INTEREST IN THE SENATE DISCUSSION.

Capt. Eads---Brown, the North Carolina Portrait Painter-Personal, &c., &c.

WASHINGTON, March 1 .- A large crowd had assembled to hear the re port of the Democratic minority on the question of removals and appointments. In the number were Miss Cleveland and her friend, Miss Van Vechten. But disappointment fell on all when, on concluding the introduction of bills and resolutions, Mr. Hale moved that the Senate go into executive session, and the motion prevailed. It is understood that another open session will be held later in the afternoon.

There was a dash made on Capt. Eads in the House this morning the first thing after the journal had been read. But the House, after some debate and motions, rejected the resolution of Mr. Beach, of New York, to have enforced the rule excluding parties interested in legislation, who were otherwise by the rules entitled to admission. Mr. Beach declared that within ten days he had seen Capt. Eadston, the floor during the session. This was denied by several gentlemen, some of whom stated that he had been ill in bed for the last twelve days. But Mr. Beach succeeded in his object, which was to assail Eads as a man who was lobbysure through Congress. He charging collusion between the Eads men and the Hennepin men, and the friends of certain other schemes for internal improvement.

Mr. William Garl Brown has painted a speaking portrait of Col. Cowles. He will immediately paint two pors traits of Judge Bennett, one each of Representative Johnston, Mrs. Johnston and their two little girls.

A large number of bills were introduced today, the last bill day having been lost on account of adjournment over for the 22nd. Judge Bennett introduced his measure for the distribution of the surplus in the treasury. Col. Cowles introduced a bill to prevent the destruction of stills and other apparatus used in the manufacture of spirits, and making the same criminal. Mr. Reid introduced a joint resolution for the distribution of special memorials of the Geological Survey. A bill was introduced by O'Hara amending the charter of the Freedmen's Savings and Trust Company. He also introduced three personal bills. Messrs, Johnston and Bennett, bring in more private bills. Only one small bill was introduced by the South Carolina

CHICAGO, March 2.—The McCormick works opened as usual this morning. There were loud crowds of idle men about the works but the presence of the police prevented any outbreaks on their part, even though they had cantemplated one. Five hundred and forty men reported for work, an increase of two hundred over yesterday, and the managers of the works expect the number will be increased to eight hundred tomorrow. The officers think the strike is practically ended. practically ended.

THEIR TRIP TO DIXIE.

WHAT A PARTY OF NEW YORKERS SAW IN THE SOUTH.

They Take a Long Journey Through the District that Produces Cotton and Turpentine, and Come Back with New Ideas,

New York World.

Mr John H. Inman and his guests, Cornelius N Bliss, H. O Armour, J. A. Bostwick, Thomas Rutter, Dr. Henry M. Field, C. N. Basker and Dr. Robert Hall, returned from their Southern tour last week. The excursion was planned by Mr. Inman to afford the gentleman an opportunity for taking a casual survey of the Southern States. The journey was made in a special car, and em-braced all the Southern cities of note, at each of which the excursion-ists were feted and ent-rtained with a cordiality of which they unanimously express their appreciation.

A. World representative called on
Mr. Bliss and questioned him concerning his impressions of the new South. It will be remembered that Mr. Bliss is one of the most prominent of New York's Republican

"I have visited the South frequently before," he said, "both before and since the war, and it gives me great pleasure to speak of the material im-provement I noticed on my trip with Mr. Inman. The people have gone determinedly to work, and the result Mr. Inman. The people have gone determinedly to work, and the result is apparent in the numerous commercial and manufacturing enterprises in prosperous operation. The South, like every other section of the South, like every other section of the section. country, has experienced the effect of the late business depression, but is rapidly improving under the revival in trade. The advance during the past few years has been marked."
"How did you find the social life of the South?" "As it has been, and I suppose always will be, charming. We were treated with the great st hospitality and courtesy wherever we stopped, and had we accepted all the invitations extended us, the trip would have been lengthened indefinitely. I was especially delighted to find all sectional feeling dead."

"You saw nothing to justify the resurrection of the bloody shirt?"
"That is a dead issue. The war is over. My trip has convinced me of that most thoroughly. The people have put all bitter memories behind them and are attriviant. had read an article from a newspaper them, and are striving with energy charging collusion between the Eads and sagacity to accomplish that prosperity for the South her natural advantages so justly entitle her to. Although a Northern man and a staunch Republican, and they knew it, I was never received anywhere with greater or more sincere cor-

> "Is the tide of immigration setting southward to any extent?"
> "I hardly think it time for that yet All of these things requre time; but I have no doubt that as the country continues to develop it will grow in-to a powerful rival of the West, both as an objective point for foreign set-tlers and as a field for investment of Northern capital."

"What do you think of the present agricultural outlook in that section?" "It has never been brighter, in my opinion. Everybody is at work and the best of feeling seems to prevail between the whites and placks. The labor problem seems to have adjusted itself. I understand that the planters experience no difficulty in securing hands. Cotton is, of course, extensively cultivated. Those who have experimented with cereals have found that they can buy such corn and other grains that they require, cheaper from the Northwest than they can raise it, so these are not much cultivated. Rice is being ex-tensively, and, I understand, profitably grown in Louisiana. Experiments have been made with ramie. but with what success I don't know The sugar planters are very much down upon the Morrison bill, and each reduction in the duty on sugar brings them nearer to absolute ruin. The growth of the manufacturing interests in the South has been especially ally wonderful. At one time it was rather too fast, notably in the erection of cotton mills, as the prevailing idea was that the Southern mills, owing to their proximity to the growing plant, would drive the Northern mills out of existence. They now re alize that this advantage is offset by mills out of existence. They now realize that this advantage is offset by other advantages enjoyed by the mills of other sections, and this absorption of the cotton manufacturing industry has been checked. The various southern mills are doing a very good trade. The wealth of the coal and iron fields of Alabama and Tennessee is wonderful and has attracted a great deal of capital. The contiguity of the beds of coal, iron and limestone enables them to manufacture iron at very slight cost. It is, I am told, sent to the neighboring coast towns and shipped to various parts of the country."

"Do you think the improvement is due to the example and capital of Northern men or the efforts of the Southern people themselves?"

"There are of course numbers of Northern men residing in the South and a vast amount of Northern capital invested there, but I think the great strides made are due to the efforts of the Southerners themselves, coupled with the natural advantages coupled with the natural advantage coupled with the natural advantages of the country. They realize that to restore the prosperity of that section they must work for it, and, as I have said, they are working, and I want to emphasize the pleasing fact that nowhere is it more evident that the war is over and all issues growing out of it laid at rest than in the South itself."

"Do you think the South will ever become a basis of supply for the bal-ance of the Union?" "Well, this country is too great to depend to any great extent on any one section, but I have no doubt that the South will eventually occupy an important position among the com-mercial and manufacturing districts of the country."

Dr. Henry M. Field, editor of the New York Evangelist, upon whom devolved the duty of speech-making at the various entertainments tenderat the various entertainments tendered the party, speaks in the most enthusiastic terms of the cordiality with which the Northern visitors were welcomed throughout the journey. He says:

"It is a touching illustration of this fact that the only sound of cannon we heard throughout our trip was st Montgomery. Ala., where, under shadow of the Capitol where Jefferson Davis took the eath of office as President of the Confederacy, was recommended in the confederacy.

stationed a battery firing a salute in honor of Gen, Hancock. While we talked with Gov. O'Neill, an old warhorse, one of Stonewall Jackson's bravest soldiers, the booming of the guns announced that the Northern hero was being laid in his grave. On every hand we saw evidences of inreased prosperity."

Mr. H. O. Armour declined to be drawn into an interview, pleading that as this was his first visit South that as this was his first visit South be could not be expected to know much of the country as the result of a two weeks flying trip. To the re-porter's reiterated request, the beef king laughingly replied: "No, I can't tell you anything that would carry the weight and interest of a commu-nication from some one who knows more of the country and resources. I more of the country and resources. I studied principally the social advant-ages of the section. The people treated us so royally that I would not be able to testify impartially even if I was posted. You'd better, see Mr. Bliss or Dr. Field.

The parties were Catholics, but of full age, and the Registrer issued, them. issued them a license. A Catholic priest refused to marry them, as the parents of the lady, who is an heiress, objected to the union. Mgr. Fabre, Roman Catholic Bishop of Montreal

The case has occupied the attention of the Superior Court here for some days. Counsel for the mother laid down as an indisputable proposition that, as the parties had not abandoned their religion, they were subject to laws to which the State had extended, as a protection, its sanction. Counsel for the husband maintained that, while England had conceeded religious liberty to the Roman Cathlics of Canada, it could not be ined the Protestant church of her right to celebrate the marriages of all Christians, also that the decrees of the counsel of Trent, on which the bishops had based their decisions, the celebrated Guibord case clearly | Which will be delivered in any part of ti (cit. ree showed the absolute nullity of ecclesiastical decrees of that kind. The case was taken under consideration by the court, and the judgment is eagerly looked for to settle the point

A husband and wife sat at a late breakfast. They had been to the opera the night before, and having read the musical man's criticism, proceeded to differ with him, of course. That is, one of them did. Then the husband turned to the first page of the paper, and having scanned it, said: "I see that this fellow Sam Small is drawing big houses at the Chicago Avenue Church. I can't see what there is in him to bring the people out."

"I think," said the wife, "such men do a great deal of good in the community—especially a community like this, People become so accustomed to preachers like Swing, Thomas and Lorrimer that sermons have no effect, I am going to hear Mr Small."

There were sixty seconds of silence, and an old-fashioned smile gathered in the corners of the husband's mouth. "I am going to smoking cigarettes again, my dear. Small smokes 'em, and he says cigarettes will never keep a man out of heaven. But he says that theatres are the very gates of hell, and that progressive euchre is the devil's toasting "Does he?" asked the wife, with the curl of other days on her lips. "Well, I would hate to pin my hopes for salvation on the beel—I mean the coatsleeve—of any man who would make such a ridiculous statement as you say Small made. I don't believe he said that. Where is it? Show it to me."

Sam Small's sermons are not read in that family now.
