-----REMOVALS FROM OFFICE.

The question of removals from office in view of President Cleveland's civil service declarations, is one of considerable interest now especially to those who seek Presidential appointments which come within the tenure of office act or of civil service regulations. The President has the power to make removals, or in other words, to suspend such officers as in his opinion may be incompetent or unfit for the positions which they hold. The Senate passes upon his ac tion when the name of the successor is sent in and approves or disapproves by the confirmation or rejection of the one appointed. The refusal to confirm is a declaration on the part of the Senate that there was not sufficient cause for the removal of the incumbent. The Senate being now Republican will probably insist upon holding the administration to the letter of the law, if there was a disposition to depart from it, and hence Mr. Cleveland will, from policy if not from other motives, move slowly and avoid conflict which would place him at a disadvantage. The following is the law relating to removals and suspensions:

Sec. 1768. During any recess of the Senate the President is authorized, in his discretion, to suspend any civil officer appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, ex cept judges of the courts of the United ates, until the end of the next ses-States, until the end of the next ses-sion of the Senate, and to designate some suitable person, subject to be removed, in his discretion, by the designation of another, to perform the duties of such suspended officer in the meantime; and the person so designated shall take the oath and tion, so far as I know. give the bond required by law te be taken and given by the suspended officer, and shall, during the time he performs the duties of such officer, be entitled to the salary and emoluments of the office, no part of which shall belong to the officer suspended. The President shall, within thirty days after the comme ncement of each on of the Senate, except for any office which in his opinion ought not office which in his opinion ought not to be filled, nominate persons to fill all vacancies in office which existed at the meeting of the Senate, whether temporarily filled or not, and also in the place of all officers suspended; and if the Senate, during such session, shall refuse to advise and consent to an appointment in the place of any suspended officer, then, and not otherwise, the President shall nominate another person as soon as prac-ticable to the same session of the Senate for the office.
