MORAL COURAGE.

Whatever the difference of opinion may be as to the policy of the President thus far pursued in the matter of appointments to office, it has been fully demonstrated that he has the moral courage to follow that course which he believes best, regardless of the pressure that may be brought to bear. More than once in the conflict between contending delegates urging the claims of the party whose cause they espoused, he has, after respectfully listening, quietly ignored both and appointed a third party who did not figure in the contest at all. While he treats all delegates respectfully, and listens attentively to their representations, they have never yet persuaded him to make an improper nomination, when there was any ground for belief that it would be an improper one. In a few instances such appointments were made, but when the facts became known and the unfitness of the appointment shown, he did not hesitate to revoke the appointment and make a new one. He had the courage to confess that he had been deceived, and to undo what he had done at the risk of offending the influences that originally secured the appointment. Now friends of applicants for appointments have learned that there is little use in misrepresentation, or in concealing facts that ought to be known before an appointment is made. When he has acted upon his own judgment, and upon information procured outside the circle of interested parties he has made no mistakes, and while many of his appointees are unknown beyond their own localities, and have figured but little or none in public life, their ability and fitness for the positions to which they have been appointed has been generally conceded. His object has been and is to secure good and able public servants, fully competent to discharge the duties devolving upon them, men without blemish or stain to bring discredit upon the administration that selects them as its agents. And he does it quietly, firmly, and without any fuss and feathers, having his eye single on the public welfare, willing to say yes and gratify his friends, political and personal, when it is proper, and the courage to say "no" when it is necessary, and a sense of duty requires that it should be said.

Figures taken from official records show that at the present time Philadelphia supports 5,995 liquor saloons, an average of one for every twenty nine of the 174,699 voters who marched up to the polls at the last November election. Statistics also prove that this same number of voters require but 1,064 bakeries and 3,357 retail groceries. In other words, 175,000 men support nearly 6,000 places where they may purchase liquor, while they need but 4,411 bakeries and groceries combined to provide them with the necessities of life.

Paris is cleared of rats by the municipal council offering a premium for their skins. Two years ago a premium of $3 per 1,000, but it has recently been raised to $10 per 1,000, in order to get the city cleared of the pests. The rats are of the Norway kind, and breed four times a year. The skins when collected are sold to glove makers for four cents each, and 20,000 skins are said to have been made into "genuine kid" gloves last year.

When exciting topics are scarce the New York Sun goes around prospecting for some uncommon word to set its readers scratching their heads. Its last found is the word "infingther," an old English word to designate a thief caught within the manor of any one having the jurisdiction to try him, &c.

When a culprit is hanged these days by lynchers the coroner's jury deliberate and generally inform us that the lynched individual came to his death at the hands of parties unknown.

A village in Northern Hungary, containing 400 houses, was recently destroyed by an incendiary fire, and 1,000 persons were rendered destitute. The enraged populace discovered the culprit and roasted him to death over a bonfire.

It is estimated that the use of natural gas in Pittsburg has cut down the quantity of coal burned 3,000 tons per annum. The saving effected is enormous.

Paris had a delightful time at Victor Hugo's funeral. The average Parisian wouldn't object to having a few Hugos to bury every year.

The New York World's Bartholdi pedestal fund now amounts to $61,845.53, contributed by 66,909 people.

Atlanta has invested $800,000 in new buildings within the past year, not counting the Kimball House.

Italy has 4,800,000 lemon trees, which bear 1,200,000,000 lemons annually.

RUINED BY RUM.

The Sad Wreck of a Once Brilliant Social Diver into a Mediocre New York Cor. Philadelphia News.

Is Don Cesar de Bajan foremost among your imagination's stage heroes? As a his audacity, fervor, grace and rugged and picturesque features to you the embodiment of dramatic perfection. This is true, because the first impersonator of the adventurer whom I ever saw was George Middleton, as handsome an actor as ever lived, and possessed of good mind and presence. George belonged to an honored family in South Carolina, and between his twentieth and thirtieth years he made a fine reputation as a lawyer. His education was excellent, and he had the gift of impassioned oratory. He married a beautiful belle, and had together a brilliant outlook. He went for diversions into amateur dramatics, where his success made him eager to go on the professional stage. His family and friends dissuaded him for a while, but at length he threw away his pen, and became a regular actor. His wife accompanied him in the venture and for awhile they were hopeful of joint fame. It was at this time that I saw his Don Cesar. The lady love in the play was Clara Morris, who, at that time, was an obscure actress in the west. A most fascinating hero was George. Well, I saw him aged this week. He was walking down Broadway. The street was crowded with shopping and strolling women, in their rather gay spring garb, and the multitude was altogether a demurely feminine and fashionable that a man felt misplaced in it anyhow. A positively shabby fellow, there fore was so incongruous that the women gazed at him with curiosity, and from possible contact with his greasy and threadbare clothes. He was the wreck of a man—a broken down bum. A ragged coat, was buttoned close up to his chin, and he covered the absence of a shirt, his shoes hardly concealed his bare toes and trousers were so old that the patches at the knees needed patching. Suddenly he drew himself up out of his abject manner, assumed an air of jauntness, and lifted his napless hat as he bowed with the grace of a cavalier to a woman who politely returned his salutation. She was Clara Morris, who was the Don Cesar of other days—the run rived George Middleton. He has for a year or two been a veritable tramp. His wife stuck to him faithfully as long as she was the richest promise reform. Then she went to England, where she is now Kate Santley, a prosperous burlesque actress.

THE PRESIDENT'S LIFE.

Regular Routine the Order of the Day Washington Star.

President Cleveland in a very short time showed himself methodical and systematic, both officially and privately. He has so arranged his time and his affairs that there is no clear ing. He has his hours for working, and when they are over the stops work. In this way he is enabled to keep his appointments promptly, and to keep his mind clear and his energy fresh. He rises at a reasonable early hour, and is always ready for breakfast, which is fixed for 9 o'clock. He has never missed his morning's meal, not even when he has been in the White House, and he expects the same punctuality from those who sit at the table with him. Almost immediately after breakfast he goes to his study, the business of the day, and after attending to important letters or other matters which are brought to his attention, he begins to receive callers. Before 1 o'clock he has his usual morning walk, and he is usually very well cleared, having disposed of his visitors. This is about the hour when his predecessor began receiving callers. President Cleveland then goes down stairs to his study, and audience to the general visitors who may be waiting in the east room. At 1:30 lunch is served, and no one is afterward admitted to his presence except by special appointment. Thus he has time at his disposal to see special delegations, or shut himself in his office for the consideration of important matters requiring his attention, and to take his customary afternoon drive. Dinner is served promptly at 7 o'clock. The evenings are devoted to the relaxation of conversation or to the consideration of business, as just as it happens. The above is the daily routine at the White House, and from it there is no deviation. As a consequence everybody connected with the house knows just what to do and just when to do it.

Mr. Cleveland Declines an Invitation to Dinner.

Wash. Cor. N. Y. World. A certain Republican editor called upon Mr. Cleveland the other day. He said to him: "I desire to make your acquaintance. I may have said a number of very disagreeable things about you in my campaign. That was simply politics you know. There was nothing personal in it. The next time you come over to New York I hope to have the pleasure of your company at dinner at my house." The President looked at this editor a moment, and then he said: "Some time after the election you printed a paragraph in your paper saying that I was a man of vulgar and vulgar habits, and that when I dined I performed wonderful feats of knife-allowing. I do not think that I would be very agreeable person for you to have at your table, Mr. Editor, and you must therefore excuse me from accepting your invitation."

Curious Comparative Statistics.

A London doctor has published some curious comparative statistics on the longevity of public and professional men. He found that the average age at death of the twenty-five most prominent American statesmen during the last hundred years was 59. The average of an equal number of English statesmen was 70 years—practically the same. He thought the latter did more work at an advanced age. The difference in favor of English, as compared with American, political life was brought out by comparing the ages at death of members of the British Parliament with those of the United States Congress who died between 1850 and 1884. Of our Senators, 53 gave an average of 61 years; 146 Representatives averaged 55 years, and the average for both was 58. The 121 members of Parliament averaged 68 years at death.

THE "RASCALS" SCARED.

WHAT FRIGHTENS THE DEPARTMENT CLERKS.

Rumors of Heavy Dismissals—Democratic Incumbents also Uneasy—What Some of the Ladies Say—Arrivals.

Correspondence of THE OBSERVER.

WASHINGTON, June 2. There is a state of feeling in the departments approaching panic. The "ins" are mightily oppressed with the fear that they may soon be "out," notwithstanding civil service reform. Of course they cannot appreciate the fact that their dismissal, if accomplished, would be put on the ground of reform. Only one side of the matter, and that possession, strikes these people. The report was pretty thoroughly spread yesterday through at least one of the departments, and that one better protected against rumors than the others. The three hundred discharges had been or were about to be made in the pension bureau. A rumor of Sunday had spoken of fifty removals to come, but this was not the case. The "ins" are not so much alarmed as they were some time ago. Several of them reside within a stone's throw, and a betrayal no confidence in Mr. Pendleton's law. Gentleman George was much more in repute with these clerks and chief standing civil service reform. "These pres-ents." Many of the clerks in the Departments are utterly worthless. Such as these of course will "go," and nobody cares. But there are others, who are fairly good clerks and active Republican workers. These sleek fellows have "sung low" of late because they know that they are "spotted." Their names are on the private record of "offensives." The amount of their contribution to the corruption fund last fall, the number of speeches made or the amount of other work done, is all down fine in the black list, and that is why there is discontent and trepidation in Washington greater than any of the office-seekers bring. It is well known that by the 1st of July quite a large batch of dismissals will be announced. These places are to be filled when they come within the civil service limit, by promotions. Mr. Lamar has desired to extend the matter of the removal of a State or a Territory's quota—that is, he has asked in one case to have a man sent from a certain Territory, he holding that there was no one from that Territory in the Interior Department. This claim is resisted by the Civil Service Commission. They claim that they alone may keep tally and determine the question of the removal of a State or a Territory. It is to do as for men as he may need them. It is understood that the Dakota case, alluded to, bears directly on the Virginia election. Mahone has a goodly number of clerks in all the departments. If these fellows are put out and Mr. Lamar's ideas prevail, the Virginia Democrats who have recently passed the civil service examination—and most all of them are Democrats—will stand a better chance for positions than if the vacancies are filled from every quarter. The course the figures of the States' quota will be corrected by the commission, but their construction of the law is that any State is entitled to her proportion in all the departments, not in the Interior. She may have none in the Interior, and yet her full quota in the other departments of the government. The panic is probably worst among the clerks of the Interior. They understand the workings of the law any more than "the rest of mankind." They think that if anybody whom the mere letter of the law should retain—that is, any person who is active, competent and of good character—is removed, the fountains of the great deep are bottom up at once and chaos comes again. "What was the use of not bumping?" asked a Southern lady who has been in the government service many years, and who is presumed to be a Democrat—by family, at least. "Why, just as sure as you live, they are going to turn everybody out."

Among other visitors are Messrs. E. H. Smith of Thomasville, Isaac F. Dortch, of Goldsboro, B. L. Perry, the hotel man of Wilmington, and George I. Nowitzky, of the Far West Magazine, Raleigh.

Mr. Dortch is looking out for the interests of Dr. J. H. Hill, who is a candidate for the office of postmaster at Goldsboro. Mr. Smith has seen this city and Baltimore for several weeks on important mining business. He is engaged in that occupation in Davidson county.

Some representatives Henderson and Reid are to return to this city on or about the 13th inst.

There are about the same number of North Carolina visitors as was represented on Saturday. A few were left, and their places have been filled by arrivals.

Mr. Robt. D. Graham went to Richmond, yesterday, to be present at the marriage of Mr. Christian and Miss Julia Jackson, daughter of Stonewall Jackson.

O. the Way to Canada.

NEW YORK, June 3.—There were said to be several developments today in the matter of the defection of paying Teller, Richards S. Scott, of the bank of Manhattan Company, whose shortage amounts to over $100,000. Bank officials received information during the morning that their late employe had arrived in Canada and was on his way to Montreal.

Abc Hazzard Surrenders.

LANCASTER, Pa., June 4.—Abc Hazzard, the noted outlaw walked into Lancaster county prison about midnight and surrendered himself to the authorities. He was accompanied by his brothers, Mart and John. Before giving himself up, he exacted a promise from his brothers, and the prison keeper Burkholder, that they would not claim the reward of $1000 offered for his capture. Hazzard surrendered at the instigation of prominent citizens of the eastern end of the county, who will use their efforts to secure commutation of nine years of his sentence, which it is generally agreed that he unjustly received.

ON THE TRAIL.

A Number of Millions on the Heels of the Apaches. GALVESTON, June 4.—A special to the News from El Paso says: The latest news received here concerning the raiding by the Apaches comes from the neighborhood of Hillsboro, New Mexico.

Fifteen armed men under the leadership of one Jackson, left Hillsboro Tuesday morning and before noon had recovered twenty-eight horses. They continued on the trail which before night became very fresh and the men concluded to go into camp and send for reinforcements. Jackson accordingly sent a swift courier back to Hillsboro, and at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon to assist Jackson's band. The Indians apparently are driving a lot of captured stock before them. Unless they abandon the stock and take to flight, Jackson is certain to overtake and attack them.

A Restless Night for Gen. Grant.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Dr. Douglas remained all night at Gen. Grant's house. He was called once during the night to attend the General, who, while he slept nearly the usual time, passed a restless night. He was feeling not exceedingly bright when he awoke but improved as the day progressed. "I don't believe father will drive any more," said Col. Grant this morning. "His experience lately while driving has not been good, and I think we will not go out in the park any more."

FILES! FILES! FILES!

A sure cure for neuralgic, rheumatic, toothache, neuralgia, sciatic, lumbago, and other neuralgic affections. Files has been discovered by Dr. Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr. Williams' Indian Files, and has cured many chronic cases of 25 or 30 years standing. No one suffers five minutes after using our soothing medicine. Lotions and instruments do not relieve the pain. Files (Indian remedy), (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a powerful, safe, instant relief, and is prepared only for Files, holding of private parts, and containing files. Price 50 cents. T. G. Smith & Co., agents. Sold everywhere.

Forty Years' Experience of an Old Nurse.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, for children teething, is the prescription of one of the best female nurses in the United States, and has been used for forty years with never failing success by mothers for their children. It relieves the child from pain, cures dysentery and diarrhea, brings the bowels and wind back by giving health to the child it restores the mother. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the above complaints: Do not let your prejudices, nor the promises of others, prevent you from giving your child and the relief that will be sure—also, it is sold by druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. T. G. Smith & Co., agents.

Rough on Corns' hard or soft corns, bunions, etc.
