Subscriptions always payable in niy in name but in fact, WHINING REPUBLICANS. John A. Logan believes in stalwart partisanship and in accepting the logical results of defeat. He has no sympathy with the Republicans in office who ask to be retained. In an interview in Washington recently he is reported as saying:

"I hope every Republican who asks to be retained by this administration will be turned out of office. I have received letter after letter from Republicans in office urging me to exert myself to have them retained. I shall not humiliate myself in that way. I would rather help to get Republicans of that sort out. In fact, it is strange to me that a Republic would ask a Democratic administra tion to keep him in office No Rep lican would ask Cleveland to appo him if he was out of office. A pe tion for retention stands on the same principle. It is virtually asking a Democrat for an appointment. If a Republican would not ask for an office he should not ask to be retained in one. If he is holding an office and is asked to remain on account of his faithful services it is another thing In that case he has a right to accept but he is clearly wrong in asking to be retained."

This is the proper, manly view of the subject. How much better figure an office-holder would present in promptly tendering his resignation than in waiting for his resignation to be requested, or to be bounced under the "offensive partisan" clause, as so many of them have done. Any one of them who was worth a continental to the party which appointed them could be removed under this clause, for there was not one of them who was not an active partisan, and an active partisan becomes an offensive active partisan becomes an offensive ing around, waiting for the death of ing around ing aro one without any great strain of language. By consening to continue in office under a Democratic administration they practically put, for a consideration, a padlock upon their lips, for they of course will be mum I'd back up against the rock and while in office, and will not dare to throw stones at them and shout as if criticise the administration upon whose indulgence or favors they hang. They part, so to speak, with their liberty, and become mere ciphers. No man with a keen sense of self-appreciation could afford to occupy any such negative position as this, for the sake of holding on to a they must first run along the sand place which he feels ought to go to somebody else, and in which he can never feel comfortable. They through all the years of Republican ascendancy acted upon the principle that ily.' to the victors belong the spoils, and due regard for manly consistency should impel them to recognize that principle now and get down and out without waiting to be invited or ejected. Gen. Logan's view is the proper one, and the view that all Re- furnish matter enough for ten volpublican office-holders ought to take

TRICKING THE CONDORS

How a New York Boy Got fbem With in Revolver Range.

Ned Conroy, of Clyde, N. Y., recently returned from South America with considerable money. asked how he made it he said:

"Shooting condors in Chili government pays $5 for every condor's head brought in, but most of the hunters soon get sick of the business. The condors are thicker than buzzards, but they can see a rifle further than a man can see a house, and they catch on to all sorts of ambushes in the neighborhood of a dead carcass almost before they are made. The nests are 12,000 feet above the level of the sea, so it's little use to hunt them in the mountains. They are trapped occasionally, and some are poisoned but as a rule the business doesn't pay, and the condors increase in numbers."

"How did you manage it?" he was

"By playing off sick. Along the coast there are great stretches of sand, without vegetation, which are perilous to cross at all times, because of the heat and the liability of getting lost. It was my plan to start out at night, well provided with water, and seek a place under a big rock where I could find shelter and to which I could return by landmarks. At mid day I would start out in the broiling sun, walking briskly and describing a large circle. It was very easy to stagger after awhile and fall, and then get up and stagger on again, keeping a good lookout for the birds all the time, lest one should suddenly drop on me from behind. It would take a ing around, waiting for the death of what they supposed was a worn out traveller. Many a poor fellow has fallen down there on those sands and been torn to pieces before he was "When I found them getting thick I was wild with fear, and the great vultures would gather around just out of range of the stones, which I didn't throw very hard, and sit on the sand and look at me sideways. Then was my opportunity. Pulling two navy revolvers from under my coat, I'd let drive at them. They are wonderful in the air, but to get aloft with wings spread for a couple of rods. It was a cold day when I didn't get at least three, and one day I captured seven. That was a trick which the condors didn't learn eas-

Victor Hugo's Manuscripts. Paris Correspondence London Telegraph.

It may be interesting to those with whom the great French poet was a favorite author to know that the manuscripts left by Victor Hugo will umes. The arrangements for their publication have all been made by the poet himself, who set them down in what is known as his second will. Three volumes are nearly ready to appear, and probably comprise miscellaneous prose and poetry, while the seven others will be made up of letters, notes and similar documents. tion of the manuscripts will extend over a period of ten or fifteen years, although the poet has fixed no special time for their production. In the event of the death of one or more of poet has left instructions for their which the poet, during his lifetime, had intended to leave to his friend, Mme. Drouet, who a few years ago preceded him to the tomb. Whether Victor Hugo, after the death of this lady, made a third will to regulate the disposition of those manuscripts will not be known until the executors have opened his testamentary docu-ments. This has been d-layed owing to the illness of one of the executors. Mme. Drouet was to have left the manuscripts to the State at her death. It is affirmed that the Messrs. Rothschild have £200,000, or 5,000,000f. standing in their books to Victor Hugo's account; but there is no actual sum set down in the first or principal will prepared by the poet in the holographic form. Ample provision is made in this document for his two grandchildren, for Mme. Edouard Lockroy, and for the poet's only daughter, who is in a private asylum.

But certainly there is nothing very sensible or pa-triotic in certain statements emanating from here with regard to the feeling in particular States, North Carolina among the number. The criticism that the North Carolina ap pointments have generally been unpointments have generally been unspopular is absolutely unfair, so far as expression here of public opinion in that State is concerned. I have known all along, what is known to everybody who knows anything of human nature, that there was dissat isfaction in several quarters over a number of things. Some very in-fluential men have failed notably in making their influence felt here for as much as they think it is worth. They denounce the administration. And yet they have accomplished some things, and should be satisfied or at least not openly dissatisfied. Others here have tried to secure offices and have failed. For this the administration may not be to blame. A number of discontented individuals hang around the hotels and growl from 9 o'clock in the morning until 12 and 1 o'clock at night. As I did so the lady leaned forward and the sun shone in her face and I recognized the Princess of Wales, who, with some of the youngsters, was sitting in a sort of expo-sure enjoying a bit of gossip by sig-nal with the old warrior, on whose every movement at this moment the eyes of all Europe were, figuratively, suppose to be resting. said a well known Philadelphia undertaker the other day, "if it knew the number of bodies that are buried before life is extinct. Once in a while one of these cases comes to light, but no steps are taken to prevent its recurrence. Something that happened to me about twelve years ago has worried me ever since. I was sent for one day to take charge of the body of a man in — street. The man was a tailor, and had fallen over while sitting on his bench sewing. He was a big fieshy man, about forty years of age, and weighed about 250 pounds. The body was warm and the limbs were limp. I did not believe the man was dead, and said so. His friends told me that a physician had pronounced him dead. I was ordered to put the body on ice at had pronounced him dead. I was ordered to put the body on ice at once, but I delayed this operation, on one pretext or another, for nearly two days. During this time the body lay on the bench in the little shop. Finally I could delay no longer. The limbs were still as limber as when I first examined the body. I prepared the body for burial, and the next day it was buried I do not believe that man was dead when the earth was shoveled in on his coffin. If the same thing were to happen again I same thing were to happen again I would let somebody else do the bury-

About the same time a young woman living up town was supposed to have died very suddenly. A physician was called in. He said she was dead. An old woman who was present thought otherwise, and insisted upon it that she was in a trance. The body was buried. A few weeks later the old woman determined to satisfy herself about it, and bribed the grayer. herself about it, and bribed the grave diggers to disinter the coffin. The lid was removed and a horriqle sight was seen. The young woman had come to life and had made a terrible struggle for liberty. Her hair was torn out and her face was frightfully scratched. I have thought of a good many different means. A receiving vault could be built in every cemetery, where bodies could be placed until decomposition had begun, when they could be buried."

A Proposition to Sell Out for a Small Consideration.

SPRINGFIELD, June 18.-In House investigation committee vesterday, Mr Collins, chairman of the committee, laid before the organization an affidavit signed by T H Tubbs, superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company, at Chicago, to the effect that during the Chicago, to the effect that during the month of February last year, he had been called upon at Leland Hotel, in this city by Representative Baker, of Moultrie county, and that the latter offered to kill the telegraph bill for $2,500; that of this sum $500 was to be given Baker for himself and the remainder for distribution among other parties. The reading of the document occasioned quite a sensation among the committeemen and a summons was at one sent to Baker who soon made his appearance and, being sworn, said he knew Tubbs and had talked with him upon several occasions. He explicitly denied that he had at any time made any proposition to Tubbs or any one else of the character referred to. The committee then adjourned for the
