The Charlotte Observ r THE INDUSTRIAL EXPOSI-. TION.

There are but few civilized countries now where the industrial exposition is not an established institution. and where its value as a promoter of industrial enterprises is not recognized and appreciated. France, Ausinternational expositions, this country has had its centennial exposition of less proportions.) the World's Exposition at New Orleans, a number of inter-State fairs, and State fairs in inter-State fairs, and State fairs in nearly all the States, and district and county fairs without number.

The Senator has a son, Butler, the one who was recently in a scrape in Washington. Butler is considered a There are but few States where State fairs are not held, and but few States where district and county fairs are not becoming, if they are not already the order of the day. All this shows the appreciation in which such own but of other countries. What world it would be impossible to tell, but it is beyond question that they have had a great influence in exciting rivalry of genius and enterprise, resulting in improved machinery, improved products of factory and shop, improved stock on farms, horses, cattle, hogs, etc., improved grain, fruit, vegetables, &c. The improvement within the past quarter of a century has been marked, and has shown itself in every branch of this means that millions of dollars have been added to the wealth of the people, many of whom doubtless have never given a thought to the subject. This country to-day can boast of as can show, and some of them in States which within the memory of men not far advanced in years were unpeopled wilderness, now centres of civilization, busy life and progress.

In our country, at least, the county or district fair is the foundation of all these, the corner stone, so to speak, upon which they are built. It is the spirit that fosters, the spirit that emulates for excellence at the lesser fair that builds up the greater, where State pride and professional pride come in as further stimulants. The local pride which encourages the local fair expands, and the State or inter-State fair is the result.

North Carolina has her State fair, in which we all as citizens take more or less interest, few of us as much as we should. There are a number of district and county fairs, some of them looked after with interest, others not so. All should be. Some have grown from insignificant beginning to proportions of considerable magnitude. Others have died, either because they were not properly appreciated or because they were not located in places where they could live. They lacked a country that could contribute products, and transportation that made them easy of access to adjoining districts. Both of these are necessary conditions to suc cess, and back of these the enterprise on the part of the people where these fairs are located to offer such incentives in the way of premiums as will induce people who are not actuated simply by the desire to compete for excellence to enter their exhibitable articles for the test of merit.

There is no place in North Carolina and few, if any, in the South, better located for a successful industrial fair than Charlotte. Situated as she is in the midst of a splendid agricultural, mining and manufacturing district, with many manufacturing establishments in operation and others springing up here and in adjoining towns, she has resources to draw from for a magnificent exhibit. But to speed this good work and make the fair here an established institution, and one in which we may all take pride. garded here as an outrage. our people should take a personal interest in it, and contribute liberally to make the premium list for the next fair an attractive and liberal one, in addition to that already offered by the Fair Association.

good fellow and has many friends among the young Democrats of the city. The boy is wild at times, and his father recently concluded that his dissipation was the result of the malign influence extended by his Democratic friends. So this after noon, the Senator, hearing that Butexpositions are held by the thinking, ler was the worse for liquor, and had progressive people not only of our been seen in company with two young men of this city, provided himself with a horsewhip and went effect they have had in stimulating in search of his son and his son's productive industries throughout the tempters as he deemed them. He world it would be impossible to tell, was accompanied by Capt. Asa Rogers, his boon friend.

The Senator was not long in finding the objects of his search. The club rooms of the Petersburg club are on Tabb street, in the central quarter of the city. Standing opposite to the club house were Butler Mahone, and Messrs. Alex. Donnan, Jr., and Thos. Hunter. The time was six o'clock, the street was almost desert ed, and the young men were standing in a group chatting when the Senator suddenly strode into their presence with anger in his eyes. The Senator presents a venerable appearance, it is true, and Mr. Donnan, who is a very young man, thoroughly appreciated this fact; but Mr. Donnan did not act without a further plea in his own behalf. He turned to Butler Mahone and said: Butler, your father says I am leading you off. Does he speak the Then Mr. Donnan, who could no longer stand the denunciation produced a pen knife, advanced upon the Senator, caught him by his long flowing beard and thrusting the knife in his face and defied him to utter another word of abuse or to move his horsewhip. The Senator made a movement as if to renew the assault. In another moment he would have been stabbed. The knife was almost at his throat when Capt. Asa Rodgers rushed between the two combatants and prevented what might have been a fatal affair as both men were in a great passion.
