Alarming Situation at Fulton. New York.

SYRACUSE, Jan. 13.—The ice jam in the Oswego river at Fulton ber comes firmer and larger every hour. as immense quantities of ice are constantly coming down the river. The water has risen more than two feet since last night and is rising several inches per hour. The damage already done cannot be estimated. Fully seventy-five families have been driven from their homes, and others are constantly moving out. These families are poor and as fast as they are rescued are turned over to the poor authorities. All teams that are available are being used in removing Hendricks. and manufactories The grain in the mills is wet. If the water should recede the mills and factories will be were receded and the Senate adfilled with ice, and as many of them had large contracts on hand the damage will be very great. Hundreds of people are out of employment. Prof. Boynton, of this city, was telegraphed for this morning to consult with the authorities also lactories will be were reopened and the Senate adjourned.

Distributing Fuel to Indigent

CHARLESTON, B. C., Jan. 13.—The News and Courier relief bureau today distributed 519 loads of fuel to the indigent families of Charleston, making a total of 679 families who have been supplied with one week's fuel since Tuesday last. The wood was mainly contributed by the railroad authorities and distributed through the News and Courier bureau. Very liberal contributions, both in fuel and money have been made, and much suffering consequent upon the cold spell relieved and prevented.

Gather Early-Soldiers in School. Architecturally the university

Leipsic is by no means imposing. Some of the buildings are very old, having belonged originally to the Pauline convent. Old, quaint frescoes, centuries old, still appear upon the walls of the long, vaulted passage through which one enters the street into the large court around which the buildings are situated. From this court entrance is gained to the many lecture rooms with which the university is provided. One standing in this court and taking a sur-vey of the surrounding buildings will be quite ant to have his attention taken by a row of windows at the south end of the court and far up from the pavement. These windows are furnished with strong iron grates. There is the student's prison. The man who matriculates in a German university is amenable chiefly to the university. Hence the university must have the means of enforcing its laws.

The scene that this large court presents during the intervals between the lectures is often an interesting one. Hundreds of young men (some of them not so young) throng the stairways and pour out upon the rough stone pavement. One is munching a biscuit. He has been up late perhaps, the previous night and did not have time to get his breakfast. Another is lighting a cigar. All have small black portfolios under only serve here in the court to add a dash of color to the dark mass made up of others more soberly attired.

Here and there a soldier with his gay uniform helps to brighten the picture. For under the paternal government of Genesis; notes that present to the eye $1.00.

A letter devoted to the Leipsic university would be worse than incomplete BARREL PICKLES, GRATED PINE APPLE, if nothing were said about the hours except fresh air. One advantage about the lecture hour is that it is forty-five lowed for the students to get into their places and for the professors to get from one room to another. Before the fifteen minutes are over every one is in his place, or, at least, is expected to be there. The late comer, who disturbs WILLIAM DORSHEIMER, the quiet by entering the room a minute after the lecture has begun, is greeted with a shulling of the feet and hisses.

A glance around the room at any of these lectures will reveal the fact that among the 100 or 200 present other lands are represented besides Germany. There are a few Englishmen, more Americans, here and there a Russian or a Swede, and a few Japanese. Not long ago one of these yellow-skinned orientals, who had taken notes of the lecture in German, was seen reading and translating his notes into English for the benefit of an American who had been so unfortunate as net to understand the lecture. And yet the Japanese are barbarians!

And now the portfolios are opened, the note-books spread out upon the desks, the little ink-stands taken out of ness. At the proper second the pro-fessor walks into the room takes his be found crowded with good things from beginplace upon the platform and, without waiting to get his breath, says. "Meine herren." and the lecture is begun. He speaks for a short time perhaps rapidly, then takes his notes and begins to read sentence after sentence slowly, for his audience to copy in their notes. He forgets himself and reads faster than the students can write. Instantly his voice is drowned by a loud shu lling of ters, the ablest correspondents, specially retained the feet, mingled with hisses.
