LOCAL RIPPLES.

There will be a meeting of Charlotte Commandery No. 2, Knights Templar, at their asylum in Masonic Temple tonight at 8 o'clock. John Riddick, the well known colored barber, who has been identified with College street for many years, died at his house in this city yesterday. The Wearn nine and the Charlotte club played off their tie yesterday afternoon, and the game was a good one. The score stood: Wearn 12, Charlotte 13. We call attention to the advertisement of the University of North Carolina, which has of late largely increased its Faculty and means of instruction. Drummers who travel around without licenses, either through accident, or intentionally, have to look sharp. Salisbury has now fallen into line and has several officers on the lookout. The hammering on the standpipe has begun, but as the structure is now filled with water, the clatter is somewhat deadened and is not quite so unbearable as it was when the standpipe was first being built. If any of the Charlotte sports want another chance to bet on the Wilmington baseball club, they can get it tomorrow, when a match game is to be played in Wilmington between the Seaside and the Raleighs. The railroad boys in Charlotte are elated over the failure of the thieves to get away with the pay train in Atlanta. Some of them felt rather bilious when rumors were first heard that the pay car had been stolen. Two car loads of brown stone from the quarry in Anson county passed through this city yesterday for Atlanta, where it is to be used in building. The stone is well dressed, and is of an excellent quality. Capt. James B. Magill, chief of the city fire department, has gone to Wilmington, where the Newbern and Wilmington fire companies had a celebration yesterday. Chief Magill is a born fireman and will ably represent our city. The miniature fire engine, made by Mr. Sinclair Blackwelder at Wilkes Iron Works, is on exhibition in Harrington's show window. The engine is made of steel and brass, and the workmanship is excellent. It is a complete engine, and when fired up will throw a stream through a line of hose. The Races Yesterday. The bicycle races at the fair grounds yesterday came off according to programme, but there was only a small crowd present to witness the sport, a fact which is to be regretted when we take into consideration the efforts made by our bicycle club to furnish amusement for our citizens. The five mile race between Maxwell and Polhill resulted in a tie, Polhill coming in ahead of Maxwell on the heat yesterday. Polhill's time was five miles in 16:50. The race between Asbury, the bicyclist, and Gilmer the tricyclist, was won by Asbury. Overcash having declined Jones' challenge to repeat the 1/2 mile race, Jones ran against Overcash's record, and lowered it by ten seconds.

Paymaster Grocer as a Target-- Two Arrests Made-- Jesse James Bandits Outdone in Georgia.

In THE OBSERVER yesterday morning, mention was made of the attempt to steal the Richmond and Danville pay car in Atlanta, and our people were yesterday eagerly enquiring for further particulars. The Atlanta Constitution received last night, contains a four column report of the affair, from which we give a condensed account of the most interesting points. Mr. Groser, the paymaster, and an old negro man who cooks for him, were asleep in the car on the side track, in the heart of Atlanta, but towards morning, Mr. Groser was awakened by the rapid motion of his car. He rushed out the front door of his car, climbed upon the supply car and went forward toward the engine. The train was then clear out of town, and was skimming along at the rate of forty miles an hour. Mr. Groser was only an instant in observing that the front of the engine was next to his supply car and that no headlight was burning. The country through which he was traveling was all new to him. The rapid rate of speed, the absence of the headlight, and the strangeness of the country all suggested to Mr. Groser's mind the deeds of Jesse James. He quickly retraced his steps over the top of the box car until he reached the end next to his car. He went down the ladder in a jiffy and then grabbing the brake began twisting it up. Soon the train began to go slower and Mr. Groser knew that he was master of the situation. He gave the brake another turn and then another. He bent over it with the strength of a giant and wound the chain around the rod until the engine came to a halt. Then as quick as lightning he ascended the ladder again and started forward. He reached the front end of the car just in time to see a man jump from the engine. As the man sprang to the ground Mr. Groser saw and recognized him. The man's character is not above reproach, and no one knew this better than Mr. Groser. The presence of this man confirmed the paymaster's suspicions and he cried out: "Smith, where are you going?" "To Belt Junction, of course," replied the man called Smith. "For what?" asked Mr. Groser in a quiet, stern voice. "Ain't you going to pay off there this morning?" asked the man, as he approached the car. "Well, that's nothing to you," said Mr. Groser. "I want to know what you are doing here; what does this mean? There's something wrong. What do you want?" "You'll find out soon enough," replied the voice. "We want you and that money, and we are going to have it."

Study the case as he would be could arrive at but one conclusion, and that was that he was in a dangerous situation and that he needed help badly to extricate himself and his money safely. These thoughts went through Mr. Groser's mind rapidly, and at last he decided to attempt to secure help. He tried to persuade his negro to leave the car and go to a house and awake some one, but the negro protested against going. Then Mr. Groser told the negro if he would stay he would go himself. The old darkey after considerable persuasion, agreed to remain. Mr. Groser ran until he arrived at a house where he found an old man and the old man's son, who put back with him to the scene. They arrived to find the cars abandoned. While Mr. Groser was away from the car the old darkey was having a more eventful, thrilling and fearful time. Soon after Mr. Groser left the car a man mounted or rather began to mount the platform leading to the brake. The old darkey saw him and the man saw the old darkey. "Back!" cried the negro. The man stopped, looked at the negro, and said: "I want to see Groser. Oh, Groser, I want to see you a minute." "Back, or I'll kill you! Watch dat doo back dar, massa," cried the old darkey, presenting the pistol. The man stepped down and off the platform. In a second or two several men, according to the negro's statement, congregated at the side of the car and began talking. One name he heard frequently. It was "Davy." After a few seconds the men began calling: "Groser! Groser! Groser!" But they received no answer. They appeared to be afraid to act. This went on for probably fifteen minutes and then the old darkey felt the train begin to move again. Presently his car stopped. Then when the old negro looked out he saw that the engine and the supply car were still going ahead. He felt happy—never so happy before in his life. But his happiness was short-lived, for in a few seconds he saw that the car was coming back towards him. It was moving rapidly, and in less time than it takes to tell it the supply car struck the pay car with a tremendous force. Then the entire train began to roll back to Atlanta. It rolled on at first briskly then slower and slower until it finally stopped, after having come nearly a mile nearer to Atlanta.

The train had been stolen by three men, who, after this desperate attempt, fled without securing any money. The Atlanta police has arrested two men on suspicion, but the evidence against them is not very strong. HE TOOK LAUDANUM. Attempt of a Young Man to Commit Suicide Last Night--Says he is Sorry He Didn't Succeed. About ten o'clock last night a young man, a stranger in the city, stepped into Jordan's drug store, and asked in a hurried manner for a dose of laudanum. Mr. Raysor, the clerk, took a large bottle from the shelf, and the young man asked to be allowed to examine the bottle. He took it from the hands of the drug clerk, and quick as a flash pulled the stopper and put the bottle to his lips, but before he could take more than a couple of swallows, Mr. Raysor grasped him by the back of the head and prevented him from taking any more of the drug. The young man at once left the store and was shortly after found in a semi-unconscious condition. He was taken to a room over Harrington's restaurant, and the services of Dr. Bratton being secured, a volunteer party set to work to aid the doctor in bringing him around. At the time they commenced working with him, he was in an unconscious condition and the pupils of his eyes were greatly contracted, showing the deadly effect of the laudanum. The usual remedy of tickling and beating with wet towels was resorted to and kept up for half an hour, when the young man began to show signs of recovering. The efforts at restoration were renewed and the doctor and party soon had the satisfaction of seeing the unfortunate young man out of danger. By twelve o'clock last night he had sufficiently recovered as to be able to converse with those around him, and to them he stated that he had not been thinking, but that he really intended to kill himself and was sorry that they had not let him secede in his intention. He is from Georgia. No cause is known for his rash act.

Why shake?

"Simply because I have chills and fever," says the shaker. "But why have chills and fever?" "Because malaria got ahead of me." Now, remember that Brown's Iron Bitters gets ahead of malaria. The Rev. Mr. Bently, of Fayetteville, Ark., says, "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for indigestion and chills with entire success. It is the best tonic and purifier of the blood known."

Gray on Top.

The case against Mr. Robert Gray, the Ninth street boomer, was transferred from Mayor Johnston's court yesterday morning, to Justice McNinch's court, Justice Waring having done all he could in the matter. Before Justice McNinch, the same counsel for each side appeared, and the same charge was preferred against Mr. Gray. After hearing the evidence, the magistrate gave judgment in favor of Mr. Gray, and the city was required to pay the costs of the action. Mr. Gray's counsel proposed that the city could proceed to Ninth street and remove the posts, under peaceable protest and without molestation, but with the understanding that it was not to effect the status of the case in any manner. It was a simple proposition for the city to remove the posts, but the city declined claiming that as Mr. Gray put up the posts, it was his duty to take them down. It is to be presumed that Mr. Gray will be arrested again as soon as he has time to get his breath, but the question of magistrates is beginning to be a serious one, as the supply will soon be exhausted. It wouldn't be a bad idea to call a full meeting of the board of township justices, and should they become exhausted, the Governor might be called upon to appoint a special venire of 100, to serve until the case is settled.

Fatal Stabbing Near Salisbury.

In Salisbury night before last Henderson Surratt, a young man from Thomasville, died from the effects of stabs inflicted upon his person by a young man of Salisbury, John Keene. The affray occurred Sunday night, at the six mile pump on the North Carolina Railroad. The two young men had visited a house of ill repute near that place, and while there they became involved in a difficulty. Surratt left the house first, to lay in ambush, as it afterwards transpired, for Keene. Later in the night, as the young man Keene was going home, he was met in the road by Surratt and attacked. Keene was carrying a lantern, and with this he struck Surratt a blow on the head, shattering the glass globe and extinguishing the light, leaving the two men in the darkness. To defend himself, Keene drew his knife, and when the attack upon him was renewed he used it vigorously, cutting Surratt in the breast and inflicting several stabs, one of which penetrated to the region of the heart. Mr. Keene is a son of Dr. Keene. At the preliminary trial it was made clear that he had acted in self-defense, and he was released on $500 bond. The body of Surratt was sent to Thomasville for burial.

An Ugly Customer Captured. For a couple of days past an impudent white tramp has been visiting the houses of this city under the pretense of selling an article to prevent lamps from exploding. He invariably called at a house while the male members of the family were absent and none but ladies present, and his rude and insulting manners never failed to frighten them. He would demand that they bring him their lamps and a table, without telling them his object and in some instances refused to leave the house until his demand was complied with, or a threat was made, to call the police. After getting the ladies thoroughly frightened he would tell them that he had a patent to prevent oil from exploding, which he sold at 25 cents per lamp. Yesterday, in his rounds, he dropped in at the house of Mr. Josiah Asbury, and on being told that his presence was not desirable, he commenced cursing the lady of the house at a terrible rate. The police were quickly notified and the tramp was hustled off to the guard house. He gave his name as Rawley, and said that he was from California. Such characters should be severely dealt with, and the people of Charlotte confidently hope that Mayor Johnston will make an example of this one and pile on him the heaviest load that the law allows. Absentees. Mr. W. S. Bynum, Jr., has gone to Germantown, in Stokes county, to spend a few weeks. Miss Banks Chambers, daughter of Mr. Ro Chambers, late of Charlotte, left the city yesterday for a short visit to friends.
