

THRILLING ELEVATOR STORIES

The elevator man of the Washington monument recently told the following stories: "One day when I was coming down an empty barrel fell from the top landing. I heard the cry from above, and knew that something was coming. I directed my passengers to crowd into the middle, where the elevator was most protected from above, and when the barrel struck the top nobody said a word. There were several ladies aboard, but they didn't seem a bit frightened. At another time, when the elevator was at the top and the men were unloading a stone, a crowbar was twisted from the hands of the man who was using it and dropped down the well. We gave the signal and when the bar reached bottom there was nobody there to catch it. It went down like a shot, and a plummet could not have swung straighter. It went clear through the platform at the base, and made a hole about six inches deep in the asphalt at the foundation.

"Once an iron sleeve weighing seventy or eighty pounds fell while the elevator was at the top. The cry of warning cleared out those at the bottom of the well, and it struck on a board upon which some passengers had been standing only a few moments before. Only two men were hurt during the entire time that the monument was being built. In going down a step-ladder in the dark at the landing, near the top, one of the workmen missed his footing and fell to the landing, only a few feet, breaking his arm. It was a curious accident, for the man was perfectly familiar with all the surroundings. At another time the hand-railing at one of the landings gave away with a man who was standing upon it, and he fell right away, and landed on the platform, the result being only a sprain. And he gave down the well death would have been certain, for he was at a height of 200 feet.

"I don't believe there was ever a structure built calling for such dangerous work with such an uninteresting chapter of accidents. Everybody connected with the work knew just how things were being done and what care was being taken by those in charge, and that if orders were obeyed everything would be all right. I have run the elevator when the key stone was suspended directly over me. Had it fallen it would have been the end of me and the monument, too. I had no fear, however, for I knew it couldn't fall; there were too many safeguards, and the men were careful.

A Grain Ranch in California

A grain ranch in California was visited by a correspondent, and described as a sample of the farms of the region. The house, standing under broad nut trees, was plain, but comfortable in that climate, though it would be thought rough and rustic in a New England farm. The orchard has a brussels carpet, piano, marble-top furniture and pictures; the family room and guest chamber have heavy, good carpets and old-fashioned mahogany, dating years ahead of any art period. The family is well, taking three newspapers and a magazine for the children. The wife has her silk gowns and gold watch, her gilt china and solid silver-ware; but the ranch is seven miles from any village, and she has not been of the place for five years or had a visitor in that time."

The Queen's Glorified Footmen

The body servants of the queen in Sweden are called lopare or state attendants, and they wait solely on the queen and her daughter. These glorified footmen wear a very quaint uniform, consisting of a tunic, petticoat and breeches edged with gold lace. But the most surprising part of their attire is a wonderful head-dress, consisting of a kind of embroidered skull-cap, from which rises three ostrich feathers, none of which are less than three feet high.

How Fashions are Determined

A New York merchant gives some curious instances how fashions are primarily determined by society women's jealousy of those beneath them. Thus they wear ulsters for awhile, till the shop-girls adopted them and looked much prettier in them than the society girls, being usually handsomer and better shaped. So with bonneted hair. The former wore it till they were outshone by the sales-girls, and now they comb their hair straight back.

Method of Bleaching Bones

A simple and effective method of bleaching bones to give them the appearance of ivory has been discovered. After digesting the bones with ether or benzine to remove the fat, they are thoroughly dried and immersed in a solution of phosphoric acid in water containing 1 per cent of phosphoric anhydride. In a few hours they are removed from the solution, washed in water, and dried.

A Natural Church

In Swain county, North Carolina, is a church of nature's own workmanship. It is called "the natural rock house." It stands on the Nantabala river, and resembles the ruins of an ancient mansion. The long, arched pillars give it a very majestic appearance. It has five rooms, the largest of which holds about 800 persons, and is used for a church. The dedicatory sermon was preached last month.

Disappated Honey Bees

A curious circumstance is reported from Virginia. A lady had twelve stands of bees which were very valuable until a distillery was started in the neighborhood. Since then the bees fly over there and get very drunk. They are now eating up what honey they have on hand, and refuse to make any more.

The Desert Made Fertile

Hundreds of acres of sandy desert near San Francisco have been made fertile by the introduction of beach grass. In other places where a few years ago, there was nothing but sand dunes, there are now thousands of grape and pine trees.

Resignation of the Mussulman

Strange, weird music floats around it comes from the coffee-houses in the garden. Let us draw aside the heavy curtain which answers for a door; let us have a peep inside. The small, low-roofed room is filled with grave, sleepy-looking Egyptians, squatting on very low divans in the style of tailors at work, the feet naked, the sandals or babouches lying on the floor. Every man smokes the nargile or the chibouk, and has in front of him a small round table, on which reposes the tiny cup of coffee. No one speaks; if it were not for the light curl of smoke coming out of the silent lips, or the occasional movement of the hand carrying the tiny cup to the mouth you, would suppose yourself among wax figures.

The follower of Mahomet spends the greater part of his life in contemplation; perfect rest is bliss to him. He reminds you of those happy beasts of the ruminating order. He is a fatalist; he believes that man can do nothing for himself, change nothing in his destiny. One night in the outskirts of Cairo I passed by a house in flames. Of course no attempt was made to extinguish the fire. The owner and his family were quietly seated on the ground on the opposite side of the road. I went up to him, offering my assistance, urged him to save at least his household goods. "Why?" he calmly answered, "Allah has decided. He will do it alone; if not, all of my efforts will be of no avail!" Allah had decided on the wrong side, it appears, for the house and every stick in it were burned to ashes.

Digital Tenotomy for Pianists

There is no saying to what extent martyrdom in the cause of art will go. It has just been discovered that nature, when designing the human hand, forgot to make allowances for the invention of the piano-forte, and that, consequently, all who are anxious to excel on that instrument must undergo an operation known as digital tenotomy, or the severance of the tendons which prevent the fingers from being stretched very far apart from one another. Doctors have, naturally enough, expressed their approval of this proceeding, considerably adding that there is certainly some chance of the wound thus inflicted not healing by first intention, and therefore patients should be warned of the risk they undergo previous to the operation. This is, perhaps, not quite so bad as putting out a horse's eyes in order that he may pump up water properly, but it is a step in the same direction, and it is scarcely to be expected that in these days of infant prodigies such a royal road to success will be confined to those who are old enough to fully understand the steps they are taking.
