine, made a verbal amendment for the purpose of call ing attention of the committee to the fact that nearly all the time devoted to general debate had been consumed by the friends of the bill. O'Neill, of Missouri, expressed his gratitude that the chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors had been gracious enough to allow members to print their speeches in the Record: He had not been able to secure time to make his speech, but he could at least express his views by making motions to strike out the last word He proposed at every stage of the bill to offer that amendment until his views regarding the river and harbor improvement were impressed on this committee. (Laughter,) He had the right under the rules, and fortunately he had the disposition to see that his rights were preserved in this respect, He criticized the appropriation for the Mississippi river, in that only $600,000 was appropriated for improvements between its sources and the Ohio river. That was not a fair share of the pork. (Laughter.) If the Mississippi river had got to carry through the gigantic scheme the com mittee should have been a little more liberal. He was of the opinion that if the committee had allowed him to go before them it would have realized that it did not understand this question. Let there be a little common sense applied to the consideration of the bill if for only a few minutes. Every sane man wanted the Mississippi river improved, and between the Illinois and Ohio rivers were grouped the most serious obstructions to the commerce of the Mississippi valley. The engineers who had examined the matter stated that it would take at least $10,000,000 to remove these obstructions and establish a uniform depth of nine feet. With a miserly, beggarly appropriation of $400,000 a year, how long would it be before there was water there? Congress was supposed to be legislating for this generation, and not for posterity. The improvements between the Illinois and Ohio rivers could and should be completed within four years, and the people be given the benefit of cheap transportation. Un less the river and committee would agree to propose a divide when it came to appropriating for the Missis sippi he, in the language of Polo, would kick. (Laughter.)

Willis said that the reaches to which the gentleman had referred had had received the same estimates as the other reaches of the river.

Pending further action the committee rose and the House adjourned.

ROSSA'S STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, Feb 3 .- Mr O'Denovan Rossa made the following statement to coroner Kelly:

On Saturday, January 31st, about p. m., I received a letter at my of fice, No. 12 Chambers street. message was in writing, and was delivered by a messenger boy. The note stated a lady wished to see me; that she was interested in the Irish cause, and desired to assist it. She did not care to go to my room and remain waiting there until I came. She only asked for ten minutes time. The boy told me the lady was at the telegraph office in the Stewart building, corner Broadway and Chambers street. I followed him, and I met her. I told her it would be well to go to some hotel, as the telegraph office was no place'to talk in. We came out and went into the ladies' parlor, and she said she would be able to give considerable money if anything was done She then said she would call Monday, February 2, at 4 o'clock. Today she sent another message to my office. and I went to the same telegraph of fice, and I there I met the lady. She showed me a paper which I was to sign. She then suggested that we go to some place. We walked down Chambers street toward Broadway. and we got a short distance toward Broadway, when the woman stepped back and fired two or three shots at me. One of the balls entered my back. JEREMIAH O'DONOVAN ROSSA.

She impressed me so very favorably that I told her to remain in the house if she would room with two other young ladies. This she consentto do. Her only luggage was a valise, which she never unpacked, because, as she one day remarked, she might be called suddenly to attend some patient. She told me she had been married and had two chil dren, but that her husband and children died abroad. Her father, she once remarked, had been engaged in the British cavalry service. She had acted as a trained nurse in London and Paris, and had diplomas from in stitutions of that kind, but I never examined them, though she shewed them to some young ladies in the house. She was an accomplished woman, and her manners and speech betokened a thorough bred English woman of keen mind and bright perceptions, an intensely patriotic little lady, and sarcastic and cutting when speaking of those who seem to be at war on the people. She was extremely near-sighted. In telling me of her work abroad, she one day said that she much more enjoyed hospital work abroad than the nursing she has been doing here. "What is the history of her movements while with you?" was asked of the matron.

She came here one week ago Thurs day last Tuesday is our weekly pay day, and she paid her board up to last Tuesday. On Tuesday she came to me hurriedly, said she had a case and was going. She would take the latch key, for she might desire to re-turn. She went, taking a valise, and by the way, I never knew of her hav ing a pistol. Last Thursday she returned, coming in in the pleasantest mood possible, and said her patient died. Then she paid her board up to Tuesday. But about three o'clock Monday afternoon she came to me and said she was going away again, might not return, and if she did not she would send for the valise. I returned to her the money for one day's board, and she went away between three and four o'clock this afternoon. and seemed not unduly excited. Then this evening I was shocked to hear that she had shot at Rossa."

WHAT THE BRITISH CONSUL SAYS. NEW YORK, Eeb. 3,-J. Pierrepont Edwards, British consul, was asked today if the British representatives would take any action whatever relative to Mrs. Dudley's case. He re-plied that he did not know why British authorities should act voluntarily in the matter. If Mrs. Dudley claimed British protection it would be given her. The Consulate would advise Mrs, Dudley if she asked their aid as a British subject. EXCITEMENT AND REJOICING IN ENG-
