The re-appointment of Postmaster Pearson, of New York City, a Republican, by President Cleveland, has provoked considerable comment and criticism in the State of New York, and also in other portions of the country. With few exceptions outside of New York City, the appointment is considered as a good one by the Democratic press of the State, and a judicious one from a political standpoint. Even in New York City the adverse criticism on the appont-ment comes from that side of the Democratic household which most vigorously opposed Mr. Cleveland's nomination and which halted in its support so long after he was nominated, and to whose action before, during and after the convention the small Democratic majority in New York may be attributed. If the appointment were made simply as a recognition of services rendered, certainly Mr. Cleveland was under no obligation to these men who at one time threatened his defeat, and in the end made his election very diffi-It is conceded that Pearson was a great central office, was conducted with admirable system and efficiency, for which reason his retention was asked for by Democrats and Republi cans, who were not influenced by political considerations, and the only objection made to it is that the President should not have put into a place of such vast responsibility, where he is capable of using so much influence, a political enemy. But it is not likely that the President would have made this appointment of a known Republican without having it definitely understood that in his conduct of the office there must be no political manipulation, no antagonisms, no wire pulling, but that the office must be run in accord with the reform policy of this administration. This at least was the tacit understanding if it was not one of the conditions, and it is safe to conclude that there will be, while Mr. Pearson holds that position, very little politics in the New York postoffice. Mr. Cleveland will doubtless look after that if it needs looking after. But Pearson's record gives assurance that his office will not be used by him in the interest of politicians, for though a friend of Blaine in the last campaign, and individually a supporter of Blaine, he refused to permit assessments to be made on the employees of his office, and the consequence was that very little money was contributed in that quarter for the Blaine campaign fund. His efficiency as an officer, and his due regard for the civil service requirements in spirit and letter were his chief recommendations for the re appointment which he received If it should turn out that he was not intitled to the confidence reposed in

PARTING GLANCE AT THE EXTRA SESSION.

Who Was Confirmed and Who Wasn't -- Places to be Filled by Vacation Appointment. orrespondence THE OBSERVE

Washington, April 3.—The Repub licans got into a great hurry yester-day and forced an adjournment be-fore the nominations were acted upon. This ill treatment is resented by Democrats. The telegraph has given you a nearly accurate state-ment of the result of the long final sitting of the extra session. It is on-ly necessary to show particularly what was done with the North Carolina nominations and mention the important Federal positions in the State left to the future.

First, as to the places about which there was either agreement or conpicuous want of agreement. All of the North Carolina nominations were confirmed by the Senate before adjournment. Col. David Settle, of Rockingham county, to be marshal of the western district; Col. A. J. Boyd, of the same county, to be collector of internal revenue for the 5th cistrict; Hon, Clement Dowd, of Mecklenburg, to be collector of internal revenue for the 6th district; Macon Bonner to be postmaster at Washington. The contest over the collectorship of the 4th district was not decided, no nomination having been made. Neither of the claimants of the two district attorneyships was nominated, and no one was nominated for marshal of the eastern distriet, although it is understood that Mr. V. V. Richardson, of Columbus, had been agreed upon.

Quite a large number of snug offices are left to be filled by Presidential appointment during the vacation. It is entirely safe to say, from out croppings from the departments plain little hints intended not for publica tion but to be used where it will do the most good, that this administration is going to make some displace ments and that before very long. Among the first things done will be the rehabilitation of the Southern postoffice system, now much in need of repairs. Let our friends have patience. The big postoffices, such as Wilmington, Releigh, Charlotte, have not yet been disposed of. I mean that matters are not definitely ar ranged as to the persons who shall be postmasters in those cities, respective But when the machinery is ready the engineer will be installed. The names of applicants in most of e leading towns have been printed in this correspondence. The pressure for small postmasterships, postal clerkships, etc., continues. I saw one gentleman tear up a batch of let-ters asking for places this morning He observed-he was not a congress man—that he couldn't burden his pockets and he had nowhere else to put them, "How will you apply without the letters?" queried a friend.

North Carolina applicants for the position of register in the land office are numerous. Ex-Gov. Jarvis' nomination for minister to Brazil was confirmed Several others were left out; as Gen. Lawton, of Georgia, nominated minister to Russia, on account of dis abilities not having been removed by Congress; all the consuls and some internal revenue and customs officers. Gov. Jarvis is here, posting himself as to his duties. I understood that a misapprehension exists as to the com pensation of foreign ministers. There is no allowance for outfit, nor are their expenses defrayed by the government. Liberal salaries are paid lowever. The minister to Brazil gets 19,000 per annum. His secretary of legation is appointed, not by himself, but by the President. The suggestion was made today that perhaps Mr. Woodsen, of Lenoir, would be the secretary. It is not usual for ministers and secretaries of legation to be ppointed from the same State. But there are a number of precedents for such appointments, some of them from North Carolina itself. I think some time, working for the place of collector of internal revenue for the 4th district. He has many friends here as in North Carolina. On Wednesday before the adjournment of the Senate he said he was not exactly on the mourners bench yet, so to say, but he was anxious and perhaps there was hope. He had a major ity of members in the district and as good support as any man. He had been urged to send for gentlemen to come on and work in his interest, but had steadily refused. Jim Battle is a

Removing Obstructions.

Tennessee has repealed her railroad law. It was time to do so, after the people had "sat down upon it" by electing Republican commissioners to make it a dead letter The Chats tanooga Times rejoices and predicts that this action will give an impetus to industrial development, and adds: "The commission policy, so called, tends either to absolute State control of railroads or to communistic meddling in their business that could amount only to final confiscation.

Capitalists will prefer to put their money into bonds at 4 per cent. to placing it in the most promising ventures, where the latter are liable to be dominated and finally spoliated by such economic ravens as Col. Savage. There is but one thing for conservative workers in the cause of Southern development to do, touching the argrarian element brought to the surface here as a result of the civil war; that must be kept under, or it will set the section back, postpone indefinitely the beginning of its prosperity. It would be the part of wisdom to repeal all laws regulating roads in Southern States, except the general status on the subject, and thus encourage the investment of capital in needed lines."

The Louisville Post is equally emphatic and says: the doodles and reactionists who still favor the stage coach and the ox cart, and has repealed the absurd law for the destruction of railroads. The Kentucky Legislature should now dispense with the services of these old gentlemen of the eighteenth century, who constitute our alleged railroad commission, and who can hardly tell a locomotive from a saw mill. No State in this Union can afford to chain herself to the dead ideas of the past. The association is unnatural as well as injurious. Think of a robust, healthy body, containing all the elements of a vigorous vitality, having to go through this busy world fastened to a corpse! We believe there would be millions of dollars of capital placed in this State to the advantage of everybody if some of Georgia's obstruc-tions were removed. Such invest-ments would be profitable to thousands of our people and do more to bring on good times than almost any other factor. At any rate, Tennessee, which is in soil and mines one of the richest spots on earth, has deter-mined to allow capital to come in and help develop her grand resources. . If Georgia shall not follow suit her claim to being the Empire State of the South will be presently an empty tradition or meaningless mockery If the people of this com-monwealth are not yet prepared to abolish the commission, they should at least restrict it so that it should do as little harm as possible.

Like Dickens' Dutchman.

Chas Langheimer, who was over 40 rears an inmate of Cherry Hill prison n Philadelphia, and during his imprisonment was made famous by chas. Dickens in his "American Notes," in many respects has his counterpart in the person of "Doc" Vanscoy, until a few days ago a con-vict in the Colorado penitentiary. Langheimer's cell was always left vacant during his discharge, for it was only a question of time when the old man, in later years know as 'Dickens's Dutchman," would again be sentenced to another term of imprisonment. Vanscoy on last Friday finished serving out a three years' term in the penitentiary at Canyon City, for the crime of horse stealing in Park county. Next day after his release he was again at his old trade of stealing in Pueblo, where he had immediately gone after leaving prison, and now Vanscoy is confined in jail at Pueblo, awaiting trial on the charge. Vanscoy is a man about fifty years of ago, and has for seventeen years been confined in the various penitentiaries. His hair has become gray, but he shows no other signs that his prison life has been detrimental to his welfare. He is a man of unusually large proportions. He has the form of an alderman in prosperity, and strides his cell and the prison walks with as much dignity as a banker behind his counter. He is jovial, keeps well in-formed by reading the newspapers, and is a man universally known in the prison. He says he gets into prison because he likes it better than 'roughing it" on the outside. He has served sentences at Sing Sing, N. Y.. Columbus, Ohio, Jackson, Mich., and a half dozen other penitentaries. Horse stealing is his principal mania, and, and like Chas. Langheimer 'Dicken's Dutchman," he is no sooner released than he is imprisoned on a similar offense. It is natural for him to steal. With him it is a kind of mania. The experience of seventeen years in various State prisons has not in the least quieted his klep-

TARBORO, Feb. 4, 1885.

For several years I have had a trouble with my breast, which I fear is cancer, that being incident to my family. For two years past my general health has been wretched from its effects. I became so weak I was incapacitated for all work; my appetite was gone, the sight of food was nauseating to me. I would would wake up in the morning so tired I scarcely had energy to arise and dress myself, upon the least exertion I had palpitation of the heart so vielently that I was helpless. I was so nervous I could get no good sleep, but would lay awake at night restless, and when I did drop off to sleep would soon awake with a start, and it would be hours before I could get to sleep again. My constitution was wrecked—hope was gene. I concluded, as a last resort, to try Mrs. Joe Person's Remed. I commenced using it last July, have taken it bottles, and the effect has been wonderful. My general health is excellent. I sleep as well as I ever did in my life and wake in the morning feeling refreshed and well I can not only get up and cook my own breakfast without fatigue but have fine appetite to relish it now after I commenced the Remedy. My breast does not pain me at all, or give me any trouble. I do not know whether the Remedy will cure my breast or not, as the lump is still there, but if it never does, no words of miae can express my gratitude for what the Remedy has done for me. It has done more for me than Mrs. Person promised me it would do, when I consulted her in regard to using it. I will take pleasurp in giving any one information in regard to my case who may desire it. I wish every afflicted person in the land could know of its virtue, I am gratefully.

As this question is frequently saked, we will simply say that she is a lady who for upwards of thirty years has untainally devoted her time and talents as a female physician and nurse, principally among children. She has especially studied the constitution and wants of this numerous class, and, as a result of this effort, and practical knowledge, obtained in a lifetime spent as nurse and physician, she has compounded a Soothing Syrup, for cultidren teething. It operates like magic—giving rest and heafth, and is moreover sure to regulate the bowels. In consequence of this article, Mrs. Winslow is becoming world-renowned as a henefactor of her nee; children certainly do rise up and blass her; especially is this the case in this city. Yast quantities of the Soothing Syrup are daily sold and used here. We think fire. Winslow has immortalized her name by this invaluable article, and we sincerely believe thousands of children have been saved from an early grave by its limely use, and that millions yet unborn will share its benefits, and unite in calling her blossed. No mouner has discharged her duty to her suffering little on s, in our opinion, until sue has given it the benefit of Mrs. Winslow's 8 othing Syrup Try it, mothers—try it now.—Ladies' Visitor.
